"I was just taking Sometimes for a walk," she explained. "I haven't left the cottage not more than ten minutes. I'm that sorry, sir, I'm sure, if you couldn't get in."

"I didn't try. I haven't been to the cottage." Garry made his explanation haltingly. Something in the woman's honest eyes made him feel small and ashamed. "I'm on my way home," he went on hurriedly. "My father's not well. I—" He broke off.

"And Miss Sally?"

Garry looked away from her.

"Everything is going as well as could be expected. Didn't Mr. Sanderson wire to you? He said he would. Everything is going quite as well as can be expected."

"And Mr. Sanderson himself, sir?"

"Oh, all right—quite all right."

Garry's voice was jerky, and he frowned as he thought of the last night, and of Sanderson's drunken noisiness.

There was a little silence, then Mrs. Kiff said anxiously:

"And you'll be going back again—when, sir?"

"I don't know. It depends on my father."

The flush in Mrs. Kiff's honest face deepened as she said bluntly:

"Mr. Nairn was all right this morning, sir. I met him in the village when I went down for some butter."

"Oh!"

They looked at each other silently, then Garry shrugged his shoulders.

"Well, I'll be getting along," he said awkwardly.

Mrs. Kiff let him go a few steps, then she hastily followed.

"If you'll kindly let me know when you'll be going back to London, sir, there's a few eggs and some flowers I should like to send. Flowers from Miss Sally's own garden."

"Yes, yes, all right. I'll let you know."

He quickened his steps to get away from her, and this time she let him go.

"Confound the woman! Confound the woman!" Garry said over and over again to himself. He tried to feel angry, but he felt more like sobbing. He had behaved like a coward, and he knew that Mrs. Kiff vaguely understood and despised him; he had deserted in the face of the enemy, without an attempt to defend either himself or Sally.

"The Guards never retire!"

From some corner of his memory Sanderson's war cry mocked him. He had often been irritated by its reiteration, but this morning there seemed to be something inspiring and noble in the sentiment which he had heard Sanderson use as an empty boast. From a store of Garry's youthful memories came a nursery story which he had been told as a small boy—a story of the Guards at Waterloo, who had faced death to the last man, with never a thought of retreat. How fine he had thought it; how eagerly he had taken in every word; how wistfully he had hoped that another war would come soon, so that he could show the world that the indomitable spirit of the Guards still existed; and now, at the first rumor of trouble, he had put his tail between his legs and run away, scared by a cowardly shot from such a man as Josh Akers!

UNLCE WIGGILY AND THE DUSTING BRUSH

(Copyright, 1928, McClure Syndicate)

"Oh, are you going away, Uncle Wiggily?" asked Nurse Jane Fuzzy Wuzzy one morning as she saw Mr. Longears hopping down the path from his hollow stump bungalow.

"I am going out to look for an adventure," said the rabbit gentleman. "If I don't find one I'll come back. Did you want me to bring you anything from the store?"

"Thank you, no," squeaked Miss Fuzzy Wuzzy. "But your wife is ill today, from having stayed too late at the moving pictures last night and she can't help do the dusting after I finish sweeping. I was wondering if you would mind taking the dusting brush and working a little after you came back from adventuring."

"That will give me great pleasure," said Mr. Longears. "Leave the dusting brush where I can find it and when I come back I'll help make the bungalow neat and tidy."

"I'll leave the dusting brush on the back steps for you," squeaked the muskrat lady housekeeper.

"All right, I'll look for it there," spoke the bunny uncle and then he hopped off down the path whistling a jolly tune.

Now it happened that the Bob Cat was passing along just then. He looked hungrily at Uncle Wiggily over the tops of the bushes but the bad chap was not then brave enough to spring out and try to catch the rabbit when Nurse Jane was near. But the Bob Cat heard what Mr. Longears and Nurse Jane said and to himself the Bob Cat whispered:

"I'll go tell the Fox this is a good chance to get a rabbit dinner. Maybe the Fox will give me a few nibbles for myself."

Off to the den of the Fox hurried the Bob Cat.

"I have just thought of the best trick to catch Uncle Wiggily," said the Bob Cat twitching his silly little stump of a tail.

"Well, tell me," snarled the Fox. "Not that it will be any good," he went on, "and I wouldn't care for it if it was good. None of the tricks that we Bad Chaps play on Uncle Wiggily ever work right."

"This one will," snarled the Bob Cat. "Listen! Nurse Jane is going to leave the dusting brush out on the back steps where Uncle Wiggily can find it to help clean the bungalow when he comes back."

"Well, what do I care?" snarled the Fox.

"Listen!" said the Bob Cat again, like a telephone girl. "Your big tail is just like a dusting brush. Now if you were to go to the hollow stump bungalow and hide the real dusting brush that's on the back steps, and if you were to hide under the steps and stick your tail out, when Uncle Wiggily came along he would think it was a dusting brush."

"Well, what next?" asked the Fox, beginning to think it was a pretty good trick after all. "What next."

"Well, Uncle Wiggily, seeing your big, fluffy tail, will think it is Nurse Jane's dusting brush that she left out for him. He'll pick it up and then you can jump out from under the back steps and pretend to be very mad that a rabbit thought your tail was a dusting brush. You'll pull your tail out of Uncle Wiggily's paws and grab him and then you and I can eat him. How's that?"

"Fine!" barked the Fox. "I think that trick will work."

So he threw away the real dusting brush and then hid himself under the back steps of Uncle Wiggily's bungalow, sticking his tail out so it looked just like a brush. Then the sly Fox waited.

Pretty soon Uncle Wiggily came back, not having found an adventure. He had a friend with him.

"Ah, there's the dusting brush Nurse Jane promised to leave on the steps for me," said the rabbit.

"As soon as he takes hold of my tail I'll snatch it away from him and bite him!" thought the Fox hidden under the steps.

But instead of picking up the Fox tail dusting brush himself, Uncle Wiggily asked his friend to do it for him. And the friend with Uncle Wiggily was Mr. Whitewash, the Polar Bear. And when the Polar Bear took tight hold of the tail of the Fox in his big paws that Fox couldn't get away. He couldn't pull loose as he could have done from Uncle Wiggily's small paws.

"Oh, wow! Oh dear me! Let go of my tail!" howled the Fox scrambling out from beneath the steps. "That isn't a dusting brush! It's my tail! Oh, wow! Let go! Zoopie!"

"Ha! Ha!" laughed Uncle Wiggily as the Bear threw the Fox over the top of a tree by his tail, "Another trick gone wrong!" And so it was.

XXXVI—RETREAT

Sanderson went to a post office and wired to Mrs. Kiff that all was as well as could be expected. Then he wandered along to the club and ordered a meal. He did not go back to his rooms till late in the evening, and when he did he found a letter from Garry Nairn lying on the mat.

"I've been sent for to go home—the guv'nor's ill. Will you tell Sally and explain? I will write as soon as I can."

Sanderson's face was inscrutable as he read the scribbled lines, and he stood for some moments staring down at them before he shut the door behind him and turned on the light in his sitting-room.

"'I've been sent for to go home—the guv'nor's ill—'"

The words went through and through his brain mechanically, and suddenly he spoke aloud into the silence.

"That's a damned lie!" said Philip Sanderson.

But there had been a shade of truth in the note which Garry Nairn left behind for Sanderson before he hurriedly packing his bag and went back to Ash Hill.

He had received a letter from his father in which the old man complained of not feeling well, a thing which was most unusual for the cheery vicar.

"I'm getting old, my boy"—so, in a moment of depression, he wrote to his son—"and I seem to miss you very much. I miss that little girl from the cottage, too, and hope she is progressing favorably. I shall be glad to hear from you or to see you if you can run down for a day."

Garry felt like a drowning man to whom a lifeline has unexpectedly been flung. It would give him a few hours' breathing space, at all events, if he seized this excuse to get away from London and from Sally. He was conscious of nothing but overwhelming relief as he scribbled his note to Sanderson and packed his bag. It was only when he was walking up from the little country station that a realization of his own selfishness came back to him.

Philip Sanderson would never have done such a thing, he knew, and hated to know it. Sanderson would have set his grim jaws more grimly still, and gone through with the whole business unflinchingly.

Garry remembered how he had stood by Poppy Sladen till she died. Sally had told him all about it with a sort of angry pride in Philip's goodness.

"He's a marvel, that man!" Her blunt words came back to Garry as he walked slowly up the country road along which he had so many times pushed Sally in her long chair. "He never liked Poppy, and she was nothing to him, and yet he stayed with her all night till she died. Would you have done it?" she had demanded, suddenly turning her blue eyes upon him.

Garry had answered evasively that he did not know, that it would have all depended, but in his heart he knew that he would not have been so nobly unselfish.

With all his faults, there was a quality in Philip Sanderson which many a better-living man would have envied him—a certain obstinacy that in surprising circumstances drew him steadfastly along the path which he knew to be the right one.

Garry Nairn had lived a clean life. In his mind there was a definite barrier between the type of woman to whom his mother had belonged and the type of women to whom Poppy Sladen had belonged—the type to which he now feared Sally also belonged. He had never judged any woman; some perhaps he had pitied, but Josh Akers' brutal condemnation of Sally had filled him with something that was combined anger and jealousy and a sort of rage against life which he could not control.

He believed what Akers had said, and yet he did not believe it; he liked Sanderson, and yet he loathed him; his heart and brain were two pendulums swinging backwards and forwards, never resting or letting him rest.

At the bend of the road which led up to Sally's cottage he stopped. From where he stood he could see the hedge surrounding her garden, and a grey streak of smoke rising slowly in the summer air from one of the chimneys. It all seemed so peaceful and fresh after the noise and bustle of London. He could not believe that if he walked on and opened the garden gate he would not see Sally lying there in her chair, smiling a welcome; it filled him with fresh horror to remember that she was somewhere in a darkened room in a nursing home, suffering he knew not what tortures.

In almost boyish panic he turned away, and as he did so something snuffled gently at his feet, and, looking down, he saw Sometimes standing there gazing up at him with hopeful recognition, waving his whip-like tail from side to side.

"Hallo, old boy!"

Garry stooped to pat the dog's head, and the next moment Mrs. Kiff's amazed voice greeted him.

"Well, I never now! I was just that minute thinking about you all, sir, and here you are, dropped from the skies, so to speak!"

She came up to him, breathless and

LYRICS OF LIFE

LIFE'S RICHES

To some this life is gold,
To some is fame and praise,
And yet I never knew the old
To talk of happy days
And fame or fortune to recall,
To speak of gold or praise at all.

To some this life is play,
To some is song and wine,
And yet I never knew the gray
To talk of days divine
And speak of pleasure as the thing
Most worthy of remembering.

To some this life is gold,
But golden with its love,
And that is what I found the old
Were always speaking of
So fame I question, fortune doubt,
Since love was all they spoke about.

RADIO KEEPS MILK SWEET.

The newest use found for radio is to keep milk from souring. Prof. Karl Seidel, of the University of Vienna, Austria, claims to have discovered a method by which milk, treated by radio waves of short length, can be kept sweet for from three to four weeks. Health authorities in Germany are testing the process which, says Popular Science Monthly, involves passing an intense beam of short waves through the liquid, instantly killing germs which cause the milk to spoil.

NATIONAL GALLERY HAS NEW DIRECTOR

August Moore Daniel to Succeed Charles John Holmes.

LONDON, Sept. 26 (By the Canadian Press).—Augustus Moore Daniel is to succeed Sir Charles John Holmes as Director of the National Gallery, when Sir Charles retires in November.

Among artists and scholars Mr. Daniel has a great reputation for judgment and scholarship. He is well known in Scarborough where he has resided for many years. He was educated at Hepton and at Trinity College, Cambridge, where he took honors in science, and he holds the degrees of M.A. and M.B. His father was a medical man, and he himself qualified at London hospital, but has never practised.

Mr. Daniel has taken great interest in Greek antiquities, and has travelled extensively in Greece. A member of the Contemporary Art Society for many years, he possesses a valuable collection of pictures by modern artists, a good many of which were formerly in much request at exhibitions.

Among Mr. Daniel's Scarborough activities have been those of Chief Magistrate of the Borough in 1912-13, resident of the Scarborough School of Art, and he has been a member of the Board of Management of the Scarborough Hospital. He was the founder of the Scarborough Council of Social Welfare, which succeeded the Old Charity Organization Society and the Local Guild of Help, with both of which he was associated. He is a Justice of the Peace for the North Riding, and for the Borough of Scarborough.

Mr. Daniel has also had close and valuable experience in the domain of local government and education and contributed useful work in the organization and control of hospitals and other institutions during the war. His appointment by the Prime Minister three years ago to a trusteeship of the National Gallery came at a time when his knowledge and experience proved of service in the matter of the keen competition put up by United States collectors of great wealth and enterprise.

Yankees Retain Two-Game Lead Over Athletics

LEADERS WIN IN AMERICAN

New Yorkers Need Three More Victories To Clinch Flag.

RUTH FORCED TO RETIRE.

NEW YORK, Sept. 26.—(Canadian Press.)— The Yankees marched another long mile toward the 1928 pennant by routing the Cleveland Indians by 10 to 1 in the rubber game of the Cleveland series yesterday. Even though the Athletics defeated the Browns by 9 to 5 in St. Louis, the Yankees held their lead of two games and moved into a position where they can clinch the flag with three more victories.

Old Tom Zachary, the Washington orphan, won his third victory for the champions, holding the Redskins at bay all afternoon. He gave up only eight hits and was in small danger of being scored upon at any time until Joe Sewell and Hodapp bunched doubles in the eighth after Tom had a lead of ten runs.

The Yankees pounded George Grant from the mound under a six-run barrage in the first inning and scored from time to time on Billy Bayne, who succeeded him.

Babe Ruth was forced to retire from the game in the sixth when his injured left knee began to trouble him again. Durst took Ruth's place in right field. Tony Lazzari also gave way to his understudy, Leo Durocher, a little later. The third Yankee cripple, Mark Koenig, played through the game.

The Indians added three double plays to their record, which again is rivalling that of the Cincinnati Reds, dual league leaders.

The Yankee scoring was closed out in the eighth with a three run assault capped by Lou Gehrig's twenty-fifth home run of the season with one man on base.

The Athletics defeated the Browns at St. Louis, 9 to 5. The Macks batted both Ogden and Hoffman out of the box. Earnshaw was replaced by Walberg when he was hit freely during the first two innings. Dykes, Philadelphia shortstop, got five straight hits, driving in four of Philadelphia's runs.

Bill Killefer, who was coaching at third base for the Browns, was ordered off the field when he protested a decision of Umpire Guthrie.

The Washington Senators took a firmer hold on fourth place in the American League when they defeated the White Sox at Chicago, 3 to 0, in the final game of the season between the two clubs. The Senators' victory gave them two of the three games of the current series.

Extra base hits proved the undoing of "Red" Faber, who started for the Sox, and his successor, young Ed Walsh. In the third Goslin hit a home run and Judge followed with a single, scoring on Bluege's double.

WIN FROM CAMPBELLFORD

Deloro Team Score 2-1 Victory Over Homesters On Saturday.

TIGHT CONTEST.

MARMORA, Sept. 26 ((Examiner Correspondence)—Deloro soccer team journeyed to Campbellford on Saturday afternoon to play the return exhibition game with the Yellow and Blacks. For the visitors Hart and Rundle replaced Kelly and Melville, while Balog's place in goal was taken by Regan. The home team was stronger than it was a week previous and gave the opposition a stiffer fight. In the first few minutes of play W. Brown opened the scoring with a shot from close in. Boulton equalized shortly before half time with a well-earned goal.

In the second half, the visitors had most of the play, but were unsuccessful with a goodly number of shots.

Eventually E. Brown scored the winning goal with an upward glancing shot which gave the home custodian no chance.

Deloro were represented by the following team:

Regan, goal; Murray and Nicholson, backs; Savage, Sanderson and Hart, halves;; Brooks, E. Brown, W. Brown, Rundle and Cousins, forwards.

RUGBY SCHEDULES TO START OCTOBER SIXTH

VIEWS ON SPORT

A full turnout of rugby players is asked for to-night at 5.30 in Confederation Square.

The gridiron form of outdoor sport has taken great strides towards further development in the west with the formation of an Interprovincial Union in Manitoba and Saskatchewan similar to the Interprovincial Union in the east. Two teams are entered from each province, while the junior and intermediate teams will be fostered by the senior clubs.

* * * *

Many promising candidates for players' positions have reported for training with the Interprovincial, Intercollegiate, and Ontario Unions. With this wealth of new material the three unions open their schedules on the same date, October 6. University of Toronto meets Queen's at Kingston in college circuit, Toronto and Ottawa each have home games in the Interprovincial, and the University of Toronto "Orphons" play at Kitchener.

* * * *

Frenchy Belanger will be in the pink of condition when he enters the ring at Toronto on October 6 to face Marty Gold in a ten-round match. The little French-Canadian is determined to get back in the running, and while the Philadelphian is known as a stiff puncher, Belanger can be counted upon to put up a neat battle.

* * * *

The Canadian professional hockey league has broadened out to nine teams this season, and with this the number of home games for each club will be increased from 21 to 24. Each team will play a total of 48 games throughout the season, as compared with 42 last year.

* * * *

While playing to a 5-all deadlock on Monday, the Winnipeg Wellingtons fought back to an even level with Ottawa by defeating them yesterday 4-2 in the third game for the Mann Cup and the Dominion lacrosse championship. Each team has now scored a victory in the titular series; the deciding game will be played to-day.

* * * *

With the plunk of the pigskin in the air and the perky autumn air upon us, thoughts of hockey fans turn toward the national game. The latest to mull over comes from N.H.L. headquarters, where several interesting announcements have been made. One of these has to do with a new system adopted for play-off series. The leaders of each division, at the conclusion of the regular schedule, will now battle in a five-game series, the winners to play in the Stanley Cup finals against a team which survives an elimination series between the second and third teams of both sections of the league. The clubs finishing second will play home-and-home games, total goals to count, and the third teams will do the same, the winners then meeting for the right to enter the finals against the survivors of the first team play-offs. Player deals are brewing, also, and one rumor is to the effect that the Canadiens will trade Goalkeeper Hainsworth to the Ranegrs for Lorne Chabot.—Hamilton Spectator.

SHAKE-UP PLANNED FOR TORONTO CLUB

Manager O'Hara May Place Entirely New Team in Field Next Season.

TORONTO, Sept. 26.—From every angle the International League has enjoyed the best season in many years, according to President J. C. Toole, all the clubs with the exception probably of Jersey City making ends meet, which is something new in the history of the veteran loop. The inclusion of Montreal strengthened the organization both from a playing and financial standpoint. All three clubs which figured in the final rush for the flag, won by Rochester by one point over Buffalo, profited hugely.

The attendance at the crucial contests was extremely good, although the crowd estimates at the Sunday games at Buffalo were somewhat exaggerated, being but little greater than at the final Saturday doubleheader with the Bisons here when between sixteen and seventeen thousand enthusiasts piled into the Fleet street park.

It was claimed that twenty-three thousand saw the Bisons beat the Leafs last Sunday, but the Toronto club was paid off for little more than sixteen thousand.

Bisons' Big Year.

The Bisons' upward climb began with the change of ownership and synchronized with Sam Robertson's disappearance from the scene in an official capacity. Had the shift been made sooner there is little doubt but that the Bisons would have won the pennant. Robertson was a drag upon the club, hampering Clymer's efforts to bolster up the club in the early stages of the race.

The Bisons turned a poor start into a fine finish, while the Leafs did the opposite.

Rochester was always in the neighborhood, but like the Toronto club, fell into a slump through accidents that almost proved fatal. The Red Wings, however, made a noble recovery, but the Leafs went from bad to worse.

Some of the close contests dropped by the Leafs might have been turned into victories had Eddie Phillips been on the job. His inability to get into action undoubtedly had much to do with the Leafs' lack of success. Good catching means a great deal.

Skeeters Leafs' Menace.

With the exception of Jersey City every club in the league at one time or other figured in the championship hunt, but the Skeeters, although they were never in the running, made it interesting for the contenders, particularly Toronto. It was Frank Gilhooley's outfit that virtually ruined the Leafs' chances, when they were going great guns in the spring. Bill O'Hara's crew never seemed to be the same again. The five straight defeats incurred at the hands of the Skeeters apparently took all the gimp out of the club.

Wholesale Shake-up.

Manager O'Hara plans a wholesale shake-up in the personnel of his team. The indications are that but few of the 1928 athletes will be back on the job next spring. Some of the pitchers slated to go are Doyle, Fisher, Songer and probably Satterfield. Of the infield, Alexander in all probability will be sold. Billy Webb is not likely to return. He just seemed unable to get going the past season. It was the first time in his career that he failed to bat .300 or better. Sheedy and Shinners in the outfield will be kept. Rabbitt may return, but it is contingent on his health. He is anything but a well man. Easterling belongs to Detroit. Billings and Phillips are also the property of the Tigers and have been recalled. The Toronto club has many recruits under contract who will get tryouts next spring.

VETERANS READY FOR KINGSTON TRIP

Thirty-two Local ex-Members of 21st Battalion Plan To Attend Re-union.

TEAMS ARE IN HARD TRAINING

Interprovincial Union Is Formed in Manitoba and Saskatchewan.

MANY PROSPECTS.

TORONTO, Sept. 26. — Girding themselves for the Fall campaign, gridiron giants whenever rugby football is played in the Dominion have commenced drilling in punting, tackling and other essentials of the sport in preparation for exhibition games which precede the actual schedule openings.

The game has a new development this year in the formation of an interprovincial football union in Manitoba and Saskatchewan, similar to the interprovincial union of the East. Regina and Moose Jaw are the Saskatchewan representatives with two Winnipeg teams, Tigers and St. John's carrying Manitoba colors. Junior and Intermediate teams will be fostered by the senior clubs.

The code of the east has made rapid progress, too, at the Pacific coast since its adoption there and it is believed it will evtntually reach the Atlantic where English Rugby is still played in preference to Canadian football.

Not in many years have so many promising youngsters reported for training with teams in the Interprovincial. Intercollegiate and Ontario unions, the senior leagues in the east. With wealth of new material to speed up aggregations which find their greatest strength in their veterans, a season of fast, hard, hitting struggles is anticipated.

The three unions open their schedules on the same date, October 6. In the college circuit, University of Toronto meet Queen's University at Kingston. Toronto and Ottawa are the home teams in the Interprovincial on opening day, Hamilton playing Argos and Montreal A.A.A. meeting the Senators.

University of Toronto "Orphons" will inaugurate Ontario Union football at Kitchener, which, with Sarnia, joined the league this year. Camp Borden play Hamilton Tigers in the other O.R.F.U. fixture on October 6.

Although this year's campaign will witness the appearance of many new faces in senior ranks, few of the stars of last year's teams will be missing. The most notable exception is Harry ("Red") Batstone, peer of backfield men, who is debarred from playing for Queen's University by the four-year rule in the Intercollegiate Union.

"Pep" Leadley, who partnered with Batstone on Queen's backfield and won three Dominion championships consecutively for the Tricolor, has announced that he will not don his moleskins again, but Hamilton Tigers for whom he played part of last season's schedule, expect him to yield to the lure of the game and lead them to another Interprovincial championship.

As in other years, there is no outstanding favorite at this time to ship. Balmy Beach, which swept through the Ontario Union schedule last year and sprang a sensational upset in the Dominion final by defeating Hamilton Tigers, have lost their three brightest stars, "Red" Moore, "Scotty" Cawkell and "Yip" Foster and cannot be favored more than several other teams. Moore will play with Montreal in the Interprovincial Union and Cawkell and Foster turned professional to play hockey in the Canadian-American League last year.

LOSE OUT ON LAST LAP

Toronto Leafs were nosed out in the last lap of the International Baseball League pennant race, Rochester winning the pennant by one point with Buffalo second.

CARDINALS WIN IN FIFTEENTH

Defeat Robins By 4-3 Score For Their Third Straight Triumph.

GIANTS WIN 4-3.

NEW YORK, Sept. 26 (Canadian Press).—The Cardinals carried a stubborn fight through to a successful conclusion in fifteen tense innings at Brooklyn yesterday, defeating Brooklyn by 4 to 3 for their third straight triumph. By their victory the Red Birds escaped falling into a tie for the lead with the Giants, who nosed out Cincinnati by 4 to 3.

Wee Willie Sherdel went the route for McKechnie's men and kept Brooklyn's eleven hits so scattered that he seldom was in danger. The Cardinals got only ten safeties off Douglas McWeeny and Watson Clark, but Del Bissonnette started Clark to his downfall in the fifteenth by fumbling Rabbit Maranville's grounder with one gone.

Sherdel then sacrificed, and Douthit delivered the winning hit, a Texas League double, which fell at Max Carey's feet just a few inches from his outstretched glove.

Sherdel would have won in the regulation distance but for Hafey's error in the eighth. This permitted Carey to take an extra base on a single and put him in a position to score the tying run on Bissonnette's one-bagger.

The Cardinals got all of their runs except the winning marker by bunching hits on McWeeny in the third. The Robins launched a sudden attack for a pair in the fifth, moved into a tie in the eighth as related, and then plunged into a long extra-inning fight with the leaders.

A spirited rally for two runs in the ninth, marked by Cincinnati's protest that fans interfered with Joe Stripp's fielding of a batted ball, enabled the Giants to nose out the Reds by a score of 4 to 3 in the final game of the series here yesterday.

Going into the ninth trailing by 3 to 2, John McGraw sent O'Farrell to bat in Scott's place, and Bob responded by coaxing out the only pass Eppa Rixey gave the home forces. O'Doul replaced O'Farrell as a runner, only to be forced by Welsh, but the former Boston Brave dashed home with the tying run on Andy Reese's triple to right.

Stripp did not immediately field the drive, but tried instead to direct the attention of the umpires to spectators in the right field sector. He contended that a fan deflected the ball, preventing him from catching it, but the protest, joined in by several other Cincinnati players, availed nothing.

The Red infield then moved in on the grass to try to cut off Reese at the plate, but Mann drove a single past Dressen, scoring Reese with the winning run.

It was Andy Cohen day at the Polo Grounds, and the Giant infielder received a cheque for $1,500 from the Knights of Pythias. Mayor Walker was to have made the presentation but failed to arrive at the park until the second inning.

The Philadelphia National's latest losing streak, which had reached twelve in a row, was broken yesterday when the Chicago Cubs fell before the tail enders, 5 to 2.

Home runs over the right field wall of the Philadelphia park by Chuck Klein in the second and Cy Williams in the seventh assured victory.

Williams' came with Hurst on first.

Both Sheriff Blake and Claude Willoughby were hit hard but the Phillie pitcher was stronger in the pinches, and did not issue a pass.

Pittsburgh defeated Boston, 13 to 8, in a loosely-played game on the Boston field yesterday. The visitors scored eight runs in the first three innings off Greenfield and off Edwards, who relieved him.

Hemsley and Brame, the Pirates' battery, made seven of the seventeen hits which rained off the visitors' bats.

GREATREX LOSES SUIT

DETROIT, Mich, Sept. 26.—(Canadian Press).—Suit of William C. Greatrex, Detroit, for $200,000 damages against the Evangelical Deaconess Hospital for the loss of his infant son through alleged interchange of babies five years ago, was thrown out of court yesterday by Circuit Judge Dewitt Merriam.

Court sustained motion by defense counsel to dismiss suit on grounds that hospital was charitable institution and was not liable for acts of its agents or servants.

BUTTER AND EGGS.

TORONTO, Sept. 26.—With the exception of the quotations on eggs, prices on the Toronto wholesale produce market continue steady at the previous listed quotations. Any trend to the market so far as butter, eggs or cheese is concerned appears now to be toward firming values. Toronto wholesale houses are now paying the following prices for eggs, delivered Toronto, ungraded, cases returned: Fresh extras, 42 to 43c; fresh firsts, 39 to 40c; seconds, 29 to 30c. In the selling division, Toronto wholesale dealers are offering to the retail dealers, eggs, fresh firsts at 44 to 45c, which is an advance of one cent per dozen. It will be noted, also, that the quotations paid to country shippers of eggs also have advanced one cent per dozen in some grades.

MONTREAL GRAIN AND PRODUCE

MONTREAL, Que., Sept. 26. — (Canadian Press).—The export trade ingrain here was again of a very limited character and the market was generally quiet. A feature of the domestic market was the good inquiry for feed wheat and low grade barley, but as the offerings were light on spot little business was done. Spot prices for wheat were weaker at a decline of 2c per bushel with car lots of Manitoba No. 5 wheat selling at $1.11; No. 6 wheat at $1.02, feed wheat at 99c; while corn was steady with sales of odd cars of Argentine at $1.04 to $1.06; American corn at $1.03; and Manitoba feed barley changed hands at 77c.

There was no actual change in the condition of the market for spring wheat flour, prices being fairly steady with a fair amount of business passing. A steady trade was reported in winter wheat flour and prices showed no further change.

The trade in millfeed was active and the undertone was very firm with indications that prices may possibly go still higher in the near future without supplies increase.

The movement of standard grades of rolled oats continues to increase and prices rule firm.

Owing to the righ prices ruling in the country for baled hay of late a stronger feeling privailed in the local market and values were marked up another 50c to $1 per ton.

There continues to be a steady demand from dealers for strictly fresh eggs of which the offerings were not large and prices ruled firm with sales of Ontario extras at 44c to 45c per dozen, firsts at 40c to 41c per dozen, and seconds at 32c to 33c per dozen, F.O.B. shipping points, and Vancouver shippers are now asking 45c per dozen for extras F. O.B., but no sales were made. The trade in a jobbing way was fairly active. The receipts were 1,528 cases.

The trade in imported beans was quiet owing to the fact that buyers were not disposed to operate to any extent at present on account of the high prices ruling and the prospects of new crop Canadian beans coming on the market in the near future. The tone of the market was firm with small quantities of imported choice white hand-picked beans selling at $4.30 to $4.40 per bushel, ex-store, and car lots to arrive were quoted at $4 per bushel, ex-track.

A feature of the local butter trade was the weaker feeling that developed and prices scored a further decline which was attributed entirely to the continued limited demand from all sources for supplies and the fact that holders in some cases seemed to be more anxious to liquidate some of their stock. The receipts were 54 packages.

Owing to the continued indifferent attitude of foreign buyers an easier feeling prevailed in the local cheese market and prices declined 1-8c per pound. At this reduction there was some demand from spot buyers. The receipts were 8,532 boxes.

CHICAGO GRAIN

CHICAGO, Sept. 26.—(Canadian Press).—Huge primary receipts both in Canada and the United States with Argentina offerings to sell at bargain prices pulled wheat values here straight downward yesterday. Temporary at least export demand for wheat from North America was but little better than zero and United States exports of wheat and flour for July and August were officially reported at 21,652,000 bushels, against 49,079,00 bushels the corresponding months last year.

Wheat closed unsettled, 1½ to 1¾c net lower, with corn varying from ¼c decline to 1c advance; oats ¼c to ⅝c off, and provisions unchanged to a setback of 57 cents.

Right at the outset yesterday wheat trader were confronted with an unlooked-for drop in Liverpool quotations and with word that Argentine wheat was obtainable cheaper abroad than wheat from either Canada or the United States. Reports were also at hand that the crop outlook south of the equator had been helped by welcome rains in Argentine and likewise by showers over Australia. On top of these advices were estimates that Canadian rural deliveries of wheat totalled 17,000,000 bushels for two days. Meanwhile, primary arrivals in the United States yesterday were 3,581,000 bushels, compared with 2,992,000 bushels a week ago.

Selling from the northwest in particular broadened out in the wheat pit as the day progressed. Rallies were negligible. Apparently the pressure came chiefly from hedging sales made against the immense volume of new wheat moving to market north and south alike of the Canadian line. About the only support for market came from resting orders to purchase at declines. But the aggregate of such orders proved to be limited and the close of trading left prices at almost the day's bottom level.

Corn owed its relative firmness largely to prospects of killing frosts last night well in advance of the average date for much of the corn belt. Month end evening-up of accounts in the September delivery of corn was also a strengthening factor. Oats declined as a result of scattered selling.

Provisions tilted downward owing to sympathy with a drop in the value of hogs.

AT THE REGENT.

CELEBRATED STAR PROVES SELF MARVELOUS ACTOR IN "THE PATENT LEATHER KID."

Richard Barthelmess gave the most amazing performance of his career in "The Patent Leather Kid," First National's great story of the tank corps, now playing at the Regent Theatre, following its sensational Broadway run.

Only an artist of consummate skill could sympathetically portray the East Side boxer who is drafted into the war, enters it hating his country because of this, and who proves a real hero when he is once under fire.

In choosing an actor to play The Kid it was necessary for First National to find a man who was an athlete and could box, and at the same time one who was a finished actor, capable of creating sympathy for a character who during the greater part of the picture appears almost a cad and a coward.

Barthelmess was a happy selection for the role, for he again demonstrates that he is one of the great actors of the screen, and his portrayal of The Kid is one of the finest bits of screen acting that has ever been recorded on celluloid.

In "The Patent Leather Kid" this talented youth even excels his marvelous work in the part, for the role of the Kid is the best he has ever had.

Rupert Hughes wrote "The Patent Leather Kid" soon after the war. The screen adaptation was by Adele Rogers St. John, and the picture is an Alfred Santell production, under the production management of Al Rockett.

Pretty Molly O'Day plays opposite Barthelmess, and as the result of her work in this picture wins a personal triumph. She is easily the screen find of the year. A large and excellent company is seen in support. This is a picture that you must see at once!

On account of the numbers of patrons turned away last night and Monday, there will be two shows to-night at 7 and 9 o'clock. Come early.

AT THE CAPITOL.

LON CHANEY, "THE MAN OF ONE THOUSAND FACES" WILL BE AT THE CAPITOL, THURSDAY, FRIDAY, SATURDAY, IN HIS LATEST HIT "LAUGH CLOWN LAUGH"

The name Lon Chaney, in front of any first class theatre, is enough in itself to result in capacity audiences, as Mr. Chaney, who has been termed "The Man With A Thousand Faces" is the most consistent drawing star in filmdom to-day. Chaney was never known to appear in a poor picture; without exception all his pictures to date have been huge successes. The current offering "Laugh Clown Laugh" is one of his best and has been breaking theatre records for all over America. In this new picture Chaney again excells in his wonderful art of "make-up" Lon plays the part of the clown, and oh what a clown. It is a family picture which will be enjoyed by young and old. "Laugh Clown Laugh" opens at the Capitol on Thursday afternoon where it will be shown twice daily, at 2.30 and 8.00 until Saturday, when there will be three performances, at 2.30-7.00 and 9.00 p.m.

CANADIAN NATIONAL RAILWAYS New Service to Edmonton.

In order to cope with the heavy travel to points in Western Canada, Canadian National Railways have arranged to place their crack train, "The Confederation," on completion of its summer schedule, on the run between Toronto and Edmonton.

The last trip to Vancouver will be on September 26th from Toronto, and the first Edmonton train will leave Toronto on Thursday, September 27th. The through equipment will consist of standard and tourist sleepers, dining cars and compartment-observation library cars, the latter being equipped with radio.

The service will afford every facility for Christmas and New Year's travel in both directions, and this, together with the high standard of Canadian National operation, will enable the train to retain in a full measure the popularity it now enjoys with the travelling public.

Any Canadian National Agent will gladly furnish further details. 3d-73

Amulet Meeting.

Following is a summary covering the meeting held in Montreal, September 25th, covering operations from July 1 to September 22, 1928:

MINING—

During the period under review a total of 1,026 feet of crosscutting and drifting has been done, which practically completes the proposed program for the development of "C" orebody at the 150 foot level. The sinking of the three compartment shaft to the 250 foot level will be under way by the end of the month.

Drifts were run over "C" ore body on the 150 foot level for the purpose of establishing diamond drilling stations from which to more accurately delimit the body. The ore was not expected to extend up to this horizon but at a point in the drift 120 feet west of the crosscut, ore was encountered and continued for 110 feet, 62 feet of which has been sampled and assayed, showing an average content of 7.63 per cent. copper, 20.78 per cent. zinc, $0.57 gold and 11.63 ounces of silver, or a gross value of $52.80 per ton.

The former estimate on this body was 196,540 tons with an average value of $25.35 based on diamond drill cores. The present actual underground work indicates that both the tonnage and average value of this orebody have been conservatively estimated.

A crosscut driven north-west from the shaft on the 150-foot level to a point vertically under "D" ore body uncovered a brecciated zone highly mineralized with chalcopyrite and a small amount of zinc. A section 7 feet in width averaged 5.84 per cent. copper, 6.75 per cent. zinc, $0.40 gold, and 2.13 ounces silver or a gross value of $25.62 per ton. This section of ore was encountered late last week and is of great importance since the original estimate on "D" ore body, based on diamond drilling returns, cut the ore zone off at 55 feet in depth.

It is also to be noted that the grade of ore indicated by diamond drilling was $14.64 against a value of $25.62 per ton in the actual underground work. Drifting is now under way on this ore.

ARTISTS STRIKE; RESENT CHARGE

TWENTY-FIVE MEN OUT.

TORONTO, Ont., Sept. 26 (Canadian Press).— Demanding retraction of a statement branding artists as "fools and temperamental,' 'attributed to George Brigden in an address before the Women's Press Club, the entire staff of artists employed by Mr. Brigden of Brigden's Limited, declared a strike to-day.

The newspaper paragraph which caused the strike read as follows:

"In reply to a question, the speaker (Mr. Brigden) stated that mechanics in the engraving plants earned more money than the artists, because the artists were fools—and temperamental."

Members of the artist staff said to-day: "If we are fools then he should not be keeping us on the staff. If we are underpaid, then we should be paid more. There are twenty-five or more of us out, and we are holding a strike meeting to-morrow morning to decide what we are going to do.

"Some of the men out on strike are members of the Ontario Society of Artists, and we expect that they will take the matter up with their association. Furthermore, Mr. Brigden's brother is the president of the Society."

UNABLE TO PLAY NORTHERN TEAM

Raybestos Club Notifying O.B.A.A. To-night—May Lose Title.

The Raybestos Club decided this afternoon to notify the Secretary of the O.B.A.A. to-night that the club would be unable to play Copper Cliff for the Ontario Intermediate championship. Unless there are unexpected developments in the situation the Ontario championship for which the team has worked so hard this season will go to Copper Cliff by default.

NEW PASTOR IS WELCOMED

David Wren spoke words of welcome on behalf of his church to Mr. and Mrs. McLean.

Rev. William McDonald spoke words of welcome from the Peterborough Presbytery, of which he was elected Chairman at yesterday's session. He also brought greetings and good wishes from Knox Church to Mr. and Mrs. McLean.

Mrs. J. Forbes Allan brought a message of goodwill from the women's organizations of the church, and promising that they would find them loyal and ready to help in all good work.

Mr. Fraser spoke on behalf of the men's organization of the church, speaking strongly on the subject of coming out to church regularly and encouraging Mr. McLean, who had left a big congregation in Toronto to come to St. Andrew's.

E. Humpage favored the audience with a fine solo.

Rev. Mr. McLean was then called on to say a few words.

He thanked the ministers of sister churches for their kind words and the representatives of the church societies who had spoken so kindly. The work of the church to-day is large, but the highest joy comes to an individual who takes up its cross and does some service for man. He said: :"Let us work together, each doing his part the best he can and we shall all receive a blessing."

Rev. Mr. Wren concluded the meeting with prayer.

Refreshments were then served and a social hour spent. Mrs. C. H. Edwards, Mrs. J. McDonald, and Mrs. H. Moir presided at the tea table. Assistants were Mesdames H. Gillespie, A. Wood, Dearborn, Breckenridge, Barns, Banks, Zeihr and Nelson.

Mrs. Ivan Lillico and Mrs. Dickin were convenors of the refreshments and Mrs. Robertson was general convenor.

this department, except to point out that no members could miss 50 per cent. of the meetings, neglect 50 per cent. of the service he should give, and still be a 100 per cent. Rotarian.

Governor Turnbull warned against allowing such activities as boys' camps, etc., to take up the whole attention of the club. Vocational service was the big feature of this year's program, while next year international service was to be stressed.

President Morris expressed the thanks of the club to Governor Turnbull for his visit and his most inspiring address.

At to-day's meeting a letter was read from Rotarian Herb Brown of Porto Rica, who, while holidaying in this district a year ago, was a regular visitor at local club luncheons. As a result of the interest awakened in Rotarian Brown by the summer camp for boys here, he had been successful, he reported, in launching, with the co-operation of the Y.M.C.A., a similar camp in Porto Rica.

LEAGUE ASSEMBLY ADJOURNS SESSION

Ninth General Gathering Winds Up Work This Afternoon.

GENEVA, Sept. 26 (Canadian Press).—The ninth assembly of the League of Nations wound up its work and adjourned shortly after noon to-day.

The last hours of the session were marked by a rather bitter exchange between Count Albert Apponyi of Hungary and the delegates of the Little Entente countries.

Last night Count Apponyi had approved proposals to forward conciliation and arbitration as a method of settling the disputes between Hungary and her neighbors, but he rejected a committee resolution recommending treaties of non-aggression and mutual assistance.

He said that Hungary, in view of her disarmed and defenceless position, could not seriously undertake the obligations which would be incurred under such treaties. He added that theatries of this nature implied moral reconciliation between the contracting countries. In Central Europe, he said, mutual confidence did not exist and progress toward it was slow.

To-day H. P. Commene, of Roumania, and Dr. Steffan Osusky, Czecho-Slovakia, took up Count Apponyi's challenge. They denied that there was any lack of spirit for conciliation on the part of their countries or of Jugo-Slavia, third member of the Little Entent.

Ladies' Choir Will be Added for This Winter's Concert.

The music season is approaching and lovers of the vocal art are turning their thoughts towards the periods when one or two evenings each week during the winter months will be employed practising for concerts, under church or community auspices.

The executive of Peterborough Male Voice Choir have had several meetings in the past few weeks and their plans for the coming months are almost completed. The musical director this year again is Martin B. Chenhall, A.R.C.O., under whose baton the choir in the past four seasons has made distinct progress. The prospects are for a choir of sixty male voices, including the "Old Guard" and many new choristers.

Ladies' Choir

An innovation this year will be the inclusion of a ladies choir, to take part with the men in the annual concert which is expected to be put on somewhat earlier than usual.

Many ladies of various choirs in the city have willingly signified their intention of coming forward, and look upon the move as a step in the right direction. It is hoped to muster one hundred ladies and this number is in sight now—which will give Mr. Chenhall a choir of 160 voices; and incidentally promises a splendid season of practice, and a fine concert in 1929.

The music chosen by Mr. Chenhall and the music committee of the Male Voice Choir is of rare merit and carefully culled from many fine selections. The eight numbers included a "Border Ballad," humorous part songs, negro spirituals, chorus of Peers from Gilbert and Sullivan's "Tolanthe," love songs, and a request number, "Martyrs of the Arena," these being for male voices; with the second part of the program presented by the mixed choir in S. Coleridge Taylor's "Hiawatha's Wedding Feast."

This is a program of exceptional merit, and should be enjoyed by choristers and auditors alike.

The first practice will be held on Tuesday, 9th October, and every Tuesday thereafter, (except October 16th) in the Canadian Legion Hall, which has been engaged for the weekly rehearsals.

ONE OF RESCUED

Roy Fox, of Owen Sound, shown ABOVE, one of the survivors of the Manasoo, owes his life to the fact that he was taking another man's watch on deck. His 17-year-old brother, Clark, who was making his first voyage as a fireman, is listed as missing.

SEXTET BOOKED FOR NEXT MONTH

Canadian Singers, Trained By J. Campbell McInnes, Coming To City.

Among the big attractions of the Kiwanis Club Produced in Canada Exhibition will be the nightly programs of the Canadian singers, a Toronto organization that occupies a unique niche in the musical world. It is a sextet of women's voices, trained by the eminent English baritone, J. Campbell McInnes, director of English lyric diction to the American Opera Company and teacher of Cuthbert Kelly, leader of the English Singers.

The Canadian Singers have appeared with conspicuous success in Canada and United States. Some press comment follows:

"A few weeks ago I heard a very extraordinary choir of young ladies from Canada. This choir has been drilled by Mr. Campbell-McInnes and I consider the ensemble well-nigh perfection. I wish heartily to recommend his company of charming singers."—Henry Hadley.

"...The ease and charm with which the Canadian Singers render their program and their obvious delight in the music, makes their performance vastly appealing. . . . The English Madrigals of Morley, Gibbons and Youll were done in fine style, particularly Youll's "Come Merry Lads" and Gibbons' "The Silver Swan," the latter highly pictorial in its graceful movement. The French Madrigals were more sedate in character, but the lively "Ce moi de mai" had such jolly rhythmic qualities that it had to be repeated. Perhaps the most delightful items on the program were "Tyrle Hyrlow" and "Regina Coeli," two sixteenth century lyrics set to music by Dr. Healey Willan of Toronto."—Toronto Saturday Night.

"This organization is an unusual one. It might be said to bear the same relation to a choir that a string quartet does to an orchestra. Its tone is light, but it can be made very lovely. The individual voices of the singers are good and they have worked together until they now blend and melt into one another with excellent effect. . . . The singers wear seventeenth century costumes, and as they came trooping onto the platform last night, the pictorial effect was excellent. The appearance of the young women adds a great deal to the charm of their concerts. In madrigals and numbers of that nature, the Canadian Singers make their strongest appeal. . . . In the English and French madrigals, the delicacy of tone showed the line of the melodies to advantage. "Now is the Month of Maying" was an example of gayly tinted song, and in "The Silver Swan" and "Sweet Nymph" the treatment of the harmonies was a delight. . . . Undoubtedly there is a place for an organization like the Canadian Singers. It is different, picturesque and has a finish that justifies its existence.—Fred Jacob. Mail and Empire, Toronto.

"Yesterday evening in Massey Hall the Canadian Singers gave their first formal Toronto concert, and the select audience present enjoyed a rare treat. The present reviewer confesses his absolute amazement . . . many of their achievements were truly exquisite . . .'. — Lawrence Mason, Toronto Globe.

Toronto Trading Dull With Trend Downward

TORONTO, Sept. 26.— (Canadian Press.)— Trading tended to dullness on the Toronto sotck exchange today. Sales were light and prices as a rule showed slight declines. Massey Harris continued fairly active and was fractionally higher at 45%. Cockshutt, however, experienced light trading and dropped a half to 29½. Muirheads provided the feature of the listed section with a good turnover and a gain of two to ten. British Columbia Fishing jumped three to 75 and Brazilian was down a quarter at 60. Hayes Wheels at 36½ was up 1½ and Page Hersey was down a quarter at 103¾. The leader on the unlisted section was Walkers, which, after lapsing a point to 62½ showed a gain of a quarter at the noon price of 63½. Oils were a trifle easier.

Wheat Moves Higher Despite Contrary News

CHICAGO, Sept. 26 (Canadian Press). — Wheat future delivery values displayed rallying power early to-day despite reports that Canada and the Argentine both were cutting prices to induce Europe to buy. Meanwhile, corn developed firmness owing to indications of frost damage, some as to quantity but mostly in quality. Opening unchanged to ¾ cents lower, Chicago wheat later scored a general advance. Corn started unchanged to 1 cent higher and afterward held near to the initial figures. Oats were easy.

Opening prices were: Wheat, September 112¾, December 117. Corn, September 95¾, December 78. Oats, September 41¾, December 41¼.

Call Money Goes Down And Advance Is Resumed

NEW YORK, Sept. 26 (Canadian Press).—Flurries of selling continued to sweep through to-day's stock market, but speculators for the advance, aided by the reduction in the call money rate from seven to six and a-half per cent., retained control of the general price movement. Early gains of three to nearly ten points in some of the specialties were not maintained but new leaders were brought forward whenever the old favorite showed signs of waning.

Except for the publication of optimistic weekly steel trade reviews which emphasized the continuance of high production and brisk demand and predicted heavy railroad buying, there was little in the day's news to influence the price movement.

With several of the large railroads publishing excellent August earnings statements and the heavy crop movement getting under way, rails attracted a larger following.

Radio assumed the leadership of the market in the early afternoon by soaring more than nine points to 209½. Johns Manville ran up nine and a-half points and then fell back on profit taking. Case Threshing climbed seven, Wright Aeronautical 5¾, and Woolworth, General Motors, and Union Carbide sold three to four points higher.

Downward Movement On Mining Exchange

TORONTO, September 26 (Canadian Press). — The general tone on the Standard Stock and Mining Exchange to-day was distinctly soft. Noranda led the downward movement by dropping 1.00 to 49.75 after opening strong at 51.00. Trading in the issue was heavier than usual, total sales numbering 13,560 shares. Amulet opening with an overnight gain of 10 at 3.60 sold as high as 3.65, but dropped at the close to 3.43 for a loss of seven. Mond Nickel also suffered a drop, easing 50 to 31.90. Sherritt-Gordon was unchanged at 6.60, Hudson Bay dropped ten to 19.50, and Mandy eased off 14 to 1.91. The only substantial gain of the session was made by Teck Hughes, which advanced 10 to 9.00. Abana at 3.55 was up five, Pend Oreille advanced five to 12.80, and Jackson Manion was up a point at 35.

MINING BRIEFS

A Special Service to The Examiner

TORONTO, Sept. 26.—Boston Creek despatches are to the effect that lateral work at the 1,250 foot level of the Barry-Hollinger has progressed some 150 feet. It is understood that over 120 feet of this was in ore and that at the present time the workings are in ore of a good grade. Officials of the company are reported to have stated that this will average $30 per ton. Lateral work is now said to be underway at the 1,100-foot level in the hope of picking up extensions of this ore.

The south crosscut at the 1,870-foot level of the Tough Oakes is reported as having intersected the vein, and that drifting is now in progress. While the work to date is understood to have been favorable, it will be a matter of another week or so before the importance of this find can be estimated. In addition to this, the work of opening up the vein in close proximity to the shaft is also said to be underway, and information regarding this should be forthcoming at an early date. It is understood that as soon as developments at the lower level have reached an advanced stage, work is to be started on the 1,375-foot horizon, where three intersections are expected. Following this, the work of opening the 1,575 will be started and further work is also to be carried out on the 1,450. Eleven intersections are expected at the four levels, but a large amount of work remains to be done before any of these horizons are proved to be important or otherwise. It is said that no tailings are being sent to the mill at the present time but that ore from the pillars of an old stope is being treated. While this is only temporary, hopes are entertained of securing considerable ore from development as will result in off-setting costs of the deep work.

An unofficial despatch received from the Soo states that work on the 500-foot level has disclosed an ore zone 132 feet wide at the Pioneer property. The report does not give assay results. However, this width is a distinct improvement over the surface, where the vein was reported to be 10 feet wide. Official announcements of progress will be made at the annual meeting next Tuesday.

Trading in Boischatel continues unabated and reports of a strike on the property are filling the boardrooms. Montreal interests are behind this venture, and men of the calibre of Alfred Savard and L. M. McKinley add prestige to the undertaking. The second annual report of the company, recently released and covering the period to May 31st, 1928, reveals the fact that the treasury is in possession of a nominal amount of cash, but has 1,861,600 shares of stock unissued. Thos. Charlebois, managing director, in addressing the shareholders says;

"The development work done on your properties to date failed to reveal ore of a commercial grade therefore your directors acquired additional properties upon the recommendations of your company's engineer, and propose to do further work on these properties this year. Your company has available for development purposes 1,861,600 shares of stock, and as several requests have been received from shareholders asking for permission to subscribe for stock in order that all money paid by them may be available for development work, your directors are at the present time working out a plan which they expect to be able to submit to you in the very near future and which they trust will receive favorable consideration.

Bunker Hill Extension Starts Work in J. J. Law Group.

A crew of men is being sent to the J. J. Law group of claims, recently optioned by the Bunker Hill Extension Mines, this week. It is almost certain that the options held on the original Sudbury properties will be dropped. This property was thoroughly diamond drilled and shown to be barren of commercial ore. Some holes were spotted by electrical prospecting but results here were also negligible. The company is fortunate in that the ground was only held under option, instead of being owned, and the disposal of same now presents no difficulty.

Abana Mines Directors Still in Negotiations with American Interests.

Following the meetings between Abana Mines directors and representatives of a large American group over the week end it is stated that, while no definite conclusion was reached, negotiations are still in progress. It is expected that it will be two or three weeks before any decision is reached, but in the meantime the interested parties are looking into the question of power and transportation facilities. The American interests have examined the company's properties and expressed satisfaction with the prospects indicated by the development work that has been carried out.

In regard to the question of a railway line to the Abana properties, interests close to the company state that the Canadian National Railways are prepared to construct the twelve-mile spur just as soon as they are assured of sufficient tonnage to warrant the undertaking being carried out. It is expected that operations at the mine will permit of such a stage being reached towards the end of next year.

In the meantime, the view is taken that in order to acquire control of the company, it would be necessary to purchase the stock in the open market, as the shares are widely distributed in the hands of the public. No definite indication as to the identity of the interested parties is available, but it is stated on good authority that they do not represent the American Smelting & Refining Company, who have been mentioned to reports current on the street.

Mine Operations

As Reported to F. G. Oke & Company.

It was recently said that Sudbury Basin Mines had obtained a controlling interest in the Falcon Bridge nickel mines in the Sudbury district of Northern Ontario.

A number of people have been asking for information re this property. It is understood that the Falcon Bridge Mines have under option some 1,640 acres in Falcon Bridge Township besides some six hundred acres on what is known as the North Range. Permanent camps are now being built and it is understood that a contract has been let for 3,000 feet of diamond drilling.

Unofficial reports say that a copper nickel ore body has been traced on surface over a length of a mile and a half, running in width from 10 to 150 feet. It is also stated that approximately four million tons of ore have been indicated but not blocked out.

It is expected that a shaft will be sunk following the diamond drilling campaign, and within the next three years it is hoped that work will justify the building of a smelter.

RADIO DEALERS GET PROGRAM

Will Be Glad To Have People Listen In On Peterborough's Broadcast.

AT NINE TO-NIGHT.

The program which Peterborough is to provide for to-night, on the air, will be broadcasted from Canada's Cheerio Station CKGW (312.3 metres) from 9.00 until 10.00, Peterborough time.

CKGW is the most powerful station in Canada, and this will insure good reception practically all over Ontario and a great part of the United States, if weather conditions are at all favorable.

In the interests of those without radios, or who happen to be downtown at that time, the following studios have signified their willingness to spend a pleasant hour listening to the artists who will be on the air:

J. M. Greene Music Company, 185 Charlotte street.
E. V. Warne, 325 George street.
Heintzmann & Company, Royal Bank Building.
J. W. Watson, 446 George street.

On being approached by the Chamber of Commerce to obtain the program for the benefit of interested citizens, the radio dealers mentioned above replied characteristically, as follows:

Robert Haddow, of the Heintzman Company: "Surely! We will have seats available for all who care to come in and listen."

J. W. Watson: "Anything of community interest we are always glad to co-operate."

J. M. Greene: "I will be glad if you will inform the public that we are extending a cordial invitation to all and sundry to come and hear the program, and especially the Peterborough artists who are singing."

E. V. Warne: "Glad to co-operate. We'll get the program, and hope many will come to our studio and enjoy it with us."

Around the City

Frank G. Stinson, Secretary, Peterborough Automobile Club and Chamber of Commerce, is in Toronto today, attending a directors' meeting of the Ontario Motor League, after which he will be present at Canada's Cheerio Station, CKGW, King Edward Hotel, where he will assist the management with reference to Peterborough's broadcast this evening at 9.00 p.m., standard time.

City workmen are busily engaged in laying a new cement sidewalk in front of the White House on Charlotte street. The old sidewalk has been gradually sinking for a number of years and in wet weather the water collected and lay in small puddles.

IN POLICE COURT

John Doige of Plainville pleaded guilty of failing to stop before entering Hunter street from Stewart and was fined $5.00 without costs.

W. B. Edney pleaded guilty to parking a car on Stewart street at night without the proper lights and was fined $5.00 and $3.00 costs.

John Williamson of Dummer Township pleaded guilty to operating a car without the proper license plates, and was fined $10.00 and $8.50 costs.

W. A. Nelson, aged 16, of Percy Township, pleaded guilty to driving recklessly on the Norwood-Havelock road and was fined $20.00 and $9.00 costs. Provincial Officer Thompson, who arrested the boy, said that he was doing 50 miles an hour.

WEDDING BELLS

LEBARR—O'TOOLE

Sacred Heart Church was the scene of a pretty morning wedding on Tuesday, September 25, when the Rev. Father Maloney united in marriage Edward Alphonse LeBarr, son of Mr. and Mrs. L. W. LeBarr, 279 William street, and Anna O'Toole, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John O'Toole, Rink street. The ceremony, which took place at eight o'clock, was followed by a happy wedding breakfast at the home of the bride's parents and at noon the newly-wedded couple departed for a honeymoon to be spent in Oshawa and Toronto.

A sister and a brother of the bride and groom respectively, Miss Helen O'Toole and Lewis LeBarr, assisted as bridesmaid and groomsman. On their return Mr. and Mrs. LeBarr will reside on Bolivar street.

DORRELL—HUXLEY.

A pretty wedding was solemnized at St. George's church at 2.30 this afternoon when Amelia (Millie) daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John Huxley, Fradette avenue, became the bride of Frederick Dorrell, of this city, son of Mr. and Mrs. T. R. Dorrell, of Toronto. Rev. J. L. Hughes, the rector, officiated.

The bride entered the church on the arm of her father, who subsequently gave her away. She wore a pretty gown of poudre blue georgette, the back being in bolero style, with self-colored buttons. Her small hat was of French gray, with gloves, shoes and hose of the same shade. She carried a sheaf of pink ophelia roses, and wore a fox fur necklet, the gift of the bridegroom. She was unattended. The duties of best man were ably carried out by Mr. Sam Robertson. During the ceremony the bride's favorite hymn, "Breathe On Me Breath of God," was sung by the large congregation present. Mrs. R. King, presided of the organ and played the wedding marches of Lohengrin and Mendelssohn, on the arrival and departure of the wedding party.

Immediately following the ceremony the young couple left amid showers of confetti for the cenotaph on Murray street where the bride placed her bouquet as a token of remembrance of her brother, the anniversary of whose death in the Great War will be commemorated on Thursday, Sept. 27t. Mr. and Mrs. Dorrell then left by the 3.30 C.P.R. train for Toronto and Niagara Falls, for a brief wedding trip.

The out-of-town guests included Mrs. G. R. Dorrell, mother of the groom, and Messrs. Walter and Frank Dorrell, brothers.

Many useful and costly presents have been received by the young couple. A handsome clock was presented by the employees of the J. C. Poolman Co., where the bride was employed for a number of years. The Sunday school teachers of St. George's church recognized the services of one of their staff by the presentation to the bride of a bridge lamp and the A.Y.P.A. of St. George's had a kitchen shower and also gave a casserole in silver stand. Both bride and groom were members of the last named organization, the bride holding the office of president for the past year.

On their return Mr. and Mrs. Dorrell will reside on Dalhousie street.

Railway Board Hears Telephone Cases

BOARD DENIES APPLICATIONS OF RATEPAYERS

Refuses To Remove Names From Petition To South Monaghan Council.

HEARING CONTINUES.

Large Number of Signatures Dealt With Separately — Dummer Rates To Be Raised.

Holding the attention of two members of the Ontario Railway and Municipal Board during the entire session which begun at 10:30 this morning, and promising to occupy the greater part of the afternoon, the applications of some thirty-eight residents of South Monaghan to have their names removed from a petition represents the climax to a situation that has seriously disturbed the peace and harmony long-existant in the municipality. The petition, presented to the corporation of the township of South Monaghan had been signed by property owners who this morning sought to have the Board remove their signatures from the petition and also to have disapproved the by-law which provides for the establishment of a municipal telephone system in South Monaghan. Up to the time of adjournment, 12:45, the applications of more than half a dozen signatories had been dismissed, the Board considering that they had signed the petition in the face of an opportunity to read what they had been signing. Most of the applicants had claimed ignorance of the fact that the petition might prove compulsory or binding in any way.

Those Present

Chairman C. R. McKeown, K.C., A. B. Ingram, Vice-chairman and Col. Daggar, Commissioner of Telephones, arrived by motor this morning and sharp at the appointed hour opened the session. Appearing for the applicants was the Hon. G. N. Gordon, K.C., while J. F. Strickland appeared for the township. Also present was a large number of residents of South Monaghan, some of them keenly interested spectators, others seeking to have their names struck from the list.

Notice of Application

1. The Applicants are assessed land owners of the Township of South Monaghan, in the United Counties of Northumberland and Durham.

2. The Respondent is a Municipal Corporation.

3. At a meeting, of the ratepayers of the said Township, in the month of May, 1928, called for the purpose of considering the advisibility of establishing a Municipal Telephone System, in the said township, a committee was appointed for the purposes of obtaining prices, and information, so that the committee might report at a later meeting the result of their investigations.

4. Without any authority from the said meeting, the said committee, and others, proceeded to solicit the signatures of the Applicants, and others, preying upon the Respondent to establish a Municipal Telephone System, in the said Township.

3. Some of the parties active in obtaining the signatures of the applicants, and others, as aforesaid, were particularly interested in the establishment of a municipal telephone system, in the said township, by reason of their interests in a telephone company which they were endeavoring to sell to the respondent.

6. Many of the applicants were induced to sign the petition because the parties soliciting their signatures stated to them that there was no obligation incurred by signing the petition, and that the purpose of obtaining their signatures was merely to get the feeling of the ratepayers toward the establishment of a municipal telephone system. Relying upon the faith of the statements made to them, the applicants signed the said petition. Several of the applicants signed the said petition because of the reports circulated by those soliciting the petition that no obligation was incurred by signing the same, and that the purpose of obtaining a petition was to merely obtain an expression of opinion from the ratepayers.

7. The signatures of the applicants were obtained by false representations.

8. The said petition was presented to the respondent, and a bylaw was passed by the respondent dated the 6th day of August, 1928, providing for the establishment of a telephone system.

9. The applicants hereby made application for an order of this honorable board:

(2)—Disapproving of the bylaw

Romance Begun On Ocean Voyage Ends With Bridegroom-Elect Given Jail Term

OTTAWA, Ont., Sept. 27.—(Canadian Press).—Branding his conduct as a "most mean, contemptible and low act," Magistrate William Joynt, in police court found Jean Maurice guilty on the charge of stealing $500 in cash and goods valued at $800, the property of Mrs. Lea Villiers, a war widow and sentenced him to six months' definite and an indeterminate term thereafter of not more than two years less one day in an Ontario Reformatory. Dr. Gordon Henderson, counsel for Maurice, said the accused would like to be deported to Belgium, but the Magistrate said this was a matter for the Immigration authorities.

Maurice met Mrs. Villiers on a boat coming from Belgium and they agreed to be married. They came to Ottawa and then Maurice disappeared, leaving the woman in a hotel. Mrs. Villiers said she had given Maurice $500 to buy ticket for New York and to keep for her. The trunks were found in St. John, N.S., where they had been checked and where Maurice was arrested. Maurice claimed railway officials had sent the trunks to St. John by mistake and that he had left Ottawa to bring them back after he had learned of the mistake.

Great Dirigible Soon To Cross The Ocean

LONDON, Sept. 27 (United Press)—Germany's new trans-Atlantic dirigible, Count Zeppelin, will start its first flight to America, October 10, an Exchange telegraph despatch from Berlin said yesterday. The generally favorable weather predicted for the North Atlantic during the first two weeks of October makes a start at that time almost certain, the despatch said.

A subsequent flight to Egypt is being considered, it was added.

KNOX CHURCH RE-DECORATED

Re-opening Services Will Take Place Next Sunday Morning and Evening.

SPECIAL PREACHER.

Re-opening Services will be held in Knox Church, Rubidge street, next Sunday. Since the middle of July this sanctuary has been in the hands of decorators and renovators, and their work is at last completed.

The interior has been greatly enriched through the painting and decorations of walls and ceilings in tones that are mellow and pleasing, while the wood of galleries and pillars has been finished to match the pews, pulpit and organ case. Battleship linoleum in a shade to correspond has been laid over all the floors in the auditorium and vestibules, while the rooms at the rear are also finished in keeping with the main church. The contracting department of T. Eaton and Co. Toronto and Peterborough, has had charge of this work in the main and has made a fine success of the enterprise. This interior now presents one of the finest appearances of the city's churches.

Rev. J. A. Wilson, B.A., of St. Paul's Church, Paris, one time assistant to Dr. Torrance in this city when Knox was a mission of St. Paul's, has been secured to conduct the special services of next Sunday. A fine musical service is being prepared for the occasion, and the doors of Knox will be opened once more in cordial welcome to all who will come to join with this congregation in celebrating the happy consummation of their plans.

POSTIES WANT BETTER CLOTH

Convention Passes Local Resolution Favoring Better Grade of Uniform.

MANY RESOLUTIONS.

Carrier John Grisdale, who represented branch 22, of this city, at the national convention of the Federated Association of Letter Carriers of Canada, at Windsor, last week, was able to report on his return that every resolution endorsed by the Peterborough branch and supported on the floor of the convention by him had passed. Chief among these was one introduced by the Peterborough branch asking that the uniforms issued to the postmen be of a better grade of cloth. This was endorsed by the convention and forwarded to the postoffice authorities.

Among the resolutions carried at the convention were requests that mail deliveries on Christmas Day and New Year's Day be discontinued, the public to be educated to make this possible; that the delivery of circular letters addressed to "The Householder" be refused between Dec. 15 and Jan. 15 each year; that the postage on foreign magazines be increased; and that the "pool" be abolished, the temporary men involved to be absorbed either into the postal service or other branches of the civil service.

The fight for higher salaries for postmen will be carried on vigorously during the coming year, and many speakers at the meetings accused the Government of breaking faith in the matter and "passing the buck." Many speakers, including two members of Parliament, assured the carriers of their support in this.

One of the features of the convention was the visit of the Detroit Federation of Letter Carriers' Band, which entertained the delegates during the banquet, which was held on the second evening of the convention.

Sometime during yesterday the apartment of Frank Johnston, 543 George street, was entered by thieves and a sum of money and a quantity of Mrs. Johnston's jewelry was taken. Mrs. Johnston was away all day yesterday as she was acting as poll clerk for Divisions 26 and 28.

ETERNAL TRIANGLE DEFENCE EXPECTED IN ASSAULT CASE

Young Farmer Faces Charge—Old Man Near Death.

FOUGHT FOR HOME.

Accused Older Man of Running Around With Wife, Says William Ferguson.

CHATHAM, Sept. 27.—(Special to The Examiner). —An eternal triangle defence looms as the probability to-day in the case of William Ferguson, young North Buxton farmer held on $2,000 bail charged with assaulting Albert Forhan, an elderly neighbor who lies in his farm home making an inch by inch return from the brink of death.

The case has excited tremendous interest in Raleigh township and the Chatham district and concern follows the attempts of Ferguson, a strapping six footer and thirty four years of age, to prove that he fought to prevent an invasion of the sanctity of his home by a man who, according to the people of the community, is nearly seventy.

Ferguson Tells Story

"On Monday I was working at my father's place. I came home about 6:30, went to my house and there was no one there. I waited till 10:30 then I went down to Forhan's place and there was no one there. I suspected my wife was there. Then I started home again and I met Forhan in a horse and buggy with my wife and two children, going toward Forhan's place. I shouted to them to stop but he did not stop.

"I turned around and went back to Forhan's place again. My wife came to the door. I asked her what she was doing there. She said she had gone home and the door was locked and she could not get in. I then went out and met Forhan coming from the barn. I said to him 'What are you doing running around with my wife? He did not say anything. He went to go past me and struck at me. Then I hit him. We then went into a clinch.

"When we fell I was on the bottom but I turned him over and got up. I hit him two or three times in the face and a couple of times in the ribs. I then went to the house again to get my wife. I got my wife and two children and we walked home. When I left with my wife Mr. Forhan was making his way toward the house."

The grim fight in the barnyard occurred Monday night after ten o'clock, according to the statements of both adversaries, but it was not till noon Tuesday that neighbors found Forhan, with his head and body terribly battered, lying helpless in the bed into which he had crawled. He probably would not have been discovered then except that he had been sent for to help at a silo filling. Forhan is a married man, but there is some uncertainty as to whether his wife is dead or alive.

Forhan's story is that for the past year, Mrs. Grace Ferguson, a reputable young woman and the mother of two small children, has been engaged from time to time to set Forhan's house in order for a small sum.

Badly Battered

When Constable Peters found Forhan, his head was battered and swollen to nearly twice normal size. Both his eyes were sealed tight and he was unable to see even the light. His

Thieves Loot Safe Of Million Dollars

WINNIPEG, Man., Sept. 27. — (Canadian Press). — About a quarter of a million dollars worth of securities in the form of coupons which he had recently clipped from bonds were left untouched by thieves who stole securities worth more than a million dollars from the safe in the office of Howard Clark Davis, in Boston, Mass., it was revealed by Mr. Davis on his return to the city from Central Manitoba mines on his way to Boston.

He said his loss would not be heavy, being compensated for by insurance.

PETERBOROUGH IS ON THE AIR

Splendid Program Given By CKGW, Including Songs and Short Talk.

CITY'S OWN ARTISTS.

Peterborough went on the air last night. Peterborough singers were heard to great advantage in beautiful numbers, and Peterborough's beauties were set forth in a short talk by John Copeland, announcer for CKGW. Peterborough's stay-at-home people were also on the air last night, judging by the number of messages read by the announcer telling of the reception of the program here in the city. Among the first to send in his comments on the program was Tobias Fredenburg, local agent for the Satin Finish Hardwood Flooring Company, sponsors of the program, who had a great deal to do with arranging for the Peterborough program.

The City Service Cavaliers were first heard in last night's program in several song numbers. Mr. Copeland then delivered the paper on Peterborough, which touched on its people, its beauty, its fine buildings, and its manufacturing importance. The singers from the Dorohy Allan Park Studio at the Peterborough Conservatory of Music then delighted the large audience. First to sing was Miss Geraldine Collins, mezzo-soprano, whose charming voice came clearly over the ether to the receivers of her many entranced listeners. Miss Margaret Dickson was next, her sweet bird-like notes and trills sounding soft and clear in several pretty numbers. Mrs. Mary Dickson Free's splendid contralto voice was also heard to great advantage in her numbers.

"The response by Peterborough citizens, by wire and telephone, last evening was most unusual and highly gratifying," was the statement made by the officials of station CKGW, Toronto, to Frank G. Stinson, Secretary, Peterborough Chamber of Commerce, after the concert. "The fact that such interest was shown by the people of Peterborough will no doubt entitle them to a second evening later on in the year," pointed out R. W. Ashcroft, Manager Radio Department of Gooderham & Worts Limited, who own and operate the studio in the King Edward Hotel, Toronto, Mezzanine floor and the Transmitting station at Bowmanville.

Both Mr. Ashcroft and Mr. Copeland, the inimitable announcer, were pleased with the efforts of the three Peterborough artists, Mrs. Mary Dickson Free, Miss Geraldine Collins and Miss Margaret Dickson—so much so that the city was given an extra ten minutes at the end of the program, the artists escaping from the studio with barely time to catch the last train to Peterborough.

Of interest to the public was the statement by Mr. Ashcroft to the effect that Gooderham & Worts had spent slightly over $150,000 on their equipment in their studio CKGW and the transmission station at Bowmanville. "It is the most complete I have yet seen," points out Mr. Stinson—"superior, I would say, to that of the popular stations in the North-eastern States. "On August 31st, an entire change was made in the management and operation of station CKGW, and they now plan by quality of programme to popularize CKGW to such an extent that it will top any station within our extensive range."

Policemen Locked In Jail In Quaker City; Philadelphia Decides To Be Very Good

PHILADELPHIA, Sept. 27.—Twenty-two policemen are locked in city hall cells to-day charged with bribery and extortion after the biggest haul of the protracted crime probe investigating corruption in the Philadelphia police force by the bootleg interests.

The city's dynamic prosecutor, John Monaghan, completed a 15-hour day last night with five hours' grilling of 23 "bluecoats" and their subsequent arrest and suspension from the force.

Served Under Cohen

All 22 sergeants, patrolmen and detectives served under Captain Cohen, the twenty-third man seized in the haul, at some time or another in the Fourth and Snyder streets police districts.

Last night the gray, drab corridors of city hall echoed to the shuffle of the strangest parade of "condemned" since its erection as Cohen led the march of chagriged uniformed men to the lock-up. Crowds of curious, mostly city employees, stood gaping in doorways at the odd spectacle. Flashlights of newspaper photographers boomed and the parade was disrupted as men hid their faces from the "mugging."

Monaghan's "Good Man Friday," Chief of County Detectives Patrick J. McKewen, who made the arrests, delivered his prisoners to the turnkey and departed for a short good-night talk with his chief.

For a short time 23 occupied the corridor of cells in the "hall" lockup, but not for long, as $10,000 bail was mustered for Cohen's release

Nice Stages Gene Tunney Welcome But Ex-Champion Is Not On Train

(Associated Press).

NICE, France, Sept. 27.—A report published in local newspapers that Gene Tunney would arrive here at 2:30 p.m. from Marseilles brought such a crowd to the railroad station that police reserves had to be called out to handle the throng. But the retired champion failed to arrive.

The report gained such general credence that the station master, representatives of the municipality and Government officials took places at the depot to extend a city welcome to the famous pugilist. The throng was a larger one than Nice usually turns out for visiting royalty.

When it became certain that Gene was not on the train, the disappointed crowd dispersed, many muttering that Tunney, in his quest for privacy, had inspired the newspaper item and then slipped into the city by automobile. But a search of every hotel failed to reveal him.

UNIFORM SIGNS ARE ADVOCATED

Good Roads Association Speaker Would Forbid Private Boards On Roads.

CITES ABUSES.

REGINA, Sept. 27.—Speaking today before the convention of the Canadian Good Roads Association, William Findlay, of Toronto, a director of the association, pointed the way to securing uniformity in road signs and highway traffic regulations throughout the Dominion. He urged that directions be given the association's Fact Finding Committee to pursue a definite line of study regarding both road signs and traffic regulations. In turn, the conclusions of the Fact Finding Committee could go before the inter-provincial conference, composed of the leading Government authorities dealing with highways. Mr. Findlay stated that by adopting such a course the association would be making one of its greatest contributions to the cause of highways.

After pointing out that good roads are the prime medium for the development of inter-provincial understandings and inter-provincial goodwill, Mr. Findlay stated: "But why look to the roads to exercise this unifying influence, if the Canadian crossing his own country encounters a different set of road signs and road signals and different laws and regulations in every Province and almost in every city? If we are sincere in wishing the highways to exercise this beneficent influence, can we justify the checkerboard arrangement of road signs and signals and traffic control which now exists?"

Mr. Finlay urged that all signs except bona fide road signs should be prohibited within a certain distance of the highways. Nothing, he stated, was more distracting to the motorist who was trying to drive carefully than the conglomeration of signs found on some highways.

"A farmer in Eastern Ontario," continued the speaker, "procured an official detour sign and put it up on the gate to his lane. After you had made the turn into this man's backyard you saw that he had added to the official word 'Detour' the words 'For Fresh Eggs.' There must be a million imitation 'Stop' signs followed by the words 'For Hot Dogs.' I saw a new one on the Montreal-Quebec highway the other day. A hundred yards down the road from a refreshment stand was the direction sign 'Back Up,' followed by the words 'For a Good Meal'."

Mr. Findlay submitted that uniform traffic control had to be divided into two parts, on country highway and on city streets. However, the type of humanity was pretty much the same throughout Canada and the types of vehicles were exactly the same. "Why then is it not possible," he asked, "to make uniform the laws and the regulations to control these persons and these vehicles in such a way that the movement of traffic shall be expedited in the freest manner possible and the safety of life and property shall be maintained?" He added that if the adoption of unified regulations lessened the dangers of the highways all the time and effort and money would be amply repaid.

"I would suggest," stated Mr. Findlay, "that an expression of our gen-

RACE STARTER KILLED BY CAR

R. P. Carruthers Fatally Hurt While Arranging Cars At Port Hope Fair.

DRIVER NOT BLAMED.

PORT HOPE, Sept. 27.—A fatal accident marred the program at the Port Hope fair here yesterday afternoon, when R. P. Carruthers, aged 70, was struck and run over by an auto driven by Wilfred Hills. The victim was taken to the hospital with two broken limbs, several fractured ribs, internal injuries and a bad scalp wound. He succumbed a few hours after being admitted.

The accident happened just before the start of an auto race on the fair program. Mr. Carruthers was assisting in lining up the racers and had stepped out on the track to flag one of them. The driver turned his auto to avoid the victim who stepped in the same direction at the same moment and was thrown to the track and one wheel of the auto passed directly over him. He was extricated from under the auto and rushed to the hospital. The car was stopping at the moment of impact having slowed down to about ten miles an hour. Bystanders do not attribute any blame to the driver of the auto.

Citizens Turn It Down

Very Small Vote Cast On By-law Involving $300,000.

FINAL VOTE 364 TO 352.

Returns Quickly Compiled—Result Known at 5.26—Heaviest Poll 55.

Twelve votes was the margin by which the Protestant property owners of Peterborough yesterday turned down the by-law to authorize the issue of debentures for $300,000 for an addition to Nicholls Hospital. Only 716 of some 3,250 qualified voters exercised their franchise, dividing almost evenly, 352 for the by-law and 364 against.

With the light vote cast, returns were compiled quickly, and the final result was known at 5.26, twenty-six minutes after the closing of the polls. The committee room of the City Hall where City Clerk S. R. Armstrong, in his capacity of returning officer, received the results presented a different scene from that of New Year's Day, when municipal election results are coming in. There were present only Mr. Armstrong, Secretary John Crane of the Hospital Board, and The Examiner until two or three men dropped in just before the last polls reported.

Felix Brownscombe, who was acting as D.R.O. for Division 15, in the City Buildings, retained his record of being the first to report, giving a majority of eight, for the by-law at two minutes after five. Half a minute later A. E. Patterson reported for Divisions 11 and 13, also in the City Building, raising the majority to thirteen. Another half-minute and R. C. Braund had reported for Divisions 3 and 7, cutting ten off the majority.

Returns followed thick and fast in the next fifteen minutes, with the balance holding about even until John Speer reported an adverse vote of nineteen from 35 and 36, which put the by-law twenty-six behind. The last three returns, brought by car from the South Central School, where there was no 'phone available, showed majorities of six, five, and three for the by-law, reducing the margin to twelve votes.

The detailed results follow:

BOARD TALKS COAL TO-DAY

Mined Fuel To Come Before Federal Tariff Advisory Commission.

SECOND TIME.

OTTAWA, Ont., Sept. 27 (Canadian Press).—Having temporary disposed of the application of the Canadian Council of Agriculture for removal of the import duty on cement, the Federal Tariff Advisory Board will direct its attention to-day to submission relative to coal and coke. Both cases have been previously before the board, but were continued to permit introduction of new evidence.

The Nova Scotia Steel Company, coupled with the Dominion Coal Company, is applying for imposition of duty on coke, anthracite screenings and the abolition of the rebate of duty at present granted on coal for the manufacture of coke used in the melting of metals, in addition to coal imported for the manufacture of coke in by-products ovens.

The other application which is supported by the Crow's Nest Pass Coal Company, and the British Columbia Miners' Association, both of Fernie, B.C., are asking the removal of customs duty of bituminous coal, the retention of coke on the free list and the abolition of certain industrial drawbacks.

Rev. John Lennox Inducted at Havelock

TAKES OVER CHARGE OF KNOX CHURCH

Rev. Dr. D. H. Thompson, of Hastings, Delivers Inspiring Address to Congregation.

IMPRESSIVE SERVICE.

(Examiner Correspondence.)

HAVELOCK, Sept. 27.— Rev. John Lennox, of Beamsville, was inducted as minister of Knox church for the second time on Tuesday evening as the result of an unanimous invitation asking him to return to this charge. Rev. William Allan, of Peterborough, interim moderator, presided.

Rev. Dr D. A. Thomson, of Hastings, taking as his text Luke, 11, verses 5 to 9, preached a very helpful and inspiring sermon. This portion of the chapter deals with prayer and Christ sets the example to us. The Christian life, Dr. Thomson said, had three divisions similar to the divisions of the temple, namely, Outer court, inner court and inmost court. "We meet to-night," he said, "in the outer court to pray for general things. The family altar is the inner court and then when we go alone in our chamber for prayer that is the inmost court. Jesus went to the mountains to be alone with His Father and if He required prayer, how much more we need it, and it is on such occasions as this when we set apart one of God's servants to the ministry of His church that we need it."

Three men are mentioned in the parable, one who came in need, one who seized the opportunity and the one who gave assistance. The first came out of the darkness with his need expecting a night's lodging. We are needy creatures. We are all in need from time of birth until we pass away, and as we grow in years those needs grow greater and greater. The greatest need in the world is the spiritual need, for Christ has said, 'Men shall not live by bread alone but by every word that proceedeth out of the mouth of God." The great problem of the church is to meet the needs of those who come to the church. The work of the church is to feed the soul by upholding the cross and the church is not doing its duty unless it is doing this. In speaking on immigration the speaker said: "If we do not take the gospel to these foreigeners our country will become the same as the countries they have left.

The second man in the parable is the one on whom the opportunity rests. He had a good excuse that he had nothing to set before the man, but the opportunity was presented to him and he determined to meet the need and he went to the source of supply to get something and the lesson from this second character is that by always going to the Master in prayer He will never disappoint us.

The third man supplied the bread for his friend teaching that if we keep on asking and seeking we will not be denied whatever it may be God's will to grant.

Your minister, he concluded, needs you to uphold him in prayer, and the prayer meeting is a great thermometer for the church, and if you pray with importunity there is no question but that your church will prosper in the best kind of prosperity—spiritual.

Rev. William Allan.

Rev. William Allan spoke of the procedure prior to the induction, mentioning the largely signed petition from the congregation for one who had served there before. It speaks well for Mr. Lennox and also the congregation and I look forward to a long ministry for him in this pastorate he said.

Mr. Allan said he had the added privilege to address the minister. It is a time honored custom and he wondered if under the circumstances

LAKEFIELD BOY WINS HONORS

Madill Passes With Honors Pipe Organ Examinations.

DISTRICT NEWS.

(Examiner Correspondence.)

LAKEFIELD, September 27. — The following notice taken from the Border Cities Star refers to a Lakefield boy, Kenneth S. Madill, third son of Mr. Walter Madill:

"Kenneth Madill, assistant principal of the Comem School of Windsor has received word from Ottawa that he has passed with honors the pipe organ examination as an Associate of the Dominion College of Music of Canada."

Mr. Madill, even as a small boy possessed a decided musical talent, which he cultivated, and this community has received much benefit from it during his residence in the village. For several years he was organist of the Regent Street United Church, giving up the position when leaving for Windsor.

Car Wrecked.

Mr. W. G. Morrison met with a motor accident when coming from Port Hope early on Sunday morning. Delayed by a series of tire troubles, Mr. Morrison did not arrive in Peterborough till three o'clock on Sunday morning, while coming out on the Peterborough road near Mr. R. Slaters farm he rounded a curve and saw a man signalling to him to stop. The unheralded appearance of a perfect stranger at that hour in the morning suggested a hold-up, and for a second Mr. Morrison lost control of the car, which crashed into a Hydro supporting pole, turned completely round, and went over on it's side. The car is a total wreck, with everything broken but the glass which miraculously escaped. Mr. Morrison was severely shaken up, but no bones were broken, which is a matter for thankfulness, for his escape was little short of a miracle.

A thing of beauty is not always a joy for ever, and while trees surrounding the intersection known locally as Phelan's Corner add to the beauty of the scene, they also add considerably to the hazard. While one desires beauty, still one must consider danger to human life, and although a considerable proportion of accidents is due to careless driving, all are not, and the low hanging trees have obscured the view. It is time some definite action was taken.

The annual "Massey-Harris" excursion to Bobcaygeon for the fair takes place on Saturday per steamer Stoney Lake. This excursion is a regular community event for many people, and there is always a good crowd. The scenery is beautiful and the trip is the last excursion of the season usually, and those who take it have the advantage over summer excursionists of seeing the glorious foliage of early autumn, which is in itself a great attraction.

The annual harvest festival of St. John's Church will be held on Thursday evening, October 4, with Rev. R. C. Blagrave, D.D., of St. John's, Peterborough, as special preacher.

The A.Y.P.A. euchre parties will open on October 11 instead of October 4, as previously announced. The opening is postponed owing to the harvest festival which takes place on the 4th.

EXHIBITS AT STIRLING FAIR OF HIGH CLASS

Fewer Names On List of Exhibitors But Displays Are Larger.

BUILDINGS CROWDED.

Good Horse Races and Enticing Midway Entertain Large Crowd.

(Examiner Staff Correspondence)

STIRLING, Sept. 27.—Something to interest everyone, the advertisement used by the Stirling board of Fair directors, was lived up to to the last letter yesterday when about three thousand people thronged the grounds to see the exhibits, greet their friends from near and far, watch the horse races or travel down the midway. The weather was none too warm, but light coats for men and furs for the ladies kept out the chill and a few hot dogs in between times, all worked together to make the fair this year, one of the best.

There was a slight decrease in the number of exhibitors, but this seemed to have the reverse effect on the number of exhibits. In former years, there has been a wire "cage" to hold the orchard exhibits. This year there was not room for them there and they had to be placed elsewhere in order to make room for the home cooking exhibit which was unusually large. The cattle barn was too small for the purpose and some of the exhibits were tethered to trees in the grove on the south side of the building. A large marquee housed the exhibits of the championship school fair. The high class of these showings may be well imagined when it is known that they represented the cream of all the exhibits of the school fairs in the district. A most pleasing sight was the array of silver trophies, arranged immediately inside the front entrance. There were eight cups and a silver shield, displayed to the best advantage. Any one of them would be just cause for pride in possession.

Hall Well Filled

The fine steel exhibition hall was a bower of beauty with its long rows of exhibits artistically arranged. Occupying the front of the centre aisle, was a space reserved for the demonstration of alabastine. Immediately in rear of this was a floral exhibit whose size and beauty made it second to none. This was arranged by the Stirling Horticultural Society. In rear of this was the display of home cooking, orchard products and grains. All along the south side of the hall was an imposing display of needlecraft which included every conceivable article which could possibly be the product of needle and thread. The fine arts exhibit was also included on this side.

The north side of the building was of great interest to many. Occupying the front space was the diary exhibit, displayed to the best advantage. The next booth was, perhaps the most interesting and arresting exhibit in the building. It was the Stirling Women's Institute exhibit. In this space was to be found everything that could be found ing and many other articles, leaders and many necessities, flowers, needlecraft display, hand painted china, home cooking, infant clothing an many other articles, leaders in their class. One of the most noticeable exhibits there was the invalid's tray made of woven reeds, chintz and glass. It was so designed that it can be placed across the invalid in bed without having any weight on the sick person. There is a large pocket at each end and a glass covered tray in the middle. Each and every article in the booth was the product of the skill and energy of the members of the Stirling branch of the W.I.

Much Poultry Shown

The poultry exhibit was comprised of practically every breed of fowl that can be found in the district. Chickens, ducks, geese, turkeys and even snow white chinchilla rabbits were to be seen in the cages.

Out on the grounds where there were thousands of people moving from one attraction to another, things moved with rapidity. Down the midway of Joyland shows, the two main attractions were the ferris wheel and the chair plane. To some, the caliope which made up part of the equipment was a big attraction.

There were the usual number of hot dog stands, and in front of these was the realm of motor cars. In this line there was a most imposing display. Among the vehicles shown were the laest closed and sport models of the Dodge, Buick, Pontiac, Oldsmobile, Chandler, featuring the Westinghouse air brakes; Chevrolet, Durant, and the Ruggles trucks. LAKEFIELD, Sept. 27.—The Lakefield Fair was the event of Tuesday and Wednesday, with, of course, the latter date the "big day." Although the day dawned clear and fine, it failed to remain pleasant, and the cloudy skies with flashes of rain and a searching west wind did not make for great success, but nevertheless there was a good crowd and a good humored crowd, who made the best of the cold and lack of sunshine. The Citizens' Band was present and gave an excellent programme during the afternoon.

This year's Fair marked a new epoch in its history as the horse racing was limited to local men, the horses all being green horses, but while Reg. McConkey's "Darky Boy" could walk away from his competitors easily, it was a better exhibition of horse racing than last year's event with outside entries, which evoked much sarcasm and adverse criticism from the crowd.

Races Well Contested.

The races were well contested and the interest of the crowd was held by the athletic events, the results being very close in most cases. The relay race was contested by four teams, and the finish was very close. The girls urged for a half mile race and thirteen entered, and almost all finished. There was also a potato race for girls, which ended the afternoon's program. The girls showed pep and speed in both events.

Messrs. T. W. Chaplin and H. Wannamaker and H. Wagar assisted the committee in running off the athletic events, and were of utmost value, sparing neither time nor effort to make things run smoothly and entering into the spirit of the game with great zest.

The midway did a thriving business, and although not as pretentious as that of larger fairs, possessed greater attractions to the juvenile element at least.

Several automobile dealers had cars on view, and one noticed a cream separator and a gasoline engine which were being demonstrated. The judging of horses in front of the grand stand was a matter of general interest, and the crowd did a little judging on their own account. The entry list was smaller than usual, but the average standard of quality was good, and some very handsome animals were shown.

The Dickson's store of Lakefield had a very fine exhibit in the main building, near the south entrance, featuring stamped linens especially, which appealed strongly to the feminine taste.

Dr. D. Munro of Warsaw handled the bell for the horse racing and R. H. Alford acted as announcer.

Chief of Police Webster was on duty as usual and owing to his vigilance at the north gate, no accidents occurred.

When the nine entries in the bicycle race weer making their start unfortunately two pairs got mixed up and the result was a decided foul which lost those involved any chance of the race.

Unfortunately the polt vaulting, nail driving and standing broad jump and tug-of-war were omitted because of lack of time.

A note of comedy was introduced in the dog race when the small boys followed the contestants with words and pat sof encouragement, quite oblivious of the obvious fact that these attentions were a little too pressing and hindered rather than helped.

Exhibits Good

The exhibits in the main building were of excellent quality although in some of the classes were not as large as usual.

The exhibit of butter was larger than for several years and appeared to be a nexcellent quality. Only three cheeses were shown in the shipping class, but all were good. The vegetables, while very fine, were below the exhibits of last year in number, last year, however, was a record for vegetables and roots.

The orchard entry list was very good, not in size what it used to be but the fruit industry has become a separate entity and this section has not specialised in fruit, so the exhibits were not extensive as in past days when every farmer had an orchard with at least a few good varieties.

The art work was extra fine although the number of entries was small. The ladies' work, too, was much less in quality than last year, but a much better average quality. The bedspread display was large and

FARMERS ENTER BUSIEST SEASON

Many Duties To Be Performed At Home and On Neighbors' Farms.

CROPS ARE GOOD.

(Examiner Correspondence)

BURNBRAE, Sept. 27.—With the first murmurings of Jack Frost there begins again for the farmer the annual frantic rush to get things done. This is the time when he feels that, could human flesh endure it, the days should be forty-eight hours long to enable him to catch up with the many duties that seem so far ahead.

Corn is waiting to be cut, in many cases not too patiently, for the weatherman soon drives it back to the ground when once it is frost-bitten. Then there are potatoes to dig and buckwheat is still to cut, and many fields of alfalfa are waiting for the mower and a fine day for curing hay. All the time the threshing-mill hums in the distance, and just when things are the very busiest it stops at the next neighbor's barn, and the over-burdened farmer can be excused if he says some words that are not used in polite society.

Silo filling is just starting here, and on Monday Roy Walker cut his first prise crop of corn. Percy Oddie, whose magnificent field of corn came first last year, came seventh this season in the crop competition.

Threshing goes on steadily, though not as fast as in some previous years, owing to the poor condition of the grain, due to wet weather. Indeed a few farmers have still some oats in the field. A good deal of second-cutting alfalfa has been spoiled by rain this summer, and much remains to be handled yet, the heavy after-growth being too much for the cows to pasture off.

More than ever before local farmers are turning down the silo on account of the extra labor involved at the rush season, and are placing their faith upon roots and alfalfa hay. The root crop this year is better than usual, but the rank, rapid growth has resulted in many more weeds than usual in the root fields. Potatoes are one of the heaviest crops on record as to quantity, with the quality extremely doubtful, due to the prevalance of wet rot.

The cheese factory make has stayed up well to the June mark, many factories manufacturing as much cheese in August as in June, and only during the latter half of September has the flow lessened. August prices for fat were around the 33-cent mark, which points strongly to one hundred dollars a cow average for 1928. Pasture has never been better and the fields have at no time shown that brown shade which is usually a sure sign of late summer. Excess moisture with consequent mud has helped to keep the production of some herds down, but those cattle pasturing on high land have done exceptionally well this year.

At present hog prices are much lower than looked for two weeks ago but farmers here believe this is merely a blind of the packers to secure a run, and are sitting tight as regards the hog situation for next season.

FARMER KILLED.

Thrown From Load Hay While Making Turn To-day.

GUELPH, Ont., Sept. 26 (Canadian Press).—Thrown from a load of hay which he was driving while making a turn, Thomas O'Brien, Pilmington Township farmer, was almost instantly killed to-day.

Stomach Troubles, Headaches and Dizziness

When your stomach is sick, you are sick all over. If you can't digest your food, you lose strength and "pep"; get thin and nervous; and feel as tired when you get up as when you went to bed.

This was the condition of Mme. F. Joyal, 2170 Letourneux street, Montreal. She says: "I was so nervous that the rustling of a newspaper upset me. My appetite had left me; indigestion was giving me a great deal of trouble; I could not sleep; and steadily lost weight. Tanlac soon had me eating again, corrected my stomach trouble, steadied my nerves, ran my weight up ten pounds, and made me feel just right in every way. Let Tanlac do for you what it did for this sufferer and thousands of others. It is marvelous to see how it corrects the most obstinate digestion troubles—relieves gas, pains in the stomach and bowels—how it restores the appetite, vigor, sound sleep and strong nerves.

CANADIAN ATLAS IN GREAT DEMAND

United States, As Well As British Schools, Seek Handy Volume.

OTTAWA, Sept. 27.—(Canadian Press).—School children in the British Isles will this year receive over 100,000 copies of a descriptive Atlas of Canada provided by the Department of Immigration. This is part of an intensive publicity scheme to induce migration to Canada.

The atlas is distributed free to students in the Old Country through the central office of the department in London. Agents of the department travel through the country in demonstration vans carrying exhibit descriptive of Canadian industries and lecture at the various schools. Copies of the atlas are then left with the schoolmasters. Large wall maps are also provided.

The book comprises eighty pages and is stated to compare favorably with geographies used in Canadian schools. Besides a large number of colored maps, it contains literature dealing with the physical characteristics, climate and industries of the various Provinces. Special emphasis is placed on the opportunities open to those who wish to settle on Canadian farms. The maps have been prepared by the Natural Resources Intelligence Branch of the Department of the Interior and are stated to be of the most modern type.

The atlas is eagerly received by teachers, officials indicate, and is claimed to have much to do with the increasing desire of young people to look towards Canada as their future home.

Large numbers of the books are also in demand in the United States and thousands of requests for copies have been received from schools in the U. S. In congratulating Canadian officials on the excellence of the book, teachers over the border admit that geographies used in their schools give a very restricted and often inaccurate conception of the country. The atlas is particularly in demand in the farming areas in the Central States

CRIMINALS FROM BRITISH ISLES WILL BE DEPORTED FROM CANADA

Two Cases Being Handled at Present By Immigration Officials.

ONE APPEAL LODGED.

Sentence For Burglary Suspended On Irishman On Condition of Emigration.

OTTAWA, Ont., Sept. 27 (Special to The Examiner).—Entry into Canada of any persons guilty of a crime is forbidden under the Immigration Act, and where a convict offender enters the country by misrepresentation he will be deported by the Department of Immigration, which is investigating the case of James Alexander Johnston, who is now on a farm in Hartney, Manitoba. Johnston pleaded guilty on a burglary charge in the Old Land and was given three months in which to leave the country or go to jail.

Not long ago Edward Evans of Nottinghamshire was convicted of a serious charge and given the option of leaving England or going to jail. He came to Canada, and is now under a deportation order, but as he has the right of appeal under the Immigration Act, he cannot be deported until this appeal is heard by the Minister.

Not Mentally Strong.

(By Henry Sommerville—Special Cable to The Examiner).

LONDON, Sept. 26.—James Alexander Johnson was charged, with his wife Agnes, who is only seventeen years old, with having twice broken into the house of Miss Sarah Curry. On the first occasion, it was charged, they stole £11, and on the second occasion £493. Both pleaded guilty.

The judge asked where the money had gone. Dr. Thomas Taggart, who spoke for Johnson, said more had been given back than had been proved to have been stolen, Johnson having shown where the money was hidden. He was the son of a respectable farmer with 40 acres of land. He had been well brought up, but was not mentally strong, and his parents intend to send him abroad when the case was disposed of. The judge asked Johnson if he was willing to go away, and on Johnson saying "Yes," the judge observed: "These decent colonists don't want men like you." The bench, however, suspended sentence until the next court, saying he meant to see that Johnson cleared out of Northern Ireland. If he was in North Ireland in June he would be in jail. There was nothing to prevent him clearing out in the meantime, said the judge.

His wife said she had married Johnson when she was 16 to save him from going to jail. He took no interest in her, and she and her child were supported by her brother. The judge ordered the recorded sentence of six months against her not to be put into force if she behaved herself for two years.

Bruce Walker, Canadian Immigration Commissioner, discussing the case, said he was protesting indignantly to the Home Office against the court's telling criminals to go abroad to escape imprisonment. The name of Canada was not mentioned in court, but it is well-known that the fare to Canada is cheaper than to any other of the overseas Dominions, which induces most of such released offenders to go to that country, he stated.

To Make Solo Hop Across The Atlantic

ST. JOHN'S, N.F., Sept. 27. — (Canadian Press).—Bringing with him the Haviland Gypsy Moth plane in which he intends to attempt a solo flight across the Atlantic, Flight Commander McDonald arrived from England on the liner Nova Scotia yesterday.

No date for the take-off has yet been set, as Commander McDonald intends to make full arrangements before attempting the single-handed exploit. He will study weather conditions here and receive full reports on atmospheric conditions from the east before the flight.

$110,000 FOR A CARPET

LONDON, Sept. 27.—The "emperor's carpet" which is said to have been a present from Peter the Great to Leopold I. of Austria about 1698, was recently sold at Christie's for 22,000 guineas, or about $110,000. It is a Persian carpet and was made probably in the time of Shah Tahmash, 1524-76.

CONFIDENCE MEN VISIT STRATFORD

One Cashes Bad Check While Other Uses Hard Luck Tale.

STRATFORD, Sept. 27.—Provincial Police were advised yesterday that a motorist had driven up to a garage in Sbringville, and, after purchasing a small quantity of gas, proffered a ten-dollar cheque in payment, at the same time representing himself as "John Campbell." Later the garageman attempted to cash the cheque, but, to his chagrin, found that it was drawn on 'The Dominion Bank, Stratford branch,' and he was surprised to learn that no branch of the Dominion Bank existed here.

At the same time, Provincial Police learned that a man of another description had driven into the city and went to a local furniture factory, where he represented himself as a dealer. He told a hard-luck story of having his horse suddenly taken sick and that he was forced to give all his money to a veterinary. One of the employees gave him $3, which he thankfully acknowledged and departed.

This was the last heard of him until city police were advised that shortly after he had called on a local undertaker. Again he repeated the story of the sick horse. The undertaker gave him a cheque for $2, which he cashed.

Liver—in Vancouver, B.C.

"Three years ago, while in Vancouver, the house physician at the Hotel advised me to use Kruschen Salts for a bad liver and constipation. I can say I never have had anything that gave me almost instant relief before, and I therefore got my chemist to order Kruschen for me—I think no less than 40 or 50 families have used it by my persuasion.

"Most other remedies on the market leave a bad effect in many ways, but I can safely say I haven't been as well in many years, as since I have taken Kruschen."

Zion

PETHERICK'S CORNERS, Sept. 27.—Zion congregation held divine worship in the newly decorated church at 11 a.m. Sunday with the pastor, Rev. Mr. MacTavish conducting the service.

The church building presents a very neat appearance both without and within, and is a credit not only to the congregation but to Messrs. Taylor of Campbellford who were in charge of the work. These improvements have been made in anticipation of the fiftieth anniversary celebration on October 28. This promises to be one of the most interesting church jubilees ever held in this part of the conference.

League Services Started

League services were resumed on Thursday evening in charge of George Brunton citizenship convenor and an interesting program was given, closing with one of the most difficult Bible contests yet presented to Zion League members. The Star group were the "star" performers and topped the list.

This week's meeting will be in the form of a social evening at Mr. Fred Barnum's home.

Anniversary Services

Anniversary services at the neighboring Rylstone church drew a good attendance from this community, especially for the evening, when the building was packed to the doors. Rev. G. A. Brown of Kingston, a former pastor of St. Andrew's Campbellford, was the speaker for the day and as a fitting tribute many members of his former congregation made the long trip to hear his gospel message once more. Rev. Mr. Brown has the unique ability of making his hearers understand clearly what he means with a minimum of words. His message at the evening service was directed particularly to the young and his subject was that of the Parable of the Sower. No young person could fail to be impressed by the deep religious fervor of the speaker as he showed the evil results of shallow, vicious or careless and indifferent lives.

The service of song added much to the success of the anniversary services.

Miss Emma Micklejohn of Campellford, and a former Rylstone girl, gave splendid solos at each service. A quartette, Misses I. Stephens and F. Melklejohn and Messrs. W. Henson and G. Lucy gave two numbers at the morning service while in the evening Rylstone choir contributed two anthems.

This anniversary occasion marked the completion of thirty-five years of worship in the present church building which has been re-decorated for the event.

UNNECESSARY BY-ELECTIONS.

The fact that the nine portfolio-holding members of the new British Columbia Cabinet have been re-elected by acclamation serves to call attention to the folly of the present system which calls for by-elections in such cases.

There does not seem the slightest justification for these unnecessary elections.

Men who have been properly elected for service in the Legislature or in the Dominion House of Commons, as the case may be, should be allowed to accept Cabinet appointments without the formality of going back to their constituents for another endorsation.

A bill to this effect has been twice introduced by Mr. Jacobs, one of the Montreal members of the House of Commons, but has not yet been passed.

It is to be hoped that it will be pressed until it finally becomes law.

There is no reason why the expense and inconvenience of by-elections should be made a penalty of political promotion, for the conditions that made such a safeguard necessary have long since passed.

PETERBOROUGH ON THE AIR.

The all-Peterborough program from station CKGW last night was splendid advertising for Peterborough in more ways than one, and the fact that the broadcast was undoubtedly heard over a large part of Canada and the United States justifies the arranging of other similar programs.

Such a broadcast next spring when our American friends are trying to make up their minds as to where their vacation will be spent would help to arouse interest in Peterborough as the gateway to the Kawarthas and to increase the tourist traffic into this part of Ontario.

Listeners-in heard a great deal about Peterborough over the air last night, and furthermore, were given a demonstration of what Peterborough is doing in one field of education.

The singing of the pupils of Mrs. Dorothy Allan Park, who were so successful at the Canadian National Exhibition, was most enjoyable proof of the fact that this city, in addition to its numerous other advantages, offers splendid opportunities for musical development.

THE HOSPITAL BYLAW.

The bylaw to authorize the issue of debentures for $300,000 to cover the cost of enlarging and improving the Nicholls Hospital failed to meet with the approval of the majority of the Protestant ratepayers who took enough interest in the question to vote yesterday.

The majority against the measure was twelve.

Only 716 votes out of a possible total of approximately 3,200 were registered, the vote in all sections of the city being very light.

Two of the five wards, the centre and west, showed a majority in favor of the proposal, but their approval was offset by the adverse results in the south, east and north wards.

For the time being the question is shelved.

It will, however, be to the fore again, inasmuch as the problem of more hospital accommodation is one that will have to be faced by this community before long if Peterborough continues to grow.

The feeling that the city's tax bills were sufficiently high, rather than any serious opposition to hospital extension, probably explains yesterday's verdict.

SERVICE CLUBS TO THE FORE.

Both the local service clubs, Kiwanis and Rotary, figured prominently in yesterday's news.

Local Kiwanians were doubly honored in the appointment of Past President I. P. McNabb as Lieutenant-Governor of the central division of the Ontario-Quebec-Maritime district of Kiwanis, and in the awarding to the local club of the district efficiency trophy.

Mr. McNabb has been an enthusiastic and energetic Kiwanian, and the honor paid him at the district convention will be appreciated by his fellow-citizens generally, while the success of the local club in maintaining its high standard as compared with other Kiwanis organizations will also be a source of satisfaction.

The Peterborough Rotarians yesterday heard some good things said about their club by the Governor of the 27th district, and at the same time had evidence of how one of their activities had expanded to a degree not suspected when it was undertaken.

The fact that the successful operation by the Peterborough club of a summer camp for boys had so impressed a Porto Rican Rotarian who saw it in operation last year that he was able to establish a similar camp in his own island, was most gratifying to Rotarians.

Because, through the efforts of the local Rotary Club, Peterborough boys were able to enjoy the pleasure of an outdoor holiday, little Porto Rican lads had their first experience of such an outing for the first time this summer.

THE MAN AT THE WHEEL.

Lord Beaverbrook has given it as his opinion that in some ways Lord Birkenhead has the cleverest brains in the world. Be that as it may. Lord Birkenhead has a brilliant intellect, to say the least. And yet this clever man refuses to drive his own car. His reason is that he cannot concentrate his mind on the job of driving and he fears that in one of his aberrations he might cause an accident.

Driving a car along a highway, especially when there is nothing particular to catch the eye, is apt to become a monotonous business. The driving becomes mechanical. If there is not much traffic the driver's brain becomes a little atrophied. He is not keyed up to his job, and it is then that accidents can happen. The "brainy" man whose mind is not on the alert, is more liable to let his mind wander from his immediate job than the phlegmatic individual who does not exercise his mind at anything except his manual work. High intelligence is not a fair test of fitness for driving a car.

If there could be an intelligence test among those who have been involved in accidents it would not be surprising to find the higher percentage among those who earn their living in "thinking" occupations; although this is not to suggest that the craftsman is not also a brain worker. In any event, the man who can keep his mind on the task of driving a car, absorbing the scenery only with his sub-conscious intellect, is the kind of man needed at the wheel. An accident can happen through slipping a cog in the wheel of concentration for a second or two. The wheel of an auto is no place for the man of vagrant mind or the day dreamer.—Sault Ste. Marie Star.

THE NORTHWARD MOVEMENT.

"Watch the changing map of the North." These are the closing words of an article by Arthur Hunt Chute in the Saturday Evening Post, describing the Hudson Bay Railway. The article is remarkable when it is considered that it appears in a journal devoted to the material progress of the United States the bulk of its readers being Americans, whose delight is in boosting their own country. Take out a map of Canada and follow Mr. Chute's advice. Begin with Ontario and Quebec, whose marvelous wealth of minerals, forests and fertile land is carrying development farther and farther north. It will not be long before the T. N. O. Railway reaches James Bay, and it will be strange if Quebec enterprise does not demand railway communication with Canada's northern sea. Go westward to Manitoba, whose seaport at Fort Churchill will be connected with the National Railway system next year. Go farther west to Northern Saskatchewan, where a new national park was opened a few weeks ago. Then onward to Northern Alberta, where the Canadian Pacific Railway Company is acquiring a railway system serving the Peace River district, a fertile region larger than England.

It is not very long since the 50th parallel of latitude roughly marked, with some exceptions, the limit of development in Canada. To-day the 55th may be described as the starting point. Fort Churchill is nearer the 60th. The Peace River region lies between the 55th and 60th. Prince Rupert is not far below the 55th and Edmonton is in about the same position.

The Hudson Bay Railway is important not only as part of a new highway for Western grain, but as a means of opening up a new mineralized region. The railway from the Hudson Bay line northward to the Flin Flon mines has been completed, three months ahead of time. There will be an initial development of 30,000 horsepower, and there is plenty more for the working of the mines.

Saskatchewan as well as Manitoba is deeply interested in the new grain route, for it is the leading producer of wheat in the West and in Canada. Its grain growers will have a choice of three routes—the Hudson Bay, the St. Lawrence and the Pacific—the latter attracting probably some grain from Western Saskatchewan. The opening of the new national park shows that Saskatchewan has an eye for beauty, health and recreation as well as for material development. With the new railway service it may be expected that Alberta will run its sister Province a close race in the production of grain. British Columbia will be, indeed already is, a great Maritime Province, with the vast and rich prairie for a hinterland.

It is not boasting, but statement of a sober fact, that this northern movement represents the greatest new stage of material progress in the world. Canada, of course, has no monopoly of undeveloped resources. We may expect wonderful development some day in Australia, in Africa, in Brazil, in China when there is ordered government, and in Russia if its rulers ever grasp the idea of building up Russia instead of trying to Bolshevize the outside world. But Canada in additon to rich resources has government which insures safety for life and property, and a climate which, while rigorous in certain seasons and places, is better fitted for the nurture of a hardy race than the tropical parts of South America.

Such opportunities will not go begging. It is amazing that there is not a larger volume of immigration, but that is sure to come in time.—London Advertiser.

The Question Box

C.N. Q.—Where are the best lenses made?

A.—The city of Jena, in Germany, is generally given this credit, but United States now claims the honor.

F.O. Q.—What is a foot pound?

A.—A unit of energy equal to the work done in raising one pound avoirdupois against the force of gravity the height of one foot.

Curious. Q.—Who is "Marion?"

A.—Write and ask her.

W. F. Q.—What is a monsoon?

A.—a periodic alternating wind in the Indian Ocean.

A.D. Q—Will you please tell me if it is possible to melt rubber so that it will set again and if so, how is it done?

A.—The employment of "reclaimed rubber" recovered from old tires, etc. corresponds to the use of shoddy in the woollen industry. The rubber so recovered has not the same high degree of tensile strength as it originally had, but it is useful for many purposes such as the manufacture of rubber heels and rubber tiling for floors.

The process followed by a large rubber companies is to place the old rubber in a large vat where it is heated and wherein acids are used to remove foreign materials such as strengthening canvas. Then it is removed and put through a special rebaking process. For more detailed information see "The Manufacture of Rubber Goods, A. Heil and W. Esch 1909."

E.P. Q.—What is the value of this coin, if any. Am sending a facimile.

A.—Five to fifteen cents, according to the condition of the coin.

A Thought

"What Kind of Shoes Do You Wear?" (By Velma Runnels, Campbellford)

How often we judge people by the kind of shoes they wear. If their shoes are scuffed and unpolished, we are apt to say that the wearer of the shoes is an untidy, careless, poor person. If a person is very poor, his shoes can be made clean: a clean, though ragged pair of shoes is apt to gain a person a better name.

There are two kinds of footwear. The shoes that keep the tender feet from the roughness and thorns of the public highway and the ones that keep the feet guarded from the cobblestones of sin. The second kind of shoes is the kind that I wish to speak about.

O, how many are shuffling along up and down and in and out with a pair of dirty, muddy shoes on their feet. They are leaving their footprints behind them for others to see. Why are they not ashamed of those yellow marks they leave behind their trail? They don't seem to care whether God's land is kept beautiful or not. They lie in sin so black themselves that their footprints are not visible to their shadowed eyes. They are leaving a trail for the innocent to follow. They are leaving a record behind them that is widening the wasteland. How cruel and insulting to Our Father to wear such muddy boots. Let the sunshine of God's love clean and shine them up so that your footprints will dazzle the eyes of the crowd who is pressing on behind you.

Then comes the scuffled and torn shoes. They are clean but so ragged. Does any of your feet sit in these shoes? If so, why not patch them up carefully and ask God to clean them up bright. Many a ragged pair of shoes are owned by honorable men and women. They need to save up enough Grace and Faith in order to wear a brand new pair.

The crowd will not have to inquire from you what kind of shoes you wear. They all have their eyes open and will tell the next person about you. Don't wear the patent leather shoes that have such a lovely outward appearance at first, then have them crack every time you bend them. Shod your feet spiritually with the good old-fashioned kind that are dependable and serviceable to the needs of God. Don't let your shoe laces fly and make such a noise to attract attention. God is not deaf. All he needs to hear is the even tread of His peoples' feet. Tie your laces up tight and walk up the highway. Keep out of the mud and mire. Don't let the stronger will pull you in the ditch but pull yourself up to the higher heights and walk on grassy ground.

What kind of shoes do you wear? I hope many will answer: "Just the old-fashioned, ever-serviceable kind with a clean polish and the shoelaces tied up tight.

STERLING EXCHANGE

MONTREAL, Que., Sept. 27 (Canadian Press).—Sterling exchange rates were quoted here yesterday as follows:

Demand $4.84 9-16 to ¾.

Cables $4.84 15-16 to $4.85.

CHICAGO GRAIN

CHICAGO, Sept. 27 (Canadian Press). — Indications that export business in wheat from North America is on a broader scale than generally supposed, had a bullish effect yesterday on prices here. Besides, evidence developed showing a notable falling-off in the quality of wheat arrivals at Winnipeg.

Closing quotations on wheat were firm, 1 cent to 1⅞ cents net higher. Corn finished 1⅛ to 1⅝ cents up;; oats varying from ¼ cent decline to ¼ cent advance, and provisions unchanged to a setback of 35 cents.

Despite assertions that Canada and Argentina were both cutting prices to induce Europe to buy, the Chicago wheat market took an early swing upward, and the close was at virtually the day's top figures. Word came that Argentine offerings at Liverpool were smaller than they have been, and it was shown that exports of wheat and flour from the United States last month totaled almost double what they were in July, with North American shipments abroad for the last two months greatly in excess of the amount in the corresponding time last year.

Meanwhile, strength exhibited by the Winnipeg wheat market, with buying of future deliveries there for houses with seaboard connections was more than a counterbalance for talk of hedging pressure from the northwest. In addition, only sixty per cent of wheat reaching Winnipeg was reported as now grading No. 4 Northern or better, whereas the rule of late has been as high as eighty per cent. On the other hand, world available supplies of wheat increased 21,293,000 bushels for the week and are now 209,010,000 bushels against 163,661,000 bushels last year.

Frost reports from Illinois, Indiana, Iowa and Nebraska gave strength to the corn market, and so likewise did talk that Europe was after new corn from the United States, bidding within 2½ cents of a working basis. In some of the best sections of Illinois, thirty per cent of corn was said to show light to heavy damage from frost, mostly as to quality. Oats prices failed to show any substantial improvement, although St. Louis was reported buying No. 2 white oats for immediate transit, a situation seldom seen at this time of year with a liberal crop of new oats in farmers' hands.

Provisions declined as a result of downturns in the hog market to a level two dollars a hundredweight below figures current hardly more than a week ago.

MONTREAL GRAIN AND PRODUCE

MONTREAL, Que., Sept. 27 (Canadian Press).—There was no improvement in the demand from United Kingdom and Continental buyers for grain here yesterday, and the trade was quiet.

A feature of the domestic grain trade was the stronger feeling that developed for Canadian Western oats and prices were advanced two cents per bushel. This was attributed to the very light stocks available at Fort William and the fact that considerable quantities have been sold for October shipment which buyers are finding difficult to secure. Manitoba feed barley was also strong and prices were two cents per bushel higher at 79c.

The trade in spring and winter wheat grades of flour was fair and values were firm.

Prices for all lines of millfeed were firmly maintained under a moderate demand.

A stronger feeling developed in standard grades of rolled oats, and values were marked up fifteen cents per bag.

Owing to the increasing scarcity of strictly fresh eggs here and the good demand, a stronger feeling developed in the market and some jobbers advanced prices two cents per dozen. There was no change in other grades of fresh and storage eggs. The receipts were 498 cases.

There was no change in the condition of the market for imported beans, prices being maintained with a small trade passing. Broken lots of choice white hand-picked sold at $4.20 to $4.40 per bushel, ex-store, and car lots to arrive were quoted at $4 per bushel, ex-track.

Owing to the continued indifferent demand from all sources for butter, the undertone to the market remains easy and prices are gradually tending towards a lowel level. The receipts were 195 packages.

The export trade in cheese was dull but the local demand was fair and prices were unchanged. The receipts were 3,926 boxes.

BUTTER AND EGGS

TORONTO, Sept. 27.—Trading in a jobbing way for butter, cheese and egg products yesterday was only moderately active and prices steady in tone. There is a continued limited demand from all sources for finest creamery butter and while prices for finest and second grades have not yet been revised in a downward direction, the market undertone is displaying more easiness this week than last. Small, broken lots of No. 1 pasteurized solids, mostly for immediate requirements, changed hands between houses at 39¾c per pound, with seconds moving out in small quantities at a cent less a pound and fractionally lower in spots.

Lacking any noteworthy feature, trading in cheese at mid-week was not conspicuous. The market remains dull for this commodity with foreign buyers of Canadian cheese maintaining an indifferent attitude. Prices at seaboard have been reduced owing to lack of demand from outside sources which has encouraged trading on spot. Locally the market price for No. 1 new, large, colored paraffined and Government graded is stationary at 23½c a pound, delivered Toronto.

At all egg markets in Canada there appears to be a very heavy demand for the grade of fresh extras. The local market reports fresh extras scarcer and distinctly firm, while other grades remain steady. There has been no noticeable shortage yet in eggs, other than top trades, and with the market meeting a fairly good day-to-day demand from incoming supplies, dealers have not changed their paying prices only on highest grades, which are widening out in value. Offerings of fresh eggs from all sources, however, are not large.

Activity Of Rail Shares Feature At New York

NEW YORK, Sept. 27.—(Canadian Press).—The revival of activity and strength in railroad shares, presumably based on the announcement that freight traffic in the week ended September 15 touched a new high level for the year, featured the irregularly highr price movement in to-day's stock market. A violent recession development in a few specialties but the general list pointed upward on buying stimulated by a further easing in call money rates.

Call money renewed at six and a half percent and dropped to six around mid-day with loans in the "outside market" reported as low as five and a half percent. Time money and Commercial Paper rates held firm, but a larger supply of funds was available.

Freight traffic in the week ended September 15 totalled 1,138,321 cars, an increase of 10,669 over the corresponding week last year. Texas and Pacific assumed the leadership of the Rail group by quickly climbing 5½ points. St. Louis Southwestern moved up three points and New York Central, Great Northern Preferred, and Rock Island sold two or more points higher.

A. M. Biers was one of the strong features of the Industrial list, soaring more than seven points on buying influenced by reports that the company developed a new and cheaper process for the manufacture of wroght iron pipe. Radio and Case Threshing each jumped more than five points and Johns Manville, Electric Storage Battery, Electric Auto Lite, Abitibi Power, and Curtiss adpanced two to three and a half points. Railroad equipment shares were in brisk demand on expectations of heafily increased railroad buying, pressed steel car moving into new high ground, while American Car and Foundary advanced three points.

Toronto Trading Light With Changes Small

TORONTO, Sept. 27.—(Canadian Press).—Trading was very light on the Toronto Stock Exchange during the opening half of to-day's session. Of the listed issues only International Nickel and Brazilian displayed a normal amount of activity. The former was down 1⅛ at 124, and the latter was up a half at 59½. C.P.R. which returned to the board yesterday, scored a gain of two to-day on sales of two hundred shares at 220. Massey Harris was easier, dropping 2¼ to 43¼ and Western Canada flour gained 2½ to 41. Hayes Wheel dropped a point to 98 and Page Hersey was down ¾ at 103.

The bank stocks were steady.

The Oils continued to lead the field in the unliste dsection with British American, Imperial, and International Petroleum fairly active. British American was fractionaly lower at 41½, Imperial was down a point at 78¾ and International was down ¼ at 39¾. Service stations at 43½ was down a fraction. Walkers was less active today than it had been all week and declined fractionally to 62½.

Noranda Still Weak; Penny Shares Active

TORONTO, Sept. 27 (Canadian Press).—Continued weakness in Noranda was shown on the Standard Stock and Mining Exchange to-day. In heavy trading the stock had dropped $1.00 to $48.50 at noon. The opening was at $49.25 and during the morning a low mark of $48.25 was reached. The rest of the list was decidedly stronger than yesterday, though sales, except in a number of cheap penny stocks were light.

Mond Nickel tightened up and made a gain of twenty to $31.75. Abana, with a large turnover, was on the upward trail and closed with a gain of 13 at $3.70 after reading a high of $3.85. Hudson Bay advanced ten to $19.65 and Pend O'Reille was up 15 at $13.90. Hollinger at $8.60 was up ten. Sherritt Gordon at 6.60 was unchanged and Amulet was down three at $3.31. Heavy trading met a number of the cheaper issues, sales in Picard, for instance, running up to 457,000 shares. The stock was up one at 2½. Others of this class were Bunker Hill, up three at 17, Murphy, up two at 58, Newbec unchanged at 53½. Potter Doal, up a half at six, and Capital Rouyn down a quarter at 16½.

Wheat Prices Hit Record For Crop

CHICAGO, Sept. 27 (Canadian Press).—Fresh upturns in the price of wheat early to-day hoisted the May delivery to the highest level yet for the crop. The rise was attributed largely to higher Liverpool quotations and to cables telling of a prospective grain shortage in Russia. Opening ¾ to two cents up, Chicago wheat later held near to the initial figures. Corn started at ⅛ to 1¼ cent advance but subsequently reacted a little. Oats were firm. Provisions tended to sag.

Opening prices were: Wheat, September 116¼, December 119. Corn, September 96⅞, December 79½. Oats, Septembe 42⅛, December 42¾.

MINING BRIEFS

A Special Service to The Examiner

Anglo-Sudbury Mines Holds Properties in Sudbury Basin and Two Other Fields.

An erroneous impression of the activities and holdings of the Anglo-Sudbury Mines is at present entertained by some people due to an incorrect item published in a recent edition of a northern mining paper.

Anglo-Sudbury holds properties in three distinct mining areas, namely, the West Shining Tree field, the Ridout Basin and the Sudbury Basin, between the International Nickel and Sudbury Basin Mines.

Diamond drilling has been proceeding on the Ridout Basin holdings for the past month and a half, the Financial News Bureau is informed officially. The hole is now down between 400 and 500 feet and officials state that results to date have been very good.

Permanent buildings have been erected at the properties and the companies owns its own diamond drilling outfit.

Anglo-Sudbury is conservatively capitalized at $600,000, shares of a par value of $1 each.

British Capital for Control of Reno Mine.

Captain Chas. E. Hutton, representative of a number of British capitalists, has completed a deal under which his principals secure control of the Reno mine near Salmon, B.C., in the Sheep Creek district of West Kootenay, the initial payment of $30,000 having been paid.

Lake Geneva Mines Ltd. Equips Property for Rapid Development Under Ground.

Lake Geneva Mines Ltd. started work on the erection of its plant on September 14, according to official advices and a contract is being let to sink the shaft 250 feet and do 600 feet of drifting. The drifting will be done on the main vein.

The shaft will be two compartments and all the machinery for the mining plant is on the ground. It is anticipated by themanagement that rapid headway will be made in development work.

Part of the equipment for the mill is already on the ground. A good set of camp houses have been erected and these camps are large enough to bring the property into production.

Before Lake Geneva Mines was incorporated to take over the property, it had been explored thoroughly by Towagmax Exploration Co., which has maintained a substantial interest. Comprising 950 claims, the property is located three miles from the C.P.R. station at Geneva in Hess Township, in the Sudbury district. Some 20 drills were put down along the strike of the main ore body, which extends for 2,000 feet at least. In their report on the property, Alderson Mackay and Armstrong, consulting engineers, estimated a probable ore tonnage so far as exploration went of 77,350 tons, of grade running 3.32% lead, 9.53% zinc and $1.65 in gold and silver, contained in a vein of an average width of 4.1 feet. The lead content in in the limited extent of the ore body covered in the report was valued at $308,003; zinc, 883,189, and gold and silver, $127,901, making a grand total of $1,319,093, or an average value of $17.06 per ton.

Results from the amount of work done were so satisfactory that the management determined to finance the undertaking and bring it to a production basis, by the formation of a separate company, as result of recent financing, the company is assured of $250,000 cash, which is regarded as sufficient to bring the property to a production stage. That there will be no delay in placing the company on a self-sustaining basis, is indicated by the comprehensive development plans that have been brought to completion and the delivery of parts for the concentrating mill.

From Our Vancouver Correspondent.

Vancouver.—While no official anoucement has yet been forthcoming as to results of the diamond drilling campaign this summer at Pend Oreille Mines and as to future plans of the company, it is anticipated that this very important report will be ready for Pend Oreille share holders around the end of September.

The recent western tour of E. W. Beatty, president of the C.P.R., and Sir Herbert Holt, with a number of directors of the Canadian Pacific Railway, resulted in a considerable amount of discussion as to whether the purpose of their visit had any bearing on the Pend Oreille situation. They gave no indication that such was the case, although it is understood that some discussion took place during their visit to Trail, in which the affairs of Pend Oreille are said to have come under attention.

It is also stated that ten to twelve million dollars will be raised to be devoted to the construction of a large concentrator and possibly a smelter. It is further suggested that these funds will be raised either by increasing the capital of Pend Oreille or by its being taken over by some large operating company. These discussions, while interesting, are still in the nature of surmises and nothing definite or of an official nature will be made available until Mr. Larsen, the president of the company, is ready to make some announcement covering the entire situation.

In the meantime development of the property at Metaline Falls is being carried on at a very favorable rate, and Pend Oreille is continuing to prove it contains one of the greatest ore deposits in the Pacific Northwest.

McIntyre Speeding Exploration at Moffatt-Hall—Rapid Headway Being Made at Parent Property.

McIntyre-Porcupine Mines has between 17 to 20 men working on the Moffatt-Hall property, in Kirkland Lake Camp, which it acquired under an option. Efforts are being concentrated in making a thorough going survey, including trench work on the several showings before the snow comes. As the property comprises over 500 acres, this is no small job.

The company wants to secure as complete data regarding geological conditions and ore occurrences at the Moffatt-Hall so that an effective diamond drilling campaign can be carried on during the winter months. If drill results are satisfactory then shaft-sinking will be undertaken.

At the parent property of McIntyre in Porcupine steady headway is being made in deep development. The exploration drive from the end of the south crosscut from the No. 11 shaft at 3,850 feet is being pushed east and west and will be carried to the Coniatrum line on the east and to Hollinger on the west. The ore body encountered not far from the crosscut along the east drive comes into the drive at a slight angle, and appears to have a northeast and southwest strike. Drilling will be done into the greenstone formationlying between two porphyry dykes. The greenstone is the formation that carries the gold and is wider at 3,850 feet depth than it is on shallower horizons. As ore bodies are located in the greenstone they will be opened up by crosscuts and prepared for stoping. This exploration drive at 3,850 feet will be 1½ miles long.

Conditions in the workings east of the No. 11 shaft are interesting. The good length of ore opened up at 1,800 feet depth is believed to be the downward extension of the Jupiter ore body which above 1,200 feet and furnished a large tonnage of good pay ore. Until the intervening 600 feet are explored, however, the management will not commit themselves as to this. Similar good ore has been opened up at 2,300 feet depth, which appears to be still deeper extension of the Jupiter ore zone. If further work at intervening levels conforms expectations, McIntyre will have here an extensive ore body practically from the surface down to at least 2,300 feet. This will undoubtedly make a lot of ore.

The company is treating ore at the rate of between 1,400 and 1,500 tons daily, and reports from the camp are that millheads have been stepped up. If McIntyre Raintained a recovery of $8.20 per ton, the output per annum would be $4,500,000.

Advices from Rouyn are to the effect that Mining Corporation commenced construction of a new road into the United Verde yesterday and that it is understood that extensive developments are planned.

Lateral work on the 700-foot level Vipond continues satisfactory. It is reported that an electrical survey of the property is being made. It is understood also that lateral work is proceeding on the 600-foot level in the hope of cutting extensions of the good ore found at the lower horizon.

It is reported that officials of McVittie Graham Mines state that in the drill hole directed to intersect the extension of the Worthington ore deposit of the Monk Nickel Company on McVittie's Totten property, has just entered it at a depth of 1,234 feet and is still in good ore at 1,284 feet.

This bulletin is in a position to announce further particulars of the sensational new strike at Red Lake, which is said to be the most spectacular of the district. The find consists of a dome of quartz, 700 by 350 feet, which raises approximately 60 feet above the level of the lake. Three distinct veins are contained in this showing and these have been traced for lengths of 700 to 900 feet. Samples of this ore shown in Toronto are the most spectacular since the days of the old Croesus.

Several estimates of reserves contained in the dome run from 1½ to 2 millions tons.

A company known as the Bobjo Mining Company has been formed to operate this find. The company holds approximately 1,320 acres in one group. Capital is set at 5,000,000 shares of $1 each, of which 2,000,000 will be issued for the property, leaving the remainder of 3,000,000 shares in the treasury. A portion of this stock has been firmly underwritten so as to net the treasury $200,000.

It is understood that directors will include Robert Jowsey (Bob-jo), K. T. Fletcher, Percy E. Hopkins, and Fraser Reid.

The No. 2 shaft at the Murphy property, which is being sunk on the No. 5 vein which was found on the recently acquired claims, is now down 30 feet, on its way to 100 feet. The workings are said to be still in commercial ore and that values are improving. This veing is known to be at least 40 feet wide but its entire width will be determined by a crosscut at the 100-foot level.

A mining plant is now oeing installed on the Graham Malartic property, adjacent to the Lartic. It is thought that interests identified with Stobie, Forlong of Toronto are behind this venture. Previous surface work yielded encouraging results.

Northern Light Hits High Grade.

Vancouver.—Following a now well-defined porphyry zone all the way, the new low-level tunnel which is being driven on the Northern Light ... near Stewart, B.C., is now in 60 feet, according to a telegram received ... W. H. MacKoe, president of the company. The crosscut from this tunnel has progressed to 60 feet, while a drift has been run another 10 feet, making 155 feet of tunnel footage, all in ore.

Officials of the Northern Light Mines point out that importance of this porphyry zone, in which a shoot of high-grade ore is being followed, lies in the fact that it has been found identical with the geology of the Premier Mine ore, which the Northern Light adjoins. The low-level tunnel is now approximately 2,500 feet from the proven ore zone and heading towards it.

In view of this promising trend in the development, G. R. Bancroft, the company's consulting engineer strongly recommends the installation of a suitable plant and the continuance of the development along this zone during the winter months.

Aberdeen Ore Found in Shaft.

Some good ore has been uncovered in the main shaft of the Aberdeen Mine near Merritt, according to officials of the company, who have recently returned from the mine. The ore was uncovered at a depth of 265 feet, and working is now being concentrated in an effort to locate the main body.

L. Rosenthal, managing director, stated that the ore found at this depth runs high in copper, and is a continuation of the vein now located between the 200 and 250 foot levels. At the present time besides the work in the main shaft, a second shaft is being sunk between that and the Ten Mile Creek, where a 12-foot lead was discovered earlier in the year.

Developments at Bolschatel Mines Ltd.

Recent unexpected demand and heavy trading in Bolschatel Mines has given rise to speculation on the street as to what was behind the movement. During the past few days over 1,000,000 shares of the stock changed hands on the Standard Exchange and this is indicative of developments of importance.

Bolschatel owns claims both in Rolyn and in Kamiskotis, the latter situated close to the Aconda Mines property. At a special general meeting held in Febraury last shareholders of the company approved the acquisition of the Adoan Copper Mines, Ld., which held claims adjoining the Bolschatel's original Rouyn holdings. This gave the company a large acreage immediately north and west to Towagmac.

It is now learned that Bolschatel has entered the Chibougamau field, with properties in the Lake David section. L. E. Harkness has now gone into the field to look over the properties.

It is also reported that a deal has been made with Montreal and New York interests to supply funds for development of the company's original Rouyn holdings.

The second annual statement up to May 31st of this year showed that the company had 1,861,600 shares of stock yet unissued.

At this time the managing director, Thos. Charlebois, expressed the opinion that owing to favorable results obtained on properties neighboring Bolschatel ground and the good geological conditions revealed on the claims held by the company public interest in the stock would be accelerated.

Enough Ore on Six Levels at Teck-Hughes to Run Mill Sixteen Years.

After engaging a well-known engineer to write his opinions of Teck-Hughes Gold Mines Ltd., the firm of Stratton, Hopkins and Hutson, published the report, which may be accepted as giving new information, particularly that it has very long life. It is siad there is five years' supply of ore at the present mill tonnage above the 1,480 foot level. From that level to 2,230 foot depth, development drifting is said to have shown three ore sections of a total width of 70 feet. The average grade is $20 per ton, and the length approximately 1,000 feet. A conservative figure of $50,000,000 ore is reported for these six levels, or sufficient at present rate of production to last for 16 years.

CHARMING GOWNS.

Longer Skirts For Dress Wear, With Short Ones For Sport, Are Featured.

A snug fit at the waist line with a full free skirt were a distinct feature at the Pageant of Autumn Fashions given yesterday and to-day in the Teco Store by the T. Eaton Co., of Toronto, under the direction of Miss Farrand, of New York, with her seven mannequins from Toronto.

Miss Farrand gave an outline at the introduction of the pageant of the distinctive outstanding features which are prominent for fall wear. She commenced her talk by stating that women will be glad to know that feminism has been retained; it is absolutely as marked in the east as it is here.

"Length always worries a great many," she said. "When we see some with their skirts a little longer, or a little shorter than usual we are not sure what the proper length is. Sport and street clothes are just as short as before, but there is a decided tendency to lengthen afternoon and formal evening clothes. Latest reports from Paris say they should be five inches from the centre of the knee cap. Evening frocks, however, drop to the ground—always longer in the back than in the front, with a distinct tendency to drop to a great length in the back.

"Two-piece costumes for sport wear are still correct. A new note in the fall fashions this year is the snug waistline. An almost initial requisite for this, however, is the retaining of the girlish contour." The Princess Silhouette for evening is very pronounced with its long, close tight-fitting waistline.

Color is very prominent this fall. Black, however, is just as prominent and important. A person is considered very well-groomed when wearing a well-cut black frock. Fashion pronounces a deep rich brown and various shades of tan and beige as being very prominent. Beige is a very hard color to wear and some persist in wearing the cold, hard tone of beige. Following brown comes red, and any shade of blue is acceptable. Dark spruce green will be very smart and will be used a great deal later on when one tires of brown and red. There is a deep rich wine for the sophisticated woman.

Printed velvet is the outstanding fabric for fall. Every woman will succumb to a frock of this fabric sooner or later. The designs are tiny, not like the large patterns used in the chiffon frocks this summer. Shiny satins are also very smart, but they are absolutely for formal wear and not for morning or street wear. These must have three things to make them chic: simplicity, suitability and becomingness. For morning and daytime wear, dull surface and light wool crepes are smart. Sport clothes are made almost invariably of jersey.

Gloves Important

Gloves are a very important accessory. The neutral tone of beige in a gauntlet style, slightly wrinkled at the wrist has the ruling this fall. It is always best to buy gloves that are washable. White gloves are only permissible when wearing a black and white costume.

Most attractive gowns were displayed suitable for sport, afternoon and evening wear, and were shown to great advantage and very gracefully by the mannequins.

A light weight tweed for sport wear with a sand bodice had a separate jacket of a bolero nature. Distinction was made between the active sport costumes and the spectator sport. A heavy coat suitable for travelling was of a rough material with a huge coon collar, while one of a better material suitable for the person who was having only one coat, was of kitten's ear trimmed with sable. For the more mature woman there was a coat of black broadcloth trimmed also with sable, but with more feminine interest shown. This would be considered as in better taste for the older woman.

Furs are Flatter

Flatter furs are preferable this season. Clipped caracul trimmed with Canadian sable retained the straight line feature. Northern muskrat, which is considered best for the younger person, will wear almost a lifetime, while the Persian lamb is chosen for the older woman, and considered very smart. The main difference in the fur coats is the changing fashion of the trimming.

The snug sensation at the hips with the free and easy skirt was almost invariably mentioned as the models came and went. Tiers will be worn a great deal and considered very smart, whether they are pleated, as they were on a dark blue georgette which was suggested as one which everyone would include in their wardrobe; or they may be ruffled or practically plain. Satin faced crepes show preference with the dull side exposed, and the shiny surface used as trimming. A lovely printed velvet was shown in a green shade with a tendency toward blue, had a very small black feathery design in it, almost invisible to the eye. A warm beige frock had a huge bow caught at the centre of the back of the neck and hung becomingly over each shoulder. Black and white is still considered very smart, with it may be worn white gloves, preferrably the gauntlet style.

For Evening Wear

For evening wear probably the most serviceable shown was of a black velvet, having only as its trimming white gardenias at the shoulder and a brilliant at the left side. Lace is still considered very suitable for afternoon and evening wear, as well as the ever suitable taffetas and georgettes. One should never try to wear hose to match one's costume—a neutral shade of beige as that of the gloves should be worn almost continually—even with a grey costume.

Evening wraps consisted of the quiet wrap of gold brocade or the more sensational one to match your frock of maroon red. And then the dazzling gold and sequin wrap which was worn by Gloria Swanson when last in New York, brought forth a number of whispered murmurs from the audience.

The mannequins presented a very pleasant effect as they were especially suitable to the numerous frocks because of their slenderness. They were: Miss Garbe, understudy of Miss Toronto; Mrs. Marshall, the Misses Card, Laithead, Penue, Stephens, and Burby.

Talk on Peterborough.

The talk on Peterborough given by Mr. Copeland of station CKGW staff was as follows:

"It is hard to talk about Peterborough without sounding like a piece of publicity or a bit of horn-tooting exaggeration, and yet one should not tamper with the truth in order to sound honest: so how can one begin without saying that Peterborough is a most beautiful city? Because it is "Not merely large panoramic beauty, but intimate beauty—available beauty—beauty accessibe, like Lowell's 'Day in June,' to 'the poorest comer.' And a man in the humblest car—or any car—may go forth camping and fishing and hunting in such places as only millionaires can afford in the congested South and East.

"So, lakes and rivers, parks and boulevards, vistas and climate are there for everybody—beauty and a place to play. There is effulgence of beauty—and bounty—for all the hot, tired, crowded children in all the hot, tired, crowded corners of the United States and Canada.

"Golfing, eight months in the year. Fishing, hunting, bathing, boating, tennis, the aquaplane, and an infinite variety of other sport is available to folk in all circumstances and from all walks of life.

A City is People.

"After all, though, a city isn't just scenery or climate; or money in the bank; or tall buildings. A city is people. And Peterborough is people—people of a definite type. They are different. They look out of their eyes straight. And they are hospitable to a fault, thrifty and creative. I wish I could paint a word-picture of their homes; their shrubbery; their churches; their institutions; and their streets. But you must see these to appreciate them. You must visit Peterborough, and it will repay you.

"Perhaps it is in the cryptic statistics concerning a city's Public School system that the test of a people's reverence for culture lies. By such a test, Peterborough might be, in miniature. 'The Athens of America.' This may be due to that community love for the home ideal which in turn expresses itself in a love for young people and their education. You have gone sight-seeing in so-called educational centres where they drove hastily past their school buildings to show you something else. Not so Peterborough, for whose children the best is none too good. Visiting Peterborough, you would be shown the palatial school buildings—as 'parliament buildings' they have sometimes been described; the Normal School for the training of teachers; the High Schools; and the latest investment, at a cost of almost half a million dollars, the new Vocational School, to open this year. The turning of the first sod for the Vocational School on July 1st, 1927, the Diamond Jubilee of the Confederation of the Dominion of Canada, was a memorable event in the history of Peterborough. It marked a century of educational progress. The city's educational facilities are now of the most complete, offering in addition to rudimentary education, teachers, matriculation, general high school, commercial, household art and industrial courses. Also, the Board of Education have already considered the advisability of including a course in agriculture as a part of the regular carricula of the Vocational School. The directors of technical education are in sympathy with this step and have assured the board that the usual grants will be forthcoming when this department is functioning.

Activities Numerous.

"Church life in Peterborough is rich and abundant and much of the cultural life finds its expression there. The club activity—well, at first glance the city seems very much 'clubbed'; but, analyzed, this is found to be more of a continuity of national club life than an individual and well-defined expression of its own; probably because the city is still so young. And yet the clubs and organizations have local and community perspective. One group has built the Peterborough Industrial Exhibition to be the greatest spectacle of its kind in Central Ontario. A service club is now putting on, with a musical festival, its third annual Produced-in-Canada Exhibition, October 15 to 20, attracting attention, exhibits and entries from all of Ontario and even the Dominion. Other banner far and wide in the field of athletics.

"And the public market—another inevitableness of a home city. Everybody markets in Peterborough; frankly and openly, in baskets; not because it is a fad, but because it is—handy; and dinner is important where the home is important. The busiest executive in the city remembers to bring home a bunch of celery for dinner—and so does everybody else. Everybody lives in a home. The public market is expressive of the affluence and fertility of the extensive farming and dairying area of which Peterborough is the hub and shopping centre. There the city man and agriculturist meet weekly to trade and discuss the topics in which both are interested.

"A waterway two hundred and fifty miles in length, the Trent Waterway, unique in North America, comprised of a series of navigable rivers and lakes connected by short canalizations, claims Peterborough as its city and provides electric power for Peterborough's numerous industries and for those of neighboring municipalities.

Many Industries.

"A word about these industries—ten of which are branches of United States concerns, and two of which are of English parentage; there are forty-five in all and several are the largest of their kind in the British Empire. The past year has seen three new industries attracted to Peterborough and an expansion program adopted by various others approximating close to five millions of dollars.

"Time will not permit my enumerating the various nationally known products of the industries of Peterborough, save to say that the city is known as the home of the canoe; of the skil; of the snowshoe; and of the outboard motor. Its manufactures also include cereal products; crayons; chalks; railway marking pencils; ales and beer; electrical machinery and appliances; woollen goods; carpets; yarns; mill, mining, hydraulic and pulp machinery; agricultural implements; locks and builders' hardware; boots and shoes; pork products; dairy machinery and appliances; fur garments; flour and feed; printed goods; dairy products; sanitary ice; lumber; pumps and wind engines; woven labels and lace; steel ranges; marble products; clocks and watches; gummed, coated and glazed paper; asbestos products; sails, tents, awnings and waterproof goods; cigars; ready-cut houses; paper boxes; toys; confectionery; automobile springs; showcases and store and office furniture; elastic tapes; brick and tile; whitewear; mattresses; aerated waters; paper containers and milk bottle caps, etc., etc.

"For centuries the Indian tribes inhabiting North America found a natural meeting place where important trails and water routes met on the Otorabee ('Winding') River, which, running through Peterborough, connects two of the Kawartha Lakes. They gave the Kawarthas the significant name, 'Bright Waters and Happy Lands.' It was here that Champlain found them, the Hurons, the Iroquois and other famous tribes, in the year 1615.

"The picturesque tribes no longer visit the Kawarthas, but are replaced by increasing numbers of tourists, who annually find healthful relaxation in the fir and balsam-scented glades adjacent to the numerous resorts and lodges of the Kawartha Lakes-Trent Waterway area. Instead of the trail, we have the state highways, the railroad and the waterway, which have opened up a new world, as it were, to the harassed business man and the folks whose lot it is to reside in the congested areas of North America.

"In its beauty and importance, as its Chamber of Commerce would say of Peterborough, in the expansion of its institutions and industries, and in the achievement of its citizens, here and abroad, Peterborough has gone beyond provincial and even national bounds into the realm of world re-

SUMMER COTTAGE ENTIRELY REPAIRED

"Windermere," Mrs. Wright's Home, at Trent River, is Charming Resort.

(Examiner Correspondence)

TRENT RIVER, Sept. 27.—The Windermere, the fine summer home of Mrs. James Wright, has been undergoing considerable repairs during the season. This resort is situated on a rise of ground facing the main channel of the Trent Valley Canal, along the south shore, near the Government grounds. Mrs. Wright and her late husband have been spending the summers here for a number of years, returning to Toronto for the winter months. Mr. Wright's death took place a year ago last August. Mrs. Wright left Toronto last February for the Pacific Coast, where she spent five months, visiting several cities along the coast, returning to Windermere shortly after. This summer home has had a new thatched roof put on of twin giant shingles, the front verandah has been enclosed with screening, the outside being faced part way up with stained shingles, new slate steps have been placed at the front and rear entrances, and the exterior of the cottage all newly painted. The late Mr. Wright was at one time an interior decorator and finished some of his work of art, just for amusement, when he was 77 years of age. Some of these modellings consisted of the following: A lion, life size, in cement, this being placed on the front lawn on a foundation of slate; "The Fisherman" and a "Gargoyle."

Mrs. Wright expects to remain at Windermere as long as weather permits, when she will return to Toronto.

Improves Summer Home.

Mr. Leo Breen, Havelock, has been having improvements made on the grounds of his summer residence. All the stones have been removed and the entire lot levelled.

Indians Gather Rice.

Three families of Indians are camped on Mr. Isaac Lawson's shore during the gathering of the rice crop. In one family where there are several small children, the youngest an infant of two months old, seems to thrive wonderful, sleeping out in the open these frosty nights.

Personals.

Mrs. M. McNichol left Monday for Toronto after having spent the past few weeks at "Sum-er-inn."

The Misses Kathleen and Virginia McNichol arrived Saturday to spend two weeks with their father, Mr. M. McNichol at "Sum-er-inn."

Mr. and Mrs. Herbert Rose, Miss Ethyl and Grace Lewis leave Wednesday for Toronto after spending the past two months at "Ye Olde Mill."

The Planter of the Tree

By RUBY M. AYRES

WHO'S WHO IN THE STORY:

SALLY LINGFIELD, dancer at the Faun, a London night club.

JOSH AKERS, a waster, with whom Sally was once in love.

PHILIP SANDERSON, rich young man of wealth, who early one morning, when drunk, runs over Sally, badly injuring her. Sanderson loves Sally.

SOMETIMES, Sanderson's dog.

MRS. KIFF, his landlady.

Josh Akers, hearing of Sally's probably permanent injury, says he is through with her. Sanderson assumes her care, and establishes her in a cottage with Mrs. Kiff in the country. There she meets and falls in love with GARRY NAIRN, the rector's son. Sanderson, wretched because she prefers Garry to him, takes her to London for an operation which may restore her health. Garry goes, too, and meets Josh Akers, who says something insinuating about Sally's past. So Garry runs away, with only an inadequate written letter to Sally.

XXXVII—NIGHT AND DANGER

Garry walked on up to the vicarage and met his father at the hall door. For a moment they looked at one another silently, then the elder man said sharply:

"That little girl?"

Sally! They all thought first of Sally, Garry told himself bitterly, even while he answered that she was all right—going on as well as could be expected.

He avoided his father's eyes, knowing well enough the question he would read in them.

"I got your letter," he explained clumsily. "I thought I'd run down for the day and see how you are."

The vicar glanced at his son's suitcase, but made no comment, and they went to the study together.

"So she's going on as well as can be expected. I've thought of her so much; she's a brave little thing, Garry."

"Yes."

"And the doctors say—what do they say?"

"That she's going on as well as could be expected."

Stupid! But no other words would come to Garry's lips. He only wanted to be let alone, not to be questioned.

There was a little silence, then his father said sympathetically:

"It must have been a great strain for you, my boy."

"For me? Oh, yes, of course!" Garry laughed rather foolishly. "Sanderson got blind drunk last night. Not a bad idea, either, now I come to think of it."

"Sanderson is a very fine man," said Garry's father.

Garry turned round and stared at him.

"A man for whom I have the greatest admiration and respect," the vicar said again firmly.

The housekeeper came to the door; she had heard Garry's voice.

"Have you had any lunch, sir?"

"Yes, thanks—yes, I've had lunch."

She came forward to take Garry's suit-case, but the vicar stopped her.

"Mr. Garry will be returning to London this evening," he said quietly.

Garry said nothing, and the housekeeper went away murmuring something about clean shirts and collars.

After she had gone there was an eloquent silence; then Garry broke out angrily:

"I'm not going back."

Mr. Nairn showed no surprise; he sat down at his writing-table and began turning over some papers.

"Oh, very well," he said evenly. "I shall be glad to have your company."

Garry turned to the door, hesitated, then came back.

"Look here!" he said almost rudely. "You're a parson; you ought to know. What would you do if a woman—a woman you thought a lot of—in the past, before you knew her—— You're a parson—— Oh, hang it all, you ought to know——"

He was stumbling, incoherent.

Mr. Nairn looked up from his papers, and his eyes were infinitely kind and understanding.

"It depends just how much I thought of her," he said gently. Garry laughed roughly.

"That's an easy way out—non-committal! It's so easy on paper, when you're not personally concerned; but when it comes dead home to you——"

"Are you sure it's true, Garry? Come back and sit down and tell me all about it."

But Garry would not sit down; he wandered about the room, aimlessly picking up things and staring at them, and then throwing them down again as he told his story in dis-connected words.

"A man at the club—we got into conversation. I didn't care for the look of the chap, but he was someone to talk to—to pass the time. Knew Sanderson—and he asked after—after ——"

He could not force himself to speak Sally's name.

"Go on," said his father gently.

"Well—well, he told me—swinish things. It was damnable——"

"What did you do?"

"I hit him."

"You hit him—to show you did not believe his story."

"I suppose so—yes; it was my first impulse, anyway."

"I believe in those first impulses, Garry."

"I know; but afterwards, when I'd had time to think it over—when I'd seen Sanderson——"

"You told him about it?"

"No. How could I? He'd have lied, anyway—for her sake. What was the use?"

"And so you ran away."

Garry flushed hotly.

"I got your letter. I came down."

"Without a word to—your friends?"

"I left Sanderson a note."

"I see."

Garry paced the length of the room again.

"Well? Well?" he demanded. "What do you think? If you were me, what would you have done?"

"It would depend how much I thought of that poor little girl."

"If I had thought less of her it would not have mattered."

"If you had thought more of her it would have mattered less," his father answered.

There was a bitter sneer on Garry's face.

"It's the parson speaking, not the man," he said hotly. "I was a fool to tell you—you're not in a position to judge. You don't understand what it means—a man like Sanderson—a degenerate—a drunkard——"

The vicar looked up, and for the first time there was a spark of anger in his eyes.

"Degenerate and drunkard both, if you like," he said steadily; "but still a greater man than you, Garry."

He rose to his feet and came across to his son, laying a hand on his arm.

"That little girl loves you," he said.

"Yes; at least—I suppose so——"

"She is going through all this for you?"

Garry nodded.

"Yes; at least——"

"Go back to her, then, my boy! If you don't you may be sorry all your life."

Garry tried to speak, but no words would come. He looked at his father and then out of the open window to the garden beyond, peacefully basking in the sunlight; but he thought of the close atmosphere of Sanderson's disreputable club, and of Josh Akers' leering face and insinuating voice.

"We went shares for her favors for months——"

He broke away from his father's detaining hand.

"I can't go back—I can't!" he said desperately.

Late that night Sanderson was sent for to go to the nursing home. Sally had had a relapse, and long hours he sat by her bedside, his eyes on her face, his heart in torment.

"Is she going to die?" he had asked the nurse who met him outside the door, and when she had hesitated he said sharply:

"Please don't lie to me. I can stand anything but lies."

"It's impossible to say. Her heart is very weak; that was the great danger all along."

Sally had not opened her eyes once, and she seemed unconscious of or indifferent to Sanderson's presence. They had plaited her beautiful hair to keep it out of the way, and it lay in shining coils on either side of her white face, tied pathetically with blue ribbons which the little nurse had brought from her own room.

Sanderson never stirred. Only once when the doctor came he raised his eyes, but nothing was said, and he went back to his old position once more.

"You can stay all night if you wish," the little nurse told him presently, and Sanderson nodded in acknowledgment. He would have stayed anyway; nobody would have been able to turn him out.

RICHARD HALL LIMITED

it means all to the average minister it should mean. We are creatures of habit, he said. We go to bed, rise in the morning, eat, and in fact do a great many things as a matter of habit and he thinks it would be a splendid thing if we could break through some of those habits and our spiritual development woud be much benefitted if the habit of going to bed early was broken for one night and the night spent in prayer.

In closing Mr. Allan took a portion of the 6th verse of Melachi, 2: "He walked with God in peace and equity, and did turn many from iniquity," and said: "There is no greater honor than to be privileged to walk with God, not only your minister, but that each one of you will walk with God. May he say of your minister at the close of each day, each church year, in darkness, sunshine, sorrow or joy and at the close of his life, "that he walked with God."

James Dutton.

Mr. James Dutton next addressed the congregation and expressed great pleasure to know the congregation was going to be settled again, and he trusted that it was the beginning of a very happy relationship for Knox church. He had been privileged to meet quite often with the congregation and he was interested in their welfare and hoped that it was the beginning of a real spiritual refreshing for them. The call to a minister was very much in the nature of a contract, he said, involving the congregation on one part, the presbytery on the other, the minister coming in between. The call promised encouragement, obedience to the law and contribution to the maintenance of the minister.

The presbytery for their part satisfies themselves that the one called is a fit and proper person to become a minister of the church.

The calling of a minister is a very solemn thing and ought to be a sacred thing. Mr. Dutton said there was not the measure of respect for the office of the ministry as there used to be. There was an unfortunate habit of referring to the minister as preacher and also another practice of calling the minister by his Christian name. Sometimes the minister is to blame because a man will only command the respect that his conduct warrants. "Never forget that your minister is human," he continued. He is only a man with a man's strength, with a man's failing. When you feel like blaming him just pray for him instead, remembering the minister has his own problems and not only his own, but also those of his congregation. I know of no better way of helping your minister than to pray for him and if opportunity offers with him. In speaking to a few of the elders, Mr. Dutton said it was quite often the custom to leave the minister alone before the services on the Sabbath day, and he suggested that they meet with the minister in the vestry and pray with him before he goes into the pulpit.

In closing he appealed for a greater measure of loyalty not only to the local congregation but to the church as a whole. These are days of reconstruction in the history of the Presbyterian church and one of the great tasks is that of building the great walls of Zion. At this time there was never a greater need to recognize the rules as laid down by the church which are the outcome of careful and mature thought that the work may be carried on in an orderly way. We want our Presbyterian church to be a great church. Great only as she realizes the thing that can make her great, namely, when people and minister communicate with the Head of the Church. He again expressed the hope that the relationship entered into between minister and congregation would be a long one and that they would have a time of spiritual prosperity.

TORONTO BROKERS BATTLE CHINESE

Fight in Cafe Causes Much Damage—Two Men Injured.

TORONTO, Sept. 26—While a curious throng gathered in front of the Cabin Chinese Cafe, Adelaide street east, about 8.30 last night, two men engaged in a pitched battle inside the restaurant with the Chinese waiters.

Chairs were hurled about the place, curtains were torn down and flower pots went whizzing through the air, as women in the place screamed and rushed toward the front entrance. Some one locked the front door while police were telephoned. Screams from inside the cafe, together with the sound of furniture and plates being broken caused a number of persons to line up in front of the place and crane their necks to witness the fight.

When Plainclothesmen Priest and McCrea got inside they soon brought the fight to an end. William G. Whitley, broker, of 755 Yonge street, was found to have a number of nasty scalp wounds. A police ambulance was summoned and he was taken to St. Michael's Hospital. After his injuries were dressed he was brought back to Court street station, where he and his broker chum, William de Uchy, 229 Dunvegan road, were held on charges of being disorderly and doing malicious damage to property.

Whitley at first was reported to have been stabbed by a Chinese waiter. A search of the restaurant was made by police and they could find no blood-stained knife. The wounds on Whitley's head, doctors said, were not caused by any sharp weapon.

One of the men arrested claims to have lost a cigaret case valued at $130. The damage to furniture and dishes was estimated last night at $30.

OBITUARY

ARTHUR L. BRIEN.

DUNSFORD, September 26. — The funeral services for the late Arthur Lawrence Brien, who passed away in the Ross Memorial Hospital, Lindsay, on Saturday morning, September 15, after an illness of two weeks following an operation for appendicitis, were held at the home, two miles west of here, on Monday afternoon, and were very largely attended, there being nearly 150 automobiles in the procession.

The service was in charge of his pastor, Rev. J. P. Everson, of Dunsford United Church, assisted by Rev. Canon Marsh of Lindsay. The late Mr. Brien was a faithful member for many years of the Dunsford Methodist (now United) Church. He was a member of the Finance Committee and last spring was honored with the highest position on the circuit, having been elected recording secretary for Dunsford Circuit to succeed Joseph N. Taylor, who moved to Bobcaygeon.

The deceased was also a member of L.O.L. No. 86, and of the Black Knights, both of which were represented in large numbers at the funeral and conducted their respective parts of the service.

The sympathy felt by neighbors and friends and the esteem in which the deceased was held were manifest not only by the large crowd but by the profusion of floral tributes.

The late Mr. Brien was a son of Mina Thurston and the late James Brien, and was born thirty-one years ago on the farm where he was living at the time of his death.

He leaves to mourn his loss besides his widow (nee Gladys M. Cross) a little son, John Lawrence, four months of age, his mother, two sisters, Mrs. Torrance Robertson of the Scotch Line, and Mrs. Stanley Werry of Peterbooush, and two bothesr, Melville of Fenelon Township and Oswell of Toronto.

The pall bearers were Walter Brien, Stanley Brien, Arthur Thurston, Torrance, Robertson, Edward Cross and Osborne Taylor.

Interment was made in Dunsford Cemetery.

DEANERY CHAPTER MEETS IN APSLEY

Anglican Clergy Will Assemble To-morrow at St. George's Church.

APSLEY, Sept. 26 ((Examiner Correspondence). — The Fall Rural Decanal meeting of the Deanery of Peterborough will be held in Apsley on Thursday and Friday, September 27 and 28, and nearly all of the clergy of the Deanery has signified their intention to be present, and it is hoped that representatives of the Peterborough Laymen's Association will also attend. The Rev. Dr. T. Stannage Boyle of St. Peter's, Cobourg, will preach on Thursday evening at St. George's Church, and also read a paper at the session on Friday morning. Thursday afternoon will be taken up with a business meeting at two o'clock, followed by a study of the Greek Testament conducted by the Rev. T. J. O'Conor-Fenton of Norwood. At noon on Friday a pilgrimage will be made to the Holy Cross Rock near Loon Lake, which will be followed by a boat trip down the lake to Rockwood, the residence of Mr. and Mrs. Alex Woods, who will entertain the party to dinner.

The United Church at Apsley had a record congregation on Sunday evening when the harvest thanksgiving service was held, the church being filled, many coming from a long distance. The church was prettily decorated with flowers, fruit and vegetables. The Rev. W. H. Taylor conducted the service and preached an appropriate sermon on the words, "Give us this day our daily bread," and the choir rendered special music singing two anthems; Mrs. W. Lean presiding at the organ.

Wolves are starting early this fall in their annual depredations. Al. Harris is reported to have had a yearling devoured by these pests a few days ago just south of Apsley, while W. Tucker, to the north, had a sheep killed and partly eaten quite close to the house.

Let us figure on your new furnace

It begins with a flawless furnace—one of the very first to be built on scientific B.T.U. principles—the only absolutely correct method of measuring furnace heat and heat losses.
The Findlay Furnace has leak-proof joints, a big oversize water pan that assures moist, health-ful air at all times—in all rooms . . . a dozen feat-ures of merit . . . from ash pit to radiator dome.

Installed by Experts

The Findlay Warm Air Heating System is installed under the guidance of heating and engineering experts. Heating diffi-culties are therefore met and overcome at the outset—not in the dead of winter. When the installation is made, simply fuel up, light up—and every room in your house is heated properly.

Guaranteed

Findlay Installations are guaranteed. Two things make this guarantee possible: the Findlay Furnace itself; and scientific installation. They are the only real bonded systems offered today.
Write for our book, "Heat and Health with WARM AIR." Ask also for the Findlay Service Chart, which makes it easy for you to draw up an exact plan of your house. From this we will give you—without charge or obligation—an estimate of cost for installing the Findlay.

Why We Do What We Do.

WHY THE PROHIBITION LAW IS HARD TO ENFORCE

By Mehran K. Thomson, Ph.D.
(Author, The Springs of Human Action)

It is generally admitted that the prohibition law is hard to enforce.

Apart from the merits of the law itself and the methods used to enforce it there are several interesting psychological considerations.

The prohibition law is retroactive in that it legislates against a habit already strongly established in a fairly large number of people who find themselves unable or unwilling to break the habit. Hence the scoflaw.

A great many others who have no such fixed habits violate the prohibition law for the thrill of doing the popular naughty thing. This is the most serious obstacle in the path of enforcement.

There are no class distinctions among "criminals" against prohibition. If anything the rich and upper classes are the greatest offenders. They can afford the cost and know how to evade the consequences. This practice and attitude are envied by the classes who usually envy everything that their "betters" do.

The moral ideals and practices of the people must always be superior to the written laws of the land in a democratic form of government. The rub comes when a relatively large minority are not in sympathy with any specific law. Law enforcement is always embarrassed when any considerable number of people refuse to co-operate.

Without questioning the right of the majority to impose its will on the minority the fact remains that the minority when sufficiently strong can throw a good-sized monkey wrench in the administration of the law they dislike.

There are many reasons why the prohibition law is hard to enforce. Some of these are ineffective methods of enforcement, corrupt officials, fixed habits of inebriety, the profit motive on the part of the bootlegger, etc. By far the most significant psychological reasons are that a relatively strong minority oppose the law and the fact that the practice is not yet fully outlawed socially.

Why do you do what you do? Write Dr. Thomson, care of this paper and send stamped envelope for reply.

LYRICS OF LIFE

I SHALL BE LEAVING

I shall be leaving in a few days now,
And now I find myself so many a time
Pausing upon the steps I used to climb,
Trying to take the whole thing in, somehow.
Perhaps I had not noticed that and this,
But now I know, the hour of leaving here,
That every little object I shall miss,
And every humble pebble will seem dear.

'Tis not the vista that I linger for,
The world has other vistas I shall see;
But only memory will bring to me
The little vistas from my own back door.
For all earth's paths will not have one like mine,
No railing give such comfort to my hand.
Here I know every leaf of every vine,
Who soon must tread some unfamiliar land.

The world is very lovely, gray or green,
And one's own world the loveliest of all,
For here the heart has memorized the wall,
And every blade of grass the eye has seen.
I did not know how much I really had,
How much I loved each brick, each bending bough,
How much this little house had made me glad
I shall be leaving in a few days now.

UNCLE WIGGILY

By HOWARD R. GARIS

Every-days Bedtime Story

UNCLE WIGGILY AND THE ALLIGATOR

(Copyright, 1928, McClure Syndicate.)

Uncle Wiggily was taking home a rubber ball filled with water to give it to Johnnie Bushytail, the squirrel boy, from whom it had been taken by the Lady Mouse Teacher in the Hollow Stump School as I told you in the story before this. And you remember how, after Uncle Wiggily had tried the squirt ball for himself, all of a sudden, after he had filled it with water for the third time, and had wondered if there was anything magical in the number three, all of a sudden a voice in the bushes said:

"Something is going to happen!"

"Who are you?" asked the rabbit gentleman as politely as he knew how, for he could not see who was speaking.

Up came waddling the Skillery Scallery Alligator.

"You'll find out in a minute!" exclaimed the voice, and out from behind the bushes came the Bob Cat with his silly little tail.

"Oh!" exclaimed Uncle Wiggily, surprised like.

"You didn't expect to see me, did you?" asked the Bob Cat, twisting his silly little tail around like a door-knob to get it out of the way, for he was going to sit down on one of many flat stumps near the place where he had caught the rabbit.

"No, I didn't expect to see you," said Uncle Wiggily.

"Sit down until I take a good look at you!" went on the Bob Cat, picking out for himself a low, broad stump and pointing to another not far away. "Sit there!" the Bob Cat told Uncle Wiggily.

The rabbit gentleman was wondering what to do with the squirt ball full of water that belonged to Johnnie Bushytail, and, not wanting to hold it in his lap for fear it would dribble, Mr. Longears laid the ball down on a flat stump near him.

The Bob Cat was so hungrily looking at Uncle Wiggily that the Bad Chap never noticed the rabbit lay the squirt ball of water down on the stump near him. Anyhow the Bob Cat wasn't very clever. He never would have gotten to the head of his class if he had ever gone to school. He was quite a dumb bell, if you will allow me to say so.

"Yes, you are fatter than ever, Uncle Wiggily," snarled the Bob Cat. "In fact, I have never seen you looking so well."

"I don't feel very well," said poor Uncle Wiggily. "I wish you would let me go ask Dr. Possum to give me something for my nerves."

"No, indeed!" howled the Bob Cat. "If I were to let you go you would never come back here so I could nibble you," which was true enough. "Let me see now," went on the Bob Cat, "which ear shall I nibble first, the left or the right? I think I'll try the right."

"Oh, please don't nibble either of my ears!" begged Uncle Wiggily.

"But I must! I am so hungry!" snarled the Bob Cat, and just as he was going to get up off his stump and go over where Uncle Wiggily sat near where the squirt ball of water was on the other stump, all of a sudden up the path came waddling the Skillery Scallery Alligator with the double-jointed tail.

"Oh, hello!" bellowed the 'Gator. "I see you've caught Uncle Wig."

"Yes," answered the Bob Cat. "Sit down on that stump and help me make up my mind which ear I ought to nibble first—the left or right. Oh, isn't Uncle Wiggily nice and fat!"

"Just about right for a potpie," gurgled the 'Gator, and he sat down, without knowing it, on the rubber ball full of water. No sooner had he done so than a stream of water squirted on the Bob Cat.

"Look out who?" bellowed the 'Gator.

"You!" snarled the other. "You squirted water on me!"

"I did not!" snapped the 'Gator, getting up to shake his tail at the Bob Cat.

"Yes, you did!" snarled the Bad Chap with the silly little tail. "There you go again!" he cried as the 'Gator sat down again on the ball, squirting more water, this time in the Bob' Cat's eye. "I'll fix you for that!"

The Bob Cat rushed at the 'Gator and slapped him, and the 'Gator, not knowing he really had squirted water from the ball, clawed the Bob Cat and, goodness me! They had a great fight there. And while they were fighting they forgot all about the rabbit, who grabbed up the squirt ball and ran home with it. So he wasn't nibbled after all.

TELLS DYSPEPTICS WHAT TO EAT

Strict Diets Often Unnecessary

It is a well known fact that some foods have a strong tendency to produce excessive stomach acidity and consequent indigestion. By omitting from daily meals those foods that experience proves do not agree and limiting the diet to certain tasteless unappetising foods, stomach troubles may in many instances, be slowly overcome. Nine times in ten, however, indigestion, gas, etc., are due to excessive acidity and the premature souring of food in the stomach. Keep the stomach clean and sweet by freeing it of this extra acid, and then sufferers can eat the foods they like best and as much as they want in reason and have no stomach trouble at all. Thousands of people do this daily by merely taking after every meal a little Bisurated Magnesia, which can be had at any good drug store in either powder or tablet form. Bisurated Magnesia instantly neutralizes stomach acids, stops food fermentation and meals digest as naturally and painlessly as in the stomach of a healthy child. Stomach comfort means a lot and most folks like good things to eat. Enjoy them both by making Bisurated Magnesia your daily after-eating protection.

Joyous sparkle . . . rare, dry flavor . . . "Canada Dry," the drink of connoisseurs

"CANADA DRY" is served at the embassies in Washington. It is served at the Savoy in London . . . at St. Moritz . . . in tens of thousands of homes in the Dominion. There must be some reason for this universal appeal.

"Canada Dry" is made from pure Jamaica ginger and other absolutely pure ingredients! It is blended with a care and skill which come from generations of makers.

This is really the reason for the distinction of "Canada Dry." The result? A really fine ginger ale which you can distinguish from all others as you distinguish a rare old wine. No wonder it is drunk wherever distinguished people gather! No wonder you will want to serve it to lend that final note of elegance to your dinners! No wonder it mixes well with other beverages.

LETTERS

Here is a nice poem by Charles Soder:

I looked at the sky
on an evening dark,
The stars twinkled
low and bright;
And listening to the bells of evening,
I said: "No moon to-night."

The fairies shall dance in the deep-wood dell
When the stars are
low and bright,
And you may look up to the sky and tell:
There is no moon
to-night.

When you write another poem, Charles, send it in so the other members can read it.

THE MIRROR OF THE MODE
By Mary Marshall.

Perhaps a revived princess silhouette will come next. It was offered by a number of the leading French dressmakers when they showed the fruits of their recent labors late in the summer. And it was presented in such a way that one felt that they hoped it would eventually find favor, but did not expect to have it adopted in a wholehearted way at present. The frocks and coats modeled along this new princess silhouette constituted a sort of opening wedge. But it may take more force and power than all the dressmakers in Paris possess to break through with this wedge the solid wall of prejudice that now exists.

We sigh for something new in fashions, complain that the French dressmakers have lost their originality and inventiveness. Buyers come home from Paris—many of them—with the sigh that there is nothing new. In the meantime we are wedded to the straight silhouette, at least for street wear, and when anything really new is presented we refuse it or wear it reluctantly. To be sure, for evening and formal afternoon styles we are persuaded to abandon the straight lines—but we are very slow, indeed, to give up the straight up-and-down lines for daytime.

Still there is much talk about the new princess silhouette and occasionally one sees a well-dressed woman wearing a coat or street frock of this sort. One concludes that she has brought the frock or coat from Paris, since very few of them were bought by American buyers for model purposes.

The princess silhouette is fairly close-fitting in the region of the waist, usually with some sort of flare below the hips. This rather close following of the lines of the body combined with an absence of belt or anything else to break the continuity of lines of the figure makes up the combination of characteristics which in the language of dressmakers is called "princess."

SAFETY MAT

Every bathroom should have two mats, one to step out onto when finished, the other one of the "safety" variety, made of suction rubber caps which will not slip with you when you stand on it while taking a shower.

THE WHATNOT

A Place for Little Bits of Everything of Local Interest

By MARION

THERE'S a practice followed by one Peterborough family that seems to me very desirable. Periodically, the husband, wife, and child have a meal in a George street restaurant. Meals away from home are especially delicious to the housewife. They are much more appetizing than those she has to plan, shop for, and prepare.

It seems to me that every family might well adopt this plan of giving the managing head of the house a day's relaxation once in a while. If the men can eat downtown—and none of our correspondents last week seemed to give good reasons why they should not—why shouldn't the women have the same privilege occasionally?

It would be satisfying to sit down to a meal one has not had to worry about—but that satisfaction would be as nothing compared with that of seeing various members of the family sit down to meals that have been planned and prepared without any regard for their various prejudices.

Grandma may have always insisted on English breakfast tea, to the dismay of the busy housewife; that fact doesn't interest the waitress at all. They don't have that sort of tea in George street restaurants, and grandma has to drink her orange pekoe and be content.

Father has always had freshly fried thin cut potatoes, but naturally enough they are not to be had in the restaurant. Father looks sorry for himself, but no one else is specially interested.

James has some finical notions about his salads—can't endure a drop of vinegar on them, and you have always taken pains at home to make two salads, one with vinegar or dressing for the rational members of the family, and one without for James. In the restaurant he has to eat the salad as it is served, or go without.

Six-year-old Susan has never got out of the way of having her milk served just warm. In the restaurant it is served either hot or cold. Tepid milk doesn't interest the Peterborough restaurant keeper at all—and so six-year-old Susan decides she'll take it cold.

After having a meal or two at a restaurant in company with the family you actually begin to wonder why you took the family's prejudices so seriously. If you haven't been in the habit of dining out, it will do you good to try it.

There may be some things you don't like about restaurant fare, but everything is seasoned with the sauce of novelty at least, and made appetizing by the thought that you had nothing to do with its planning or preparation.

Did you ever play epigrams? At a bridge party not long ago someone suggested it, and it was tried out with some success. The epigrams were not perfect, by any means, but the players had a lot of fun and some mental exercise.

The south-end hostess who sponsored the party suggested topics on which the guests were expected to make epigrams. I jotted down some of the attempts, all of which may not be original, and here they are.

The first question was: "What quality do you seek in a man?" and the answer I thought best was: "The weakness of a strong man."

"Does one find happiness in love?" the hostess asked, and a school teacher answered: "Love is the hope of happiness." That is good.

Here's one that is almost too deep for me; perhaps you will understand it. "What is your interpretation of real, sincere love between man and woman?" was the question. A guest answered, as nearly as I can remember, "Sincere love means to live the one for the other—for everyone is by nature an egoist."

Probably best of all was the answer returned by a middle-aged woman to the question "Is love worth while? Does it pay?" She said, "There is always happiness in love, even when it causes us suffering. Suffering is not too great a price to pay for love."

It seems to me this idea of the south-end hostess might be developed into a very interesting and instructive game. Don't you think so?

The pattern diagram this week should interest many—it is of a slip with pleated skirt attached, easily made and suitable for many occasoins. It is free on request.

I will make an effort on Saturday to print all the recipes on hand, and I wish to ask readers to send in more. I know they are appreciated. Here is a note from an Examiner correspondent: "I find the ladies of this district are intensely interested in these recipes, and are quite willing to let me have their favorites."

A PLEA FOR APPRECIATION OF THE BEAUTIFUL

By W.P.

"Fields afar look green," is an old and familiar proverb, which has different applications. We hear of the peaceful beauty of the Annapolis Valley, the charming Thousand Islands, Rideau and Muskoka Lakes, and other picturesque "bits" of scenery so plentifully scattered throughout this vast Dominion, but do we, as citizens of this particular section of Canada see and appreciate the beautiful and picturesque scenery that surrounds us on all sides? Not long ago we heard a lady who had been across the continent seven times, say that Peterborough was a central point for some of the most beautiful scenery she had even seen. A gentleman who had travelled extensively in the South gave expression to much the same opinion.

The trouble with most of us is, we fail to notice a beautiful scene or view unless it is pointed out to us. It is, to some of us at least, like the taste for good music—it has to be cultivated.

For beautiful "bits" of scenery it would be hard to surpass those to be found in the little village of Keene, and vicinity. The views southward over Rice Lake and some of its bays, are worthy of the brush of the true artist. From some of the Northumberland hills, south of Rice Lake the views are superb. Some beautiful scenery is to be observed near the little village of Baltimore.

Coming nearer home, who has not noticed the scenic beauty of this city as it is viewed from the Port Hope Highway, a few miles out, or the smiling landscape and sparkling waters of Chemong Lake, as they travel along the fourth line of Smith, towards Fowler's Corners?

Along the Twelfth Concession of Cavan to Fairmount and Mount Pleasant, the eye can see in a southerly direction for 20 to 25 miles, and on a clear day, even farther. When conditions are favorable, Lake Ontario can be seen sparkling in the sun.

Nor must we forget the north with its scores of lakes, shimmering in the summer sun, and surrounded with frames of green. These lakes are in some cases better known to tourists from Ohio and other States than to citizens of Peterborough.

If we have a taste for the beautiful, let us be thankful—and cultivate it.

"Dear Marion,

Here I am again with a few more ideas that may help the neighbors.

I think every farm should have its kitchen garden. Even if the home maker is willing to pay the price for buying vegetables, she is better to have her own stuff. She does not have the tasteless imported early stuff, it is true, but she can have good vegetables for three hundred and sixty five days in the year. If she buys canned stuff, the vitamines are destroyed, as in her own, but she does not need to have much canned stuff.

Canned tomatoes are better sealed just after coming nicely to the boil, corn may easily be dried or canned, so may peas, though the canning is more difficult. Beans may be put in brine, and the crocks filled just as the beans come along. Squash, onions, carrots, beets, turnips, cabbage, parsnips, salsify, may easily be stored for winter use. With these stored and the little drying or canning a good variety of vegetables or vegetable combinations, for use as salads, in soups, or as vegetables until early spring things come along. Asparagus is easily grown, and a very small bed provides abundance. Then there are the field beans. Parsley may be grown in a box in the cellar window. A few herbs, such as sage, thyme, may be grown in the garden, are no trouble, unless the rains bruise them down when they first appear.

With a good kitchen garden the housewife may have just what she wants, and when and the products are always fresh and clean, and nothing has been mentioned that anyone with even a small plot of land may not have.

There is a difference in soils and exposures, as to what one may expect to have very early or have of more tender plants, such as melons, but cucumbers and citrons should grow in almost any garden.

A hot bed is a great aid to early things, but it is a bit more work. A cold frame too, is a great aid.

Jerusalem artichokes are splendid for late fall and early spring, and may be left in the ground for spring use, as parsnips are.

Quid Est."

"BLIND" VALUE

Whereby we infer that the actual value of a Fur article lies deeper than the eye can see or the hand can feel.

Most precious things can be readily appraised because their quality is in evidence.

A precious stone is valued in relation to its size, color and perfection. Furs, however, though they reflect their beauty, do not disclose the integrity of their origin, nor the care and diligence with which every process was employed in their preparation and manufacture.

GOOD FAITH AND RELIABILITY OF DEALER

THE HISTORY OF THE PELT from the animal and trapper to its conversion into a Fur wearable IS THE EXPRESSION OF THE TRUE VALUE OF THE FUR GARMENT; manifestly THE TRUE VALUE IS NOT ENTIRELY DISCERNABLE TO THE EYE OR TO THE TOUCH, and that is why GOOD FAITH AND RELIABILITY REMAIN THE CORNER-STONE OF A FUR BUSINESS STRUCTURE.

A Fur Coat or Scarf may look ever so lovely, but there is a "BLIND" SIDE OF WHICH YOU KNOW NOTHING. It may seem ever so cheap in consideration of the value put on it, but ITS "VALUE" MAY BE EXTRAVAGANTLY OVER-STATED IN ITS PRICE, when one considers whence its origin, its preparation, and its making.

HONEST REPRESENTATION

The Fur customer must necessarily be placed in the relation of client to expert—the furrier must know furs—their character, how prepared and manufactured; also be able to reasonably inform the customer upon the wearing possibilities of Furs inspected and their suitability to the use required.

RED WINGS LOSE FIRST GAME OF SERIES

INDIANAPOLIS TAKE FIRST GAME 3 TO 2

Score Two Runs in Eleventh Inning to Win Game

PITCHERS' DUEL

Both Teams Held Scoreless Up Until the Sixth Inning.

ROCHESTER, N.Y., Sept. 27.—(Canadian Press).—In an 11-inning pitchers' battle, the Indianapolis Indians took the first game in the "Little World Series" from Rochester yesterday 3 to 2.

Steve Swetonic and Vic Keen, leading righthanders of the two clubs, opponents scoreless for six innings, went the full route and held their

Two walks, one of them intentional, and a trick double in the eleventh gave the Indians two runs and the game, although the Wings pushed over one in their half and had two men on the bags when Kaufman flied to Warstler for the final out.

Both teams threatened in the early innings but were unable to bring in a run.

The Wings filled the bases in the fourth but Keen flied for the last out.

In the fifth and sixth frames, double plays by Gelbert, Torporcer and Monahan stopped rallies of the Indians. The play in the sixth came after Toporcer's boot of Matthews' grounder and Haney's single gave the Indians a big chance to put over a run.

Keen's wild toss of Spencer's sacrifice in the seventh allowed Blenkiron, who had singled to score, the first of the game. It looked like the American Association champions would get another when Spencer went to third on Warstler's out, but Felix cut him down at the plate after taking in Burrus' fly. It was the Red's third double play.

The Wings got the first run in the eighth on singles by Gelbert and Monahan.

Cool weather kept the opening day crowd to a total of 4,703 paid admissions. The teams meet again to-day and then rest a day. Playing here on Saturday and Sunday.

BRITISH PLAYERS LEAD GOLF FIELD

Place Five Within First Six in French Championship Play.

PARIS, Sept. 27 (Canadian Press).—British contenders, placing five of their number inside the first six, led the field yesterday after the first six, led the field yesterday after the first 36 holes of play in the French open golf championship at Laboulle.

Henry Kinch, Surrey professional, led the field with 72-69—141, while Cyril Tolley, the former British amateur champion, with 74-68—142, was tied for second place with H. C. Jolly, another English pro., who scored 73-69—142.

Next in order was Henry Cotton, England, 72-72—144; Marcel Dallemagne, France, 72-73—145; George Duncan, England, 70-76—146; Aubrey Boomer, France, 74-73—147; Rene Golias, France, 73-75—148.

Tolley's 68, four under par on the well-trapped La Boulie layout, was the best round of the day. Abe Mitchell, Arthur Havers, two British stars and Arnaud Massy, French veteran, withdrew, the latter because of a bad case of rheumatism.

BELLEVILLE TEAM DEFEATS WALKERVILLE 3-0

ONE BIG INNING BRINGS VICTORY

Nationals Win Out By Rally in the Fourth—Outhit Chicks.

GIBSON HURLS WELL.

BELLEVILLE, Sept. 27.—In one of the best contested games ever played in Eastern Ontario, Belleville Nationals evened the series with Walkerville "Chicks" in the senior O.B.A.A. final play-off by winning 3 to 0 here yesterday afternoon. The third and deciding game will be played in Guelph on Saturday.

The Nationals had their backs to the wall and the 2,500 fans who braved the wintry breezes were treated to a brilliant pitchers' battle. Hoot Gibson, ace of the Nationals' staff, literally stood the vaunted sluggers from Walkerville on their heads. He allowed two clean hits and one of the scratch variety, a total of three, and only one runner reached third base.

Gibson Fans Eleven

Gibson struck out eleven of the opposition and apparently was not bearing down at any part of the journey. He did not walk a man until two were down in the ninth.

The Chicks, in desperation, gave the umpires a ride, and Gatecliffe, the flashy second sacker, who struck out three times, on the third occasion threw his bat in disgust. Umpire Alex. Kay immediately ejected him from the pastime, and after a short argument the police were called to restore order.

The Nationals broke down the sturdy defence of the "Chicks" in the fourth frame. Speedball Burns in this frame lost his control and pinked Harry Mills, while Peeney Mills, who incidentally caught a perfect game, slahed a hot grounder at Gatecliffe, who fumbled in his hurry trying for a double play.

Then "Wicky" Ross dropped a trick Texas Leaguer back of third and Harry Mills raced home while W. Mills raced to third. Ross dashed to second on the throw in, and when Blakely drove the ball at Edwards and the first sacker threw home, the bases were populated.

A. Weir batted for Hagerman and while Blakeley was being forced at second, W. Mills scored and Ross took third. Gibson did much to win his own game when he slashed a single to centre scoring Ross with the third and last run. R. Scott also singled, A. Weir going to third, but V. Weir forced R. Scott at second to end the rally.

Gibson will be sent back at the "Chicks" on Saturday, and should give the opposition an argument before he is downed. The Nationals believe they have taken the measure of the "Chicks" and that a senior title will be brought to Eastern Ontario, the first since 1919.

CARDINALS LEAD IS CUT IN HALF

Leaders Lose To Brooklyn While Giants Are Idle.

CUBS BEAT PHILLIES.

BROOKLYN, N.Y., Sept. 27. — The long right arm of dazzling Dazzy Vance sprinkled loads and loads of salt upon the proud tail feathers of the strutting Red Birds, here yesterday afternoon, and just as the obliging fowl were performing all their smartest tricks for the delighted pitcher, Gink Hendrick stepped to the plate and unfeelingly slaughtered the flock of them.

The Gink did it with his little home run bat while three Robins were roosting contentedly upon every available perch in the seventh inning, with hardly a thought of moving from where they were. The Gink caught one of Red Bird Mitchell's choice spitters and sent it on a ride to far and distant parts for a complete trip around the bases and safe transportation home for all the Robins on the bases.

Cards' Lead Reduced

This blow enabled the home flock from Brooklyn to humble the St. Louis foe by a score of 6 to 1 so to reduce the Mound City margin in the pennant race to a bare half game over the Giants, who sat idle in the chill of the stands. Perhaps there should be a law against such brutality, but John McGraw will not be the one to introduce it.

Cubs Still In

PHILADELPHIA, Pa., Sept. 27.—The Chicago Cubs closed their 1928 books with the Phillies here yesterday afternoon by pounding the home club for an 8 to 3 victory, behind the fine pitching of Perce Malone. This not only gave the Cubs 13 out of 22 against the Phils for the season, but also kept the McCarthy band in the pennant race—from a standpoint of mathematics, at any event.

The Cubs crawled up one full game on the leading Cards, and now trail by four and one-half contests. The Bruins have five to play and the Cards have four, so any St. Louis victory or any Chicago defeat would automatically knock the Cubs.

GOOD EXHIBITS AT STIRLING FAIR

special feature was a working parts display of the Continental Red Seal motor. This attracted a crowd of motor fans during practically the entire afternoon.

The Baby Show

There were five prizes awarded in the baby show, and all were won by the children from the village of Stirling or the vicinity. In the opinion of the judges, the children were all fine specimens of childhood and their task was not of an easy nature. The first prize was awarded to Jack Miller Bush, age 6 months. The second prize went to Douglas Ackers age 10 months. Marjorie MacLeod, age eight and one-half months, was third, with Barbara Ann Reid, thirteen months, in fourth place. Vera Stapley, a beautiful child of two months, won the fifth prize.

Horse Racing Featured

Horse racing was one of the feature attractions for the major portion of those present. George Tice of Belleville was the man who handled the bell and got the horses off to good starts with a minimum of trouble. C. Armstrong of Frankford was the man who announced the official time, and the judges were Clayton Tucker, Thomas Montgomery, and Arthur MacDonald. The rule of three prevailed. There were three races and three horses in each race. There was but one exception and this was in the three-minutes-class event, when five horses started and two were withdrawn at the end of the first heat. Each race required only three heats.

In the free-for-all, Dick Sunday, owned by McCracken and driven by Smith, went around the track twice in 2.19½, winning first place in all three heats and first money. Hal Pointer, owned by Bauff of Smith Falls, was a little slower and managed to run in second place in all three heats. Fred Patch, owned by McNaught of Tweed, got third money with third place each time. The purse was one hundred dollars divided into fifty, thirty, and twenty.

The second event was the named race. Like the first race, there were only three horses entered and only three heats run. Leo Stewart, owned by Sullivan of Frankford, did the mile in 2.22½, and was awarded first money with three firsts to his credit. Red Peter, owned by Walsh of Hastings, ran second in the first two heats and third in the final round. He was awarded second money. Norma Direct, a Smith's Falls horse, got third place with a third in the first two heats and second place in the final test. The purse was eighty dollars, divided into forty, twenty-five and fifteen.

There were five starters in the three minute class, but after the first heat, Vasseau of Trenton withdrew his Lucky Lulu, and Morris of Stockdale took Silver King out of the running. Vasseau's horse was the last to finish and the Stockdale entry was fourth. The first heat was the fastest of the three, being run in 2.29¼. Marguerite Mac owned and driven by Ross Turley of Frankford, won three firsts and first money. Dorothy H., owned and driven by F. Rush of Stoco, ran second three times and won second money. Flossy Pointer, owned by Garrison of Frankford, pulled down three thirds and the third money. The purse for the race was thirty dollars divided into fifteen, ten and five.

At the end of the racing there was an exhibition of lady driving. In the opinion of the starter and judges of the speed events the judges of this feature had their hands full. Even to these experts of the trade, there was little to choose between the seven competitors either in horsemanship or in the turnouts.

During the afternoon, the Stirling band furnished music on the grounds. This group of musicians have not long been organised but they are to be highly complimented on the high standard of music which they played during the afternoon. There music was one of the high lights of the fair.

Evening Attractions

When the band stopped playing and the race horses left for home, the crowd began to think of supper time, but this was no sign that the gala day was a thing of the past for another year. At night, the town was gay and there were many attractions which served well to round out a perfect day. There was the usual movie attraction in the Stirling Community Theatre, widely known for its entertainment of the highest standard. In the ball room on the second floor of the community hall, Tommie Mason and his Rythm Kings supplied the music for dancing. Arlie Marks, well known for many years throughout the district, and her company, were the attraction at the Academy Theatre. The fair grounds was also a place of attraction for the younger crowd and some of the older folk who somehow or other, thought it beneath their dignified age to ride on the machines of the midway during the afternoon. Bright lights and plenty of music attracted the merry makers to the midway of Joyland shows.

In the opinion of practically everyone yesterday was a perfect day in the village of Stirling.

LAKEFIELD FAIR GREAT SUCCESS

varied, with echoes of the past shown in old-fashioned pieced silk quilts.

The flower show was exceptionally small this year, marigolds and dahlits were prominent with one exhibit of pansies, one of everlasting, and one of salpiglossis. The dahlias were remarkable; one collection showed about a dozen of special named varieties of exhibition size and remarkable beauty of color and contour. This was the outstanding feature of the cut flower section. There were a number of house plants which made a very attractive display, some of the specimens being rare and very choice.

The grain was fair but the number of sheaves was disappointing but where quantity was lacking in some classes the list forged ahead in the school fair. The exhibit of art was very large, the writing and map-drawing classes were smaller, but with a better average. The continent of South America was the subject for the map drawing this year, and the work was good.

The school vegetable and domestic science exhibits were good and almost if not quite up to last year.

The domestic science entries in the adult class were remarkably good; cakes, pies, biscuits, cookies and bread, the triumph of the art of cookery, all were especially fine.

Many Cattle

The horses were very light, but there was a large cattle exhibit with the sheep and hogs very fair. In these days of specialists in stock raising, it is hard to get a large all-round exhibit, but this year it was good.

The poultry was very good, better than for some years, and the rabbits were the joy of old and young. A pair of Angora rabbits were the greatest attraction of all, and held court for a large, admiring crowd, in all their white and pink loveliness. There were also Chinchilla rabbits, soft grey-brown little fellows, a little shy, but worth seeing.

The entries in the athletic events justified fully their introduction into the program, and next year they will no doubt have a larger place in the attractions. Several of the scheduled events were omitted through lack of time, but one lives and learns, and next year the program will be revised.

Motor Car Race Pleases.

The slow motor care race was very funny, and attracted plenty of interest. The race called for a start in high gear and the car that made the slowest time round the track won the race provided the engine did not stall. Eight cars entered and more than half actually finished without violating the rules. Each driver was accompanied by a neutral who kept the time. This was a novelty worth while, and if the same inducements are offered again, the list of entries will be much larger. The winning car was owned by S. V. Irwin, of Oshawa, and the time was 15 minutes. G. G. Connell's car made it in 8.35 minutes, taking second place. C. G. Tanner with 8 minutes was third, and S. J. Charlton with 7 30 minutes was fourth.

The performance of John Crapp in the athletic events demonstrated that athletics are not merely for boys of school age.Mr. Crap made a splendid showing in both running high and running broad jumps. The Kemp brothers, Norman Lemay, Clayton FitzGerald, Dominick White, Bob Kingdon, Robert Nicholls, Donald Dever, and Harold Schwar, all did good work.

George Wannamaker was the "Longboat" of the foot races, and a newcomer, Eugene Giannini made a good showing.

In spite of wind and weather the Fair was a success in every respect, and the directors can pat themselves on the back that they put over a show well worth coming to next year.

The officers and directors of the Agricultural Society are as follows:

1st Vice-President—John Blakeley.

PILES GO QUICK

Without Salves or Cutting

Thousands who have piles have not learned that quick and permanent relief can only be accomplished with internal medicine. Neither cutting nor any amount of treatment with ointments and suppositories will remove the cause.

Bad circulation causes piles. There is a complete stagnation of blood in the lower bowel and a weakening of the parts. Dr. J. S. Leonhardt found the remedy and called his prescription HEM-ROID. He tried it in 1000 cases with the marvelous record of success in 96 per cent. and now it is sold by druggists everywhere under a rigid money-back guarantee.

Don't waste any more time with outside applications. Get a package of HEM-ROID from McDermid & Jury, Bond's Drug Store today. It has given safe and lasting relief to thousands and will do the same for you, or costs you nothing.

Inquest Postponed

MIDLAND, Sept. 26.—After several witnesses had been heard, the inquest yesterday into the death of Mrs. Mary Skelton, Toronto, was adjourned until Friday. Mrs. Skelton died following a collision between the car she was driving and another driven by G. P. Murdock, a former member of the Ontario Legislative Assembly. Doctors testified yesterday that Mrs. Skelton's death could have resulted from a stroke following the accident, which occurred at Waverly, near here, Sept. 17.

Giants gain half a game on Card's lead in National League flag chase.

Indianapolis drew first blood in the initial game of the Little Worlds Series by defeating the Rochester Red Wings 3 to 2. Swetonic, youthful pitching star for the midgets and Vic Keen, veteran hurler, indulged in a great pitching duel for ten innings. In the eleventh two walks and a fluke double spelled disaster for the Wings.

If the play ends in a tie between the Cards and Giants for the National league flag, a three game series will be played to determine the championship. It has not been decided where the series will be played, the date and site of the play-off will be decided by vote of directors immediately after the deadlock becomes a fact.

HORSESHOE TOURNAMENT.

(Examiner Correspondence).

LAKEFIELD, Sept. 27.—Following up last year's success, the horseshoe tournament bids fair to become an annual event in the village sports program. The tournament is to be held in the Lakefield Rink on October 4th and 5th, and promises to be a real event. It was felt last year that the weather was too cold to make it as great a success as it should be, so the dates this season are set earlier. The entries must be in the hands of W. G. Morrison, the secretary, on or before September 29th, and the tourney is open to the entire community.

SOFTBALL LEAGUE.

Teams wishing to enter the Softball League, which is a sporting feature of the fall season, are requested to send their names to W. G. Morrison not later than October 2nd. The League is open to teams from the County of Peterborough, including the city, and is a popular bi-weekly event. The rink becomes a village rendezvous once more after a six months' vacation, and the sounds of merriment attract scores of passers-by. The Rink Company give a handsome silver trophy to the winning team and the games are snappy.

ARGONAUTS IN GOOD CONDITION

Have Made Great Showing in All Their Workouts.

TORONTO, Sept. 27.—Mike Rodden, writing in the Globe says:

"After practicing since late in August the Argonaut seniors are now in tip-top condition and have been travelling so well in the nightly workouts that the Double Blue officials believe that the team will make a strong bid for the Interprovincial Union honors. Former collegians in the line-up have instilled the necesary pep and enthusiasm and have helped give the Oarsmen a speedy and thoughtful aggregation. It is no secret in the Argo camp that the locals expect to whip the Tigers in the opening game here a week from next Saturday. The Bengals haven't won a game in Toronto since the war, and naturally the Argos count on a victory here at their expense. Officials behind the team say that the Argos are much stronger than they were last fall, and if this is so they will be championship contenders. The 1927 Argos weren't weak by any means and only their falldown in the game here against Ottawa put the skids under their title chances. With the retirement of some of the veterans the way was made open for younger players, men who have the stamina and ambition to go at top speed at home and on the road. It is to the newcomers therefore, that the Argos look for real aid in the coming race."

CHANGES MADE N.H.L. PLAY-OFFS

First, Second and Third Teams of Each Group Play Each Other in Semi-finals.

TORONTO, Sept. 26. — Nothing startling was done at Saturday's fall session of the National Hockey League at Montreal unless it might be a re-arrangement of the play-offs for the league championship at the end of th season.

In other recent seasons the second and third place teams in each league at the end of the season have played off and the winner met the leader of the group for the group championship. Then came the finals with the winners of this post-season series in each group meeting in the finals for the crown. This season the leaders of each group at the end of the seasn will play a three out of five series and the winner of this series will meet the winners of a competition between the second and third teams of each group. In this latter competition the two teams finishing second and the two teams finishing third in each group will play a home and home series of two games, goals to count. The winners of each series—that is the winners of the second place competition and the winners of the third place competition—will play off a best two in three games series and the winner of the group leader series in a five-game series for the league championship and Stanley Cup. The final series will be contested on the ice of the winners of the play-off between the first place teams in each group. This system gives the play-offs an international flavor all around, and the winners of the group championship series the "home ice" edge in the final gallop for the title.

One minor change in the playing rules was made. In future, if the score is a tie at the end of the last period the teams will continue to play on an extra ten minutes without rest and without any change of ends. That means that if the score is a tie the last period will be a thirty minute period without rest unless either team scores a goal in the extra time which, of course, will, as usual, end the contest. A rules committee consisting of Frank Calder, Cooper Smeaton and Leo Dandurand was struck and empowered to draft a rule designed to beat the stalling tactics of a team which enjoys a lead.

It was announced that Pittsburg would remain in the league and that a new team was in the process of formation.

There was plenty of talk of player trades and exchanges, but nothing definite was handed out. The case of Dave Trottier, the Olympic star, who has been claimed alternately for Toronto, Ottawa and Montreal, was not discussed—or if it was the president did not say anything about it in the report he handed out after the meeting.

It is rumored that New York Rangers and Montreal Canadiens are talking of a trade—Goalkeeper Chabot for Goalkeeper Hainsworth. Nothing definite has been handed out. Col. Hammond is very sweet on Joe Miller, the Niagara Falls goal keeper, who was with New York Americans for a while last season. Miller is the Ottawa boy who came to the rescue of Rangers last spring when Lorne Chabot, the goal keeper, was hurt and was a big factor in Rangers' victory in the finals. Hammond would like to buy Miller.

BOYS OF EXETER PLAYING GOLF

THREE HOLE COURSE.

LONDON, Ont., Sept. 22.—(Canadian Press).—Exeter has a golf course. The idea started with Kenneth Hockey, a boy in his early teens, and it has spread like wildfire until almost every kid in town is a member and can be seen carrying his golf club or clubs almost any time of the day.

The course isn't eighteen holes—yet. Kenneth Hockey and a number of boys his own age were swimming in the hole east of Exeter when the idea struck Kenneth and the other boys almost at once. Let's play golf! No clubs. No balls. No course laid out. Nothing but the urge to imitate the older men and boys who have recently started playing at Walker's, at Grand Bend. Ray Pryde had some golf balls at home, some that he had gathered at one of the courses in London. No one had a club. Someone pulled up a dead sapling and discovered that by breaking off the roots and shaping it with a knife he had a crude natural club. There was a rush for dead saplings, and when Pryde arrived with the balls the game was on.

Across from the swimming hole is a flat stretch of ground and on this the boys mapped out a triangular course of three holes. Dirt flew. Holes were made. Other saplings became poles and handkerchiefs fluttered from their tops to mark the holes. Thus the golf course started. That course is used but little now. It was a little far to walk and the boys started another with growing enthusiasm only a short distance from the north bank of the river. One may find boys of various ages playing there from morning to night on a day that is fair and dry. It is amusing to see the home-made clubs. Sticks are still used, hockey sticks have been cut down and re-made into drivers. Iron clubs have just been introduced by the blacksmith's son, who evidently persuaded his father to help him have the best club on the course. Other boys have iron clubs they have made themselves or pestered some blacksmith to make for them. Clubs that look like polo mallets, croquet mallets and walking canes are to be seen.

The boys have rivals in the golf course business. The senior boys have made a course on the opposite side of the river, consisting of eight holes. They have better equipment and have made the holes on their course farther apart, but there are some of the younger boys who can show them a thing or two about the game yet.

THEATRES

AT THE REGENT.

Richard Barthelmess in "The Patent Leather Kid," will have its last showing to-night. This picture has been playing to capacity business and is acclaimed by all as one of the greatest ever seen here.

The musical accompaniment of the Regent Orchestra has brought forth many comments. Don't miss his program.

SHEIKS OFTEN SOLD OWN CHILDREN INTO HAREMS

Thanks to British interference, the abominable practice of Arabs trading their women folks for horses and camels has almost been abolished in the near East. Only rare cases have been heard of lately, where these desert sheiks traded their female offsprings for horseflesh.

Lambert Hillyer, director and co-author of "Fleetwing," a Fox Films production, spent many years in Mesopotamia during the World War and had a number of opportunities of studying the habits of these savage wanderers of the desert. Hillyer relates that it was a common sight to see an aged sheik of sixty-five or seventy years calling upon parents for the latest addition to his harem. Before slavery was abolished, the moment a female child was born she was promised to a neighboring sheik many years her senior.

"Nowadays, in our own country the position is reversed. We find that it is the female of the species that hunts the male. Study any daily paper and you will find dozens of cases where the female has taken unto herself several husbands, not in a group of course, but as fast as she can get rid of one she picks another," Hillyer concluded.

"(Fleetwing" was adapted to the screen by Elizabeth Pickett and is a thrilling story of love and adventure amid the sands of Araby. Ben Bard, Barry Norton, Dorothy Janis, Erville Alderson, James Anderson and Robert Kortman portray the principal roles.

The production is to have its local premiere at the Regent Theatre commencing Friday.

AT THE CAPITOL.

"LAUGH CLOWN LAUGH" LON CHANEY'S GREAT SUCCESS WILL BE THE BIG ATTRACTION AT THE CAPITOL TO-NIGHT

Lon Chaney's 'Laugh Clown Laugh' will be the big attraction at the Capitol to-night. This is considered one of Chaney's greatest pictures, and when it is considered that Lon has never appeared in a poor offering, you may expect something out of the ordinary tonight. In "Laugh Clown Laugh," Chaney again displays his wonderful art in "make-up". Lon plays the part of the clown—and is just a little better clown than any clown you have seen at any circus, although "Laugh Clown Laugh" is not a circus picture.

MADRIGALS PLEASE AUGUSTUS BRIDLE

Critic Praises Work of Canadian Singers Who Will Perform Here.

Canadian Singers, an organization that has been booked to give a program every evening of the Produced in Canada Exhibition next month, is highly praised by Augustus Bridle, music and dramatic critic of The Star. Under the headline, "Rare Old Madrigals Are Sheer Delight," Mr. Bridle says:

"...The program was a scintillating delight . . . the stage was a picture. Adroitly the singers were seated on large chairs in front of four box trees. It all looked like a fresco by one of the old Florentine masters who painted such things. They sang as prettily as they looked and in as precise a pattern. Only the most sedulous training of singers under solo tuition as well as ensemble could have done such a high average of justice to the more than twenty old things dating back to the early sixteenth century . . . The French group were very different from the English, slower, more gracious, suave and sentimental—and most delicately done. Mr. J. Campbell McInnes conducted with fine authority."

BETTER THAN SODA FOR SOUR, GASSY STOMACH

"For some time I used soda for gas and sourness. Then I tried Adlerika and find it far better than soda."—Ed. McNeill.

Adlerika relieves stomach gas and sourness in TEN minutes. Acting on BOTH upper and lower bowel, it removes old waste matter you never thought was in your system. Let Adlerika give your stomach and bowels a REAL cleansing and see how much better you feel. It will surprise you! McDermid & Jury, E. L. Payne, McDermid Drug Co.

COMMENT ON THE MARKET

A Special Service to The Examiner.

GOOD ORDER FOR CANADIAN LOCOMOTIVES.

The Canadian Locomotive Company has received an order from Canadian National Railways for 15 locomotives of the Santa Fe 2-10-2 type and 10 8-wehll switching locomotives. The C.N.R. wants 5 more locomotives of an altered type for mountain work but have not placed the order yet. This is a good order for Canadian Locomotive Company.

Canada Cement Co., now operating its nine plants at a high rate, is expected to show output substantially in excess of last year's record of 7,500,000 barrels and earnings are running well ahead of last year, when, it is estimated, operating profits approximated $4,583,000. The company has improved its liquid position by the sale of its subsidiary, Dominion Glass Co., to Frank P. Jones. It is understood that the price received was $2,600,000.

Maritime Wholesale Grocery Firms Are Considering Proposal For Closer Association.

(From Our Halifax Correspondent).

"It is reported here in mercantile circles that once again a merger of some of the leading wholesale grocers is in contemplation. Some months ago there was considerable activity in connection with the formation of a big grocery organization in Nova Scotia, and considerable progress was made. The project was abandoned at that time, largely due to the fact that some of the more prosperous firms preferred to remain independent.

"The latest report is that the new merger of wholesale grocery firms will enhance some of the leading companies in the Maritime Provinces It is said that firms in St. John, Moncton, Fredericton, and other New Brunswick centres have been considering the wisdom and of closer association by way of a merger of the various firms, or a closer or more effective working of the Wholesalers' Guilds.

Preferred Shareholders Control City Dairy

City Dairy is one of the few Canadian companies in which control rests with the preferred stockholders. The preferred carried equial voting power with the old common split twice four for once, given preferred holders sixteen votes for each share of stock, a total of 112,000 against 92,000 for the common. At the time the previous offer was made a strong pool had accumulated large blocks of both the preferred and common, but fell short of gaining control, if this was their object. The pool later liquidated their holdings and it is not known to whom the stock passed.

Dominion Combing Mills Affair

Dominion Combing Mills Ltd. went into the hands of the liquidator some time ago, after the failure of the Protective Committee to come to an agreement with creditors. G. T. Clarkson are liquidators and McNichol is acting for the Protective committee.

The plan now is to get what can be obtained for the assets involved in this an effort on the part of the shareholders Committee to prove that shareholders are prior creditors, due to alleged irregularities in the issue of stock. If they prove this, shareholders contend that 7-8 of the assets should go to them. Then a re-organization might follow, with a view to getting the organization going again.

Vehicle Importers Show Large Increase

Ottawa—Imports of vehicles for August, 1928 amounted in value to $9,289,507, as compared to $5,633,200 in August 1927 and $8,626,332 in July, 1928. This large increase was due to Automobile imports. Autos with freight chassis were imported to the value of $1(296,079, as against $452,011 worth in August 1927. Autos valued at $1,200 or less imports were $1,334,087 and in August 1927 $1,361,882. Other passenger Automobile imports increased from $1,026,493, in August 1927 to $1,427,044 in August of this year. The effect of the Tariff changes on the industry manufacturing auto parts indicated by the increase in value of imports of auto and engine parts from $2,656,340 worth in August, 1927 to $4,981,283 in August of this year.

Mine Operations

As Reported to F. G. Oke & Company.

It is now rumored that J. C. McGregor will again resume connections with the Amulet property in his old capacity. A further report received from Rouyn states that the vein on the 150 foot level of the property is now shown to be 108 foot wide and of an average of $34 per ton.

Malrobic will commence station cutting this week. Shaft sinking at this property has made good progress and lateral work will commence soon.

Advised from unofficial yet reliable sources that special general shareholders meeting of Abana to be held Oct. 9 to ratify a by-law increasing the board of directors from 5 to 9 and to decide upon listing Abana on New York Curb.

eral association should be given to the Fact Finding Committee now to pursue actively its research into the laws, regulations and practices in various Provinces and States and with reference to city traffic in cities both in Canada and the United States, so that it shall have complete information available on the merits and demerits of the various systems of traffic control. Without assuming any dictatorial position, the Fact Finding Committee very readily could produce a syllabus or report on this matter which could be circulated not only to the various jurisdictions, but to the public. Such recommendations undoubtedly would have a great influence upon those who make our laws and establish our practices."

Mr. Findlay further advised that the Canadian Good Roads Association be represented at the International Association of Road Congresses, which meets in Washington next year, its first meeting outside of Europe. As this association co-operates with the Traffic and Communication Committee of the League of Nations, he believed that Canada could offer something tangible to other nations regarding highways and traffic control, and at the same time gain something useful from their experience.

nose was smashed and Dr. Bell of Merlin had found it impossible to open his mouth to make any more detailed examination. It is still feared that other bones are broken. His body is badly battered, also, as though he had been kicked.

Forhan has been delirious for the greater part of the time and has been unable to tell a closely-connected story. He says, however, that as he walked up from the barn in the darkness he met Ferguson, who accosted him with the demand, "What the hell are you doing driving around with my wife"

Forhan claims that before he could enter a denial or explain, he was struck with some heavy instrument, and felled. "It was not his fist, I don't know what it was."

Crown Attorney H. D. Smith is conducting a rigorous investigation of the whole circumstances, but rejects entirely the possibility that a man of Forhan's age and reputation could be cast in the role of a home-wrecker.

High Quality Shown In School Exhibits

SEVEN SCHOOLS PARTICIPATE IN EVENTS AND EXHIBITS PETERBOROUGH JUNIOR FAIR

Number 1 of North Monaghan Wins First Honors in Parade.

RAIN MARS ACTIVITIES.

Woodwork Exhibit Best Seen in Rural Fairs This Year.

Peterborough's Junior Fair for the rural schools surrounding the city was held yesterday afternoon at the Exhibition Grounds, and for the second year in succession rain marred the activities of the young folk, and several times made them seek shelter in the barns and buildings. Seven schools participated in the events, and the exhibits in many of the classes were much larger than at the Exhibition a couple of weeks ago. Judges of the woodwork claimed it was the best exhibit that they have seen at all the rural fairs of the county this year, and the vegetables were of a very high quality.

Four schools entered in the parade, with Number 1 of North Monaghan carrying off first honors, and Number 8 being half a point behind, scoring 92¼ points out of a possible 100.

Twenty-two pens of poultry, all hatched from eggs furnished by the Ontario Agricultural College, provided a real task for the judges. The classes of eggs, both brown and white, were exceedingly large, with eggs of all sizes exhibited.

Candy and Home Cooking

The candy and home cooking exhibits carried off the prize for being the largest exhibit of the show; these exhibits far surpassing in size those offered at the local Industrial fair. Cakes and cookies, all kinds and shapes, were exhibited and all seemed to be most pleasing to the taste. In the public speaking classes, the boys and girls fell down badly, there being no entries.

S. S. Number 10 from Otonabee carried off first prize both in the girls' and boys' judging competitions, the boys winning first, second and third place, and the girls first, second and fourth. The exhibits of grain were very small, but what there was appeared to be of a fine quality.

In the carrot class there were 20 entries, with Jean McGowan of Number 1 North Monaghan carrying off first honors. The beets were a close second, with 17 entries, and Annie Profits of Number 11 Douro winning first money. There were 11 collections of apples, all being of fair quality for the season. All the classes in lettering and writing were exceedingly large.

Flowers were most numerous, with 38 entries in the bouquet from the home garden, in which Beth Stuart of Number 10 Otonabee won first honors. In the livestock, Jean Fowler of Number 1 North Monaghan won first place with her dairy calf, and Earl Lowes of Number 8 Otonabee first for the beef calf. There were no entries in the bacon hog class and three entries in the driving contest. Olive Mason won the prize in the senior boys' or girls' singing contest, while Eric Mason from the same school, Number 1, North Monaghan, carried off the prize in the junior contest.

Yesterday's fair was the last for the rural schools of the county except the championship fair, which will be held along with the Norwood exhibition, when the winners of all the fairs will compete against each other for county honors.

The teachers of the schools were: Number 1, North Monaghan, Miss L. B. Kay; Number 3, North Monaghan, Miss Sybil Robertson; Number 10 Otonabee, Miss Troop; Number 8, Otonabee, Miss E. Miller; Number 16 Otonabee, E. Smith; Number 12 Otonabee, Miss Petrie, who was unable to be present on account of sickness in her family, and Number 11 Douro, Donald Lapp.

And The School Is Still Uninhabitable

LANCASTER, Pa., Sept. 28.—When the workmen at the addition to the West Junior high school went to work yesterday, they found a skunk seated on a bench in the new auditorium waiting for the teachers to call the classes to order. One of the men took a squint, then another squint and was unkind enough to heave a brick at the new "student." The brick went straight and hit the mark. The result was a dead skunk, but before he passed to "skunk heaven" he paid his compliments to all.

DONATION MADE TO FAIR BOARD

Standard Medical and Surgical Clinic Sends Cheque for $50.00.

SUPPORT EXPRESSED.

Mayor Denne, president of the Peterborough Industrial Exhibition, received a very gratifying letter this morning from the Standard Medical and Surgical Clinic, which is produced below, enclosing a cheque for fifty dollars, as a contribution to the Exhibition Board.

The president and directors wish not only to thank the Standard Medical and Surgical Clinic for their contribution, but for the very kind expression of appreciation in the letter which they forwarded with the cheque. The letter reads:

"Dear Mr. Denne,—The Board of Directors of the Standard Medical and Surgical Clinic have watched with interest and appreciation the efforts of the Exhibition Board in their endeavor to make the annual exhibition worthy of our city and give it a standing among the fairs throughout Ontario. Though precluded, through their lack of time, from taking any active part in the work, their interest has been, nevertheless, continuous.

"We have viewed with concern the disabilities under which you have labored during the past fair week and the disappointments you must have had in seeing what seemed a perfectly good setting rendered of no avail. To compensate and help to relieve the disappointment as well as to show our appreciation of the efforts of the Board, we herewith enclose our cheque to be applied to lessening of the deficit which we understand has occurred.

"With best wishes, believe me,

"Yours sincerely,

"Standard Medical and Surgical Clinic

(Signed) J. Malcolm McCulloch."

IN POLICE COURT

Abraham Williams alias Jacobs appeared in County Police Court this morning charged with stealing the sum of fifty cents from Mrs. Hubbell in the C.P.R. Station, Havelock. The prisoner entered a plea of guilty, and was remanded for one week.

On Wednesday night he slept in the Police Station in this city, leaving on Thursday morning for Cornwall, where, he said, his mother was very ill. He purchased a ticket to Indian River, but failed to get off at that station, and was put off the train near Havelock. He walked into Havelock and sought to borrow money telling that his mother had died in Cornwall. Mrs. Hubbell, the station caretaker's wife, entered the station and left her coat down and in a few minutes the half dollar was missing. When arrested by C.P.R. Constable Evans he told him that his story had been false, and that he was out on suspended sentence from the Orillia Police Court, where he had been found guilty of housebreaking. His pal in this case got one year.

Percy Holland appeared on a charge of entering the house of Dr. Morgan in 1925, and also on a charge of being intoxicated in a public place. A plea of not guilty was entered on the first charge and guilty on the second. He was remanded until next Thursday for trial. Alex. Elliott is defending him.

Gas Explosion Blocks Traffic

LONDON, Sept. 28.—(Canadian Press).—Piccadilly Circus, London's famous spinwheel traffic center, was thrown into confusion last evening at the homeward rush hour by a violent underground gas explosion. Five workmen employed in an excavation for a new tube station were injured and taken to a hospital.

The terrific report startled the whole vicinity which was thrown into further confusion from smoke and flames came from the excavation. All traffic was disorganized for some time, but the subway itself was not affected.

NOTED EDITOR PASSES AWAY

John R. Robinson, of Toronto Telegram, Dies at Beaverton.

TORONTO, Sept. 28 (Canadian Press).—John R. Robinson, editor since 1889 of the Toronto Evening Telegram, died this morning. He had been seriously ill for several months. Death took place at his summer home in Beaverton, Ont.

Mr. Robinson was born in Guelph, Ont., May 9, 1862. He is survived by Mrs. Robinson, one son, John R. Robinson, and two daughters, Miss Judith Robinson and Mrs. E. A. Baker, all of Toronto.

Mr. Robinson, who was 66 years of age, had suffered from a heart ailment for several years, but it was not until early this spring that he was confined to his home. His life was despaired of then, but he rallied in the summer, only to suffer a further relapse. Mr. Robinson improved gradually during the early summer and in July he was able to go to his home in Beaverton. During the summer his condition continued to vary from time to time until the past week, when he grew steadily worse. He died in his sleep this morning.

Arrangements for the funeral have not yet been completed, but it will be held on Monday from his residence on Wellesley Street to Mount Pleasant Cemetery. It will be strictly private.

FINAL APPEAL FOR TAG DAY

Children's Aid Society Dependent on Success for Revenue.

COLLECTION TO-MORROW.

The Children's Aid Society of Peterborough City and County makes the following final appeal to the citizens:

The Children's Aid Society of Peterborough is holding the Society's Annual Tag Day on Saturday, September 29th. We depend, in part, on the success of Tag Day to provide the necessary means to carry on our work. It is one of the sources of revenue upon which we must for the present rely.

We hope the people of the City and others from the outside points will take this opportunity of helping to care for the little ones in our charge, those neglected little ones who have no one else to look to but the Society.

Another source of revenue upon which we are depending to carry on our work is the private gifts and benefactions from citizens who are sympathetic with the work of the Society and appreciate its needs. The income from City and County Grants and Tag Day is far from adaquate to meet the expense involved in taking care of the Shelter and keeping the living agents to look after the work.

Were it not for the generous contributions of friends of the Society from year to year, we should be unable to meet our obligations. May we count on you this year to repeat your generosty of former years in helping the Children's Aid Society to carry one? We hope we can.

Thanking you in anticipation for your sympathetic consideration of their appeal, we are,

Very faithfully,

R. C. Blagrave, President.
John Edgar, Secretary.
Mrs. Newhall, Convenor of Tag day.

KIWANIANS HONOR MEMBER ELECTED TO DIVISION OFFICE

Isaac P. McNabb is Guest of Honor at To-day's Luncheon.

REPORTS PRESENTED.

Delegates to District Convention Tell Club About Proceedings at Kingston.

The Peterborough Kiwanis Club had a guest of honor at its luncheon meeting to-day in one of its own members, Lieutenant Governor elect Isaac P. McNabb, upon whom that honorable office of the Central Division was voted at the district convention in Kingston this week, was accorded fitting tribute by his fellow club members, and in turn expressed his genuine appreciation of his new office—interpreting it as a well deserved honor for the local club on its fine service record, rather than an appreciation of himself.

There was no speaker in the usual meaning of the term, but along with the Lieutenant-Governor's brief speech to the club were several fine reports dealing with various phases of the convention. Harry Boyle, Joe John, and Charlie Elliott delivered them, while John Turner and Joe Wearing spoke of the highly satisfactory showing made by the Peterborough delegates and the club in general at the district convention.

President John

President Joe John's message regarding the convention must have been a source of keen satisfaction to the local Kiwanians, for in part, he said: "The Peterborough Kiwanis Club had the largest number of members registered at the convention of all the clubs of its size in the Ontario-Quebec and Maritime district, while officially it was represented by your immediate past president, president, district trustee and treasurer, and the chairmen of three committees. All worked like Trojans from the time of their arrival in Kingston, to carry out the mandate given them by the club through its executive—and to have elected as Lieutenant for the Central division, a member of the club—believing that in so doing they were doing their share for the advancement of Kiwanis. It was my high privilege to make the nomination of one of our members, with an able seconder in Harry Boyle, who responded with a snap that reverberated through the Kingston Memorial Hall. It was the proudest moment of all my association with Kiwanis when the chairman of elections announced our own Isaac McNabb elected with a majority over the other two candiates on the first ballot."

The president also paid tribute to Herb. Gilgour who had prepared the efficiency report of the Peterborough club.

Presents Cup

The Lieutenant-Governor-elect, Isaac McNabb appreciated the honor conferred upon him and devoted his brief address to expressing it. He spoke of the splendid support accorded him by the Peterborough delegation and preferred to consider the office a mark of recognition for the club rather than for himself. He hoped that the club would accept the

SAFETY ORDER OLIVER'S LAST

Veteran Member of Railway Board Retires at Age Limit.

WANTS REAR LIGHT.

(Special to The Examiner)

OTTAWA, Sept. 28.—"I am of opinion that in all cases in which a locomotive is electrically equipped the back-up light or centre lamp, on the back of the tender, should be an electric lamp, so suited and of sufficient candle power to give light to the man-hole or water-hole on the tender and at the same time throw light on the track immediately at the rear of the tender, as well as at a distance behind it, and that an order should be made requiring such electric lights to be installed without undue delay."

These are the concluding words of Hon. Frank Oliver, as a member of the Board of Railway Commissioners. He retired a few days ago on reaching the age limit of 7?. The finding is supported by Assistant Chief Commissioner S. J. McLean and Commissioner Calvin Lawrence.

BUROWSKI GUILTY OF MURDER OF FARMER NEAR WAUBANIC

WILL HANG DEC. 7TH.

Prisoner Declares His Innocence Before Hearing Sentence Pronounced.

PARRY SOUND, September 28. — John Burowski has been convicted of one of the most serious crimes known to law, and he is to receive the law's direct penalty, death. He will be hanged on Friday, December 7, for the murder of Thomas Jackson at Waubamic on August 18.

Struggling to maintain the dogged composure that has made him all the more pitiable a figure throughout his three-day trial, the white-faced Pole listened, unflinchingly, as Mr. Justice Wright delivered sentence at 4.3 o'clock yesterday afternoon.

The morning session was occupied by the addresses to the jury of J. Attorney W. L. Haight, K.C., and the Roland Hett, defence counsel, Crown Bench. At 12.30 the jury retired. At 3.20 they returned a verdict of guilty, and an hour and a quarter later Burowski knew his fate.

Moved by Verdict.

The prisoner, who seventy-five minutes later heard his sentence unmoved, was not so stoical when the jury's verdict was returned. As the word Guilty" was spoken by the foreman, the man in the dock clenched his jaws, and a tear rolled down one cheek. Later, when brought out to hear his sentence, he was asked by Mr. Justice Wright if he had anything to say.

Burowski made several ineffectual attempts to speak and then said in a low voice: "I believe I have got no justice. I am not guilty of this charge."

"Have you anything else to say?" asked the Bench. The prisoner shook his head.

"I do not wish," began His Lordship, "to add to your remorse in this, which must be the most terrible hour of your life. You have had a fair trial. You have been well and ably defended. Murder is one of the most serious crimes known to British or Canadian law. It is a crime not only against man but against God. Every one who takes a human life, who sweeps a fellow-being into eternity, must pay the penalty. The jury has found you guilty of the murder of Thomas Jackson, and I have no alternative." He then pronounced the death sentence.

Town Officials Worried.

Pending the removal of the prisoner from Parry Sound, the responsibility of having him in custody is causing great worry to the town officials, particularly to Sheriff J. E. Armstrong. Before he can be taken away, an Order-in-Council must be passed, and it is understood that an attempt is to be made on Friday to have this done if a quorum of Cabinet members can be assembled.

The returning of the verdict and the imposing of sentence came at the end of a day of eloquent pleas, counter-pleas and arguments both for and against the prisoner. Mr. Hett for the defence, based his arguments on two main points, namely the possibilities that the mysterious second man who fired from the bush might have shot Jackson, and the claim that if Burowski did fire the fatal shot he was shooting at one of the Laird boys in self-defence.

Crown Attorney Haight reviewed dispassionately and in cold logic the hundred and one points of evidence, placing stress on the conflicting stories, which tended most to reflect on the credibility of the accused and on his character.

Russian Refugee Has Ruby In Flesh; Swallowed It To Escape Bolsheviki

TORONTO, Ont., Sept. 28 (Special to The Examiner).—In Toronto to-day is a man, Peter Zavadsky, a Russian whose intrinsic worth when ready for his bath is probably greater than that of any other citizen of the millions who inhabit the American continent. The reason for this is that, he says, he is carrying with him a magnificent five-carat ruby buried in his internal organs. Zavadsky is with Prince Sergei Volkonsky, who has returned to Toronto from Western Canada to visit friends before leaving for New York, where he will endeavor to dispose of certain family treasures which he states were brought to him by Zavadsky, who has recently made his way from the country of the Bolsheviki. In addition, the Prince has brought with him what he claims is a painting by Rembrandt, two small statuettes which originated in Pompeii, and a magnificent diamond necklace.

Prince Volkonsky explained how the ruby came to be embedde in Zavadsky's anatomy. "The Bolshevik customs officials," stated Sergei, "are incredibly ignorant. When Zavadsky was making his way into Finland, he was stopped by one of them for examination. The official looked at the Rembrandt portrait, and when told it was a picture of Zavadsky's grandfather, allowed him to pass. So relieved was our old family retainer at being allowed to go, that he pulled his handkerchief from his pocket to wipe his brow. On his doing so, the ruby, taken from its setting and concealed in its folds, fell on the snow and caught the eye of the official, who had half turned away. "What is that?" he demanded. "Only a berry," replied Zavadsky, picking up and swallowing the gem."

Prince Volkonsky affirms that the ruby worked its way into the flesh. He states that X-ray photographs show the location of the gem and that it causes Zavadsky no inconvenience.

INSPECTOR OF SURVEYS HERE

Finds Correct Water Levels of Northern Lakes.

FOR BOUNDARY WORK.

P. L. Morris, C.E., Government inspector-general of surveys, came to Peterborough yesterday to confer with J. H. Burnham regarding the official height of the dam at Scott's Mills, Harvey, which controls the height of water in the Catchacoma Lakes. It is from this official line of height to be known as the higher sill level of the dam, that the 66 feet of Government or public reserve will be reckoned. Since the official or permanent height of the sill of the dam had never been settled and as a consequence the official height of the lake, it was not possible for property-owners to make title to intending purchasers, for it could not be officially and therefore finally stated where the inshore lots ran down to. It left the shore line uncertain and a matter of dispute. Now, however, thanks to the intervention of the Prime Minister and the visit of the cleared. It borders on the reserve strip cleared. It border on the reserve strip which is also now settled.

Since the discovery recently of the iron and phosphate mineral springs at Catchacoma, now in the hands of a company of Peterborough people and the probable early establishment of a system of cottage health resorts for people with run-down systems and stiffened bodies, irregular kidneys and thin blood, it had become necessary to find out literally how the land lay. For the first time since 1862 the true shore line and the true Government reserve 66-foot strip have been clearly and officially determined.

RESULT OF STRIKE.

PORT ADELAIDE, Australia, Sept. 28 (Canadian Press).—With further rioting growing out of the dock workers' strike to-day, a national crisis was proclaimed by the South Australian Cabinet. All work was stopped until Monday.

Riots occurred again to-day when 2,000 strikers tried to enter a bureau where volunteers were being enrolled for work on the docks. Police used their batons and dispersed the raiders after a lively scrimmage.

The State Cabinet held a session lasting until after midnight to-day. Discussing yesterday's rioting, in which ten volunteers were severly injured.

Citizens meanwhile were responding to Premier Butler's call to enroll as special constables. The Premier stated that the issue was mob rule or constitutional government.

Farm Near Chatham Named

Property Fronting on Lake and Highway Rendezvous of Wanted Men.

RUMRUNNERS' HARBOR.

Same Farm Headquarters from Which Kidnapping of Low Was Managed.

CHATHAM, Ont., Sept. 28 (Special to The Examiner).—Clues indicating that the Canadian redesvous of an international gang of rum exporters and gunmen from the Detroit Riverfront, said to be established in Kent County, have sent Provincial and County police on hot trail under the direction of Crown Attorney H. D. Smith.

The authorities are reticent but your correspondent is reliably informed that the attention of the investigators has turned to a farm near Wheatley, whose southern boundary is the shore of Lake Erie. From both the highway and the lake front, it is claimed, that a traffic has been carried on during the past few months which could account for many of the most startling crimes, not only on the American but also on the Canadian side of the border. Here, it is alleged, gangsters and rum runners have taken refuge from the police of both Detroit and Windsor, after their criminal operations.

The authorities are now in possession of information indicating that the same place was used to dispose of cargoes of liquor, especially a truck load stolen by armed bandits a few weeks ago between Chatham and Wallaceburg. This truck was diverted to the Wheatley farm, where the liquor was transhipped to boats and sent across Lake Ontario to Cleveland and Ohio ports, according to police information.

The same farm, the police believe, was the rendezvous in which was hatched the plot to kidnap Sam Lowe of Windsor, Moreover, it is alleged the investigations of Major J. H. Clarke, barrister for Lowe, indicate that this same criminal organization preyed on other Windsor and Essex County liquor exporters from this same house.

H. Lowe in Toronto

TORONTO, Sept. 28.—Harriston Lowe, brother of Sam Lowe, the liquor exporter, both reported under death sentence by rum-runners, is in Toronto, it was revealed to-day. Armed with two revolvers, he has taken a room at a hotel.

"The worry is terrible," he said.

JUDGMENT GIVEN FOR DEFENDANT

E. H. Mann to Get $8.09 From D. Sexsmith, Judge Orders.

IN DIVISION COURT.

In the First Division Court of the County of Peterborough His Honor Judge Hiucke has given a judgment in favor of the defendant in the case of D. Sexsmith vs. E. H Mann. B. E. Park acted for the plaintiff, Mr. Sexsmith, and Alex. Elliott for the defendant, Mr Mann. The plaintiff sued for $110 for wages, and the defendant claimed that he had overpaid Sexsmith, and entered a counter claim for $63.00.

His Honor, in giving judgment, found that both parties were considerably to blame for the difficulties that had arisen, and awarded the sum of $8.09 to the defendant Mr. Mann, without any order as to costs.

Around the City

The splendid new store front of the Peterborough Branch of Metropolitan Stores, Ltd., was exposed to the public view for the first time to-day when workmen removed the board screening behind which they have been working a miracle of renovation on the old quarters of W. H. Meredith. Three separate show windows of the arcade type are ready for use by this new firm locating on George Street, and a decided improvement to the appearance of the entire block has been effected.

A beautiful silver bread knife, board and tray were the prizes handed Bry Flemming, Perry Street, last night by Art. Moffat, who, along with several other local citizens, conducted the horse-shoe pitching competitions at the Peterborough Industrial Exhibition.

Thirty-nine ringers was Mr. Fleming's record in the competition. He is one of the city's most ardent and skilful participants in the game of backyard golf which has enjoyed such a revival of interest locally this season.

CAMPBELLFORD, Sept. 28.—Mr. James Daly has returned to his home after spending several weeks as the guest of his daughter, Mrs. J. L. Dixon, Port Arthur.

Mrs. Fred Free returned to her home yesterday evening from Toronto, where she was visiting for the purpose of singing from station CKGW during the Peterborough hour

Red Fox Was Thief Who Stole Chickens

ALBANY, N.Y., Sept. 28.—Several days ago Clifford Barnett noticed several chickens were missing from his flock. Then a few turkeys disappeared in the same mysterious manner. Yesterday Barnett decided to stalk the strange thief. His reward came when he shot down a three-and-a-half foot young red fox. It is the first time in many years that reynard has made depredations right in the heart of the city.

ALL IS READY FOR BIG FAIR

Campbellford Board Works Hard to Prepare for Public To-day.

JUDGES KEPT BUSY.

(Examiner Staff Correspondence).

CAMPBELLFORD, Sept. 28.—Cold weather and intermittant showers during the afternoon made the weather conditions anything but ideal for a fall Fair day yesterday, but the rain ceased to fall toward late afternoon and although the temperature remained low, the work of erecting the midway attractions and the various other enclosures which to-day hold the exhibits of the local and district dealers, went forward with all possible despatch. Due to the large number of entries in the poultry and in the different classes in the exhibition building, the judges were forced to start work early and work far into the night without having fully completed their duties. They were at work again early this morning so as to have all the buildings clear for public entrance this afternoon.

To-night the main streets will be gay with many colored lights arranged in such a manner as to form a most pleasing spectacle. Many citizens have been busy wondering why the lights were not removed immediately after the official opening of the paved streets. Now the reason is about to be made plain.

Fast horses arrived yesterday and more are still coming into town. The track has been carefully prepared and is in the very best of condition. Motor vehicles have been barred from travelling upon it for the last forty-eight hours and nothing remains now but to hope that the weather man will be lenient and not turn on any rain.

Additional sheep and hog pens have been erected and the cattle sheds are in the proper condition as demanded by the Department. This year, there is every reason to believe that the crowds swarming the streets and moving in a general direction toward the Exhibition Grounds, are to be treated to the best Fair that has ever been held in Campbellford.

CAT STEPS IN WRONG PLACE COSTING COMPANY $15,000

ATLANTIC CITY, Sept. 28.—It cost the Atlantic City Electric Company approximately $15,000 when a cat stepped across machinery in the power house, causing a short circuit last night.

It cost the southern half of New Jersey its electric light service for more than fifteen minutes.

It cost Atlantic City the service of its fire department for about ten minutes.

It cost the cat its nine lives.

The whole matter resulted from the feline putting its paws on the wrong spot. A short circuit resulted, there was a blinding flash, followed by a terrific explosion, and the whole of the equipment in the small outbuilding had been destroyed.

Workmen switched the current to an emergency circuit.

BABE STARVES AS JAIL CHIEF DENIES IT ACCESS TO MOTHER

HAMILTON, Sept. 28.—The hunger strike of a five-months-old baby is causing local officials considerable worry.

Three days ago, Mrs. Annie Grieve, 2 Salem avenue, convicted of theft from a store, was sentenced to two months' imprisonment. About 45 years of age, she is the mother of five, from eighten years to five months. Her youngest is breast fed and since its mother's incarceration three days ago has had absolutely no nourishment, refusing any milk from a bottle. Dr. O. J. Newell, Mount Hamilton, stated yesterday Dominion authorities will be asked to investigate.

According to Governor LaLonde, he is forbidden to allow any one not regularly committed to become an inmate, and Mrs. Grieves was not allowed to bring the infant to jail. The little tot is causing considerable anxiety to its relatives, as it is slowly wasting away.

Finally an appeal was made Wednesday to Magistrate Jelfs. Three days ago His Worship in court stated he was more concerned with dealing out justice than observing the exact letter of the law. Wednesday the only course he could advocate was that the baby be brought to its mother at intervals each day for nourishment. While officialdom attemps to overcome webs of red tape, a five-months-old child starves.

MUSIC PROGRAM PLEASES AUDIENCE

Annual Concert Under Auspices of Lakefield Agricultural Society.

(Examiner Correspondence)

LAKEFELD, Sept. 28.—The annual concert given under the auspices of the Lakefield Agricultural Society was held on Wednesday night in the Lakefield Memorial Hall. The program was provided by the orchestra of the George Street United Church of Peterborough. The hall was well filled and the audience was highly appreciative, showing a strong partiality for the old-fashioned airs played by Mr. Thompson on the harmonica, and also in conjunction with Mr. Lillow and three young ladies on Hawaiian guitars. No matter how much or how little people know about music the power to thrill one which the older airs possess never seems to fail, and the brightening eye and pleased smile which is seen, to say nothing of the greater volume of applause, shows what the favorites are.

The string quartette and harmonicas scored a hit at every appearance. The duet by Messrs. Thompson and Lillow was much appreciated as a humorous interlude. The duet of Mr. and Mrs. Edwin Rowe was also an outstanding number, which had a srtong local interest from the fact that Mr. Rowe is a former Lakefield boy and has a large circle of friends in the village. Mr. and Mrs. Rowe gave two numbers, "The Spider and the Fly" and "My Little Grey Home in the West," and in both the voices were well balanced and showed considerable power and sweetness.

The orchestral selections were good, each and every one, with the "Hunting Song" winning highest favor with the audience. The orchestra consisted of twenty pieces, under the direction of Mr. W. H. Cunningham, with Miss Laura McFarlane at the piano.

Mrs. Hall's readings were well chosen, and the violin duet was much enjoyed, also Mr. Miller's cornet solo.

Mr. Albert Darling, the president of the Agricultural Society, made the announcements at the beginning and end of the entertainment, thanking all who had assisted the efforts of the society both at the grounds and at the concert. The George Street Church Orchestra have scored a hit

NORWOOD BABY WINS AT SHOWS

FOLLOWS FAMILY.

(Examiner Correspondence)

NORWOOD, Sept. 28.—Jack, the two-year-and-seven-months'-old son of Mr. and Mrs. Bert McNeely, was successful in winning a beautiful silver cup at the Lindsay Fair last week for being a perfect child. Last year he carried off first prize at the Norwood Fair. He already has to his credit another silver cup, $12 in cash, and an oil painting of himself, valued at $10.

Jack is keeping up the family record as Velma, his four-year-old sister, and Tommy, his six-year-old brother, were prize-winners on more than one occasion in their baby days.

Clarke Wallace, rector of Christ Church, was the officiating clergyman. The child

CAMPBELLFORD ENJOYS PROGRAM

(Examiner Staff Correspondence).

CAMPBELLFORD, Sept. 28—Rarely has there been such interest displayed in radio broadcasting here as was the case on Wednesday night. Listening-in parties were the order of the evening at many of the homes here. The event was the Peterborough hour which was broadcast through Station CKGW, Toronto. There is no doubt but that the City of Peterborough came in for some first-class advertising, but Campbellford was not altogether in the cold. Two of the vocal soloists were natives of this town, and the many telegrams and long distance telephone messages that were sent in to the station, expressed the favorable opinion of many of the citizens here. Several who thus expressed their appreciation were somewhat disappointed when their messages were not read by the announcer as they had been sent. They did not take into consideration the fact that the hour was for Peterborough. The entire program was well received. There was not a trace of Old Man Static nor was there any interference by other stations of wave lengths close to that of CKGW.

But Campbellford is to be given a rare treat in the very near future. On Monday evening, the Madrigal Singers, under the direction of Dorothy Allan Park, are to sing in the United Church here. On this occasion, there will be solos by Mrs. Free and Miss Dickson, the two local artists who so delighted their radio audiences on Wednesday night. The Madrigal Singers have established an enviable reputation in Toronto and other large centres. If all report be true, they are still nowhere near their pinnacle of fame. Rarely has Campbellford been afforded the opportunity to hear such a distinguished and accomplished group of trained singers. Each and every member of the Madrigal Singers is a trained soloist. Thus the union of ability, talent and skill results in a type of music that is as near perfection as seems humanely possible. To miss hearing this evening of music will be a matter of regret.

MARKS PLAYERS AT CAMPBELLFORD

Popular Troupe Opens Three Night Stand at Regent Theatre.

CAMPBELLFORD, Sept. 28 (Examiner Correspondence). — Arlie Marks and her company of accomplished players opened a three-night engagement at the Regent Theatre here last night. The offering was "The Little Shepherd of Bargain Row," a most interesting stage production with a good plot and story. The company played to a good house, and a most appreciative one. For many seasons the Arlie Marks Company has enjoyed a place of high esteem among the patrons of the local theatre, and their successes in Campbellford have become almost a matter of routine. They have yet to fail to please the full houses which greet them on their every engagement here.

SPIRITUAL ADVISER REFUSED TO DIVULGE ACCUSED'S CONFESSIONS

EDMONTON, Alta., Sept. 28 Canadian Press).—Although the trial of Vernon Booher for the quadruple murders at Mannville on July 9 has already been probably the most sensational ever held in an Alberta court, the greatest dramatic moment was reached yesterday when Adjutant Stewart, of the Salvation Army, refused to divulge confessions made to him by the accused, although he had been ordered to do so by Chief Justice Simmons.

"Judas betrayed his Master, and if I betray this boy I will also betray my Master," Adjutant Stewart solemnly declared.

Vernon Booher suddenly summoned his counsel, Neil D. Maclean, K.C. A few whispered words passed while the tension increased, then Mr. Maclean walked forward to the bar.

"My Lord, the accused desires Adjutant Stewart to give the required evidence."

Briefly and clearly, Adjutant Stewart told of what passed be- and the accused.

RAILWAY BOARD LEAVES NAMES ON DOCUMENT

Won't Relieve South Monaghan Residents of Contract or Disapprove By-law.

HEARING CONCLUDED.

People Well Informed About Act, Says Chairman—Cheap Lesson in Business.

"One of the cheapest lessons the people of South Monaghan can get—they will get full value for their money and at the same time have learned that it is poor policy to sign documents without reading them. Thus C. R. McKeown, K.C., chairman, expressed himself during the afternoon session of the Ontario Railway and Municipal Board on Thursday, when the long list of South Monaghan applicants for removal of their names from a petition was dealt with further. The session, continued from the morning, had to deal with some thirty-eight residents of that municipality who had signed a petition in support of a proposed municipal telephone system, but who, on realizing that the petition was also a contract which bound them to subscribe to the new system, now desired to be freed of the contract and also to have the board disapprove of the by-law which will provide for the establishment of the new system.

The Board's Decision

At the conclusion of the separate hearings of all the applicants, the chairman summed up its decisions which were, briefly:

That W. G. Clark, G. M. Finnie, A. B. Buyers, H. Dawson, Charles Dawson, Albert Dawson, H. A. Dawson, and Frank Dawson, be the names struck from the petition, it having been revealed that these men were not sufficiently qualified that they should be bound by the contract—

That, in the opinion of the Board, the people of South Monaghan had been well informed as to the workings of the Telephone Act, through the attendance at meetings of the Commissioner of Telephones, Col Daggar ,and other means, and that there was not sufficient reason why the Board should withold its approval of the by-law providing for the new telephone system.

Applications Dismissed

A long list of "Applications Dismissed" might have been formed from the Board's decisions of morning and afternoon sessions, for there could only be two reasons why the Board should strike names from the petition and contract—proof of misrepresentations, or evidence that the signatory was not properly qualified as a land-owner. Since many of the applicants had attended the public meetings and admitted having had an opportunity to read the petition and contract before signing, that first reason was not given during the day.

THINK WOMAN FROM LONDON

DESCRIPTIONS AGREE.

NIAGARA FALLS, Ont., Sept. 28.—Provincial police believe that the body of the woman found badly decomposed in a bush in Stamford Township, is that of Mrs. Lillian Gorvett, 22, who lived with her husband at 10 Cartwright Street, London, Ont.

Harold Gorvett was here yesterday afternoon and the description of the dress and appearance of his wife tallies completely with that given by a Stamford woman who gave her several drinks on August 7.

Mrs. Gorvett left her husband's home on the afternoon of August 2nd and has not been seen or heard from since. She was in the habit of walking for many miles in an aimless way, the husband said, and had disappeared on other occasions but never for such a length of time.

Took Jar of Water Away.

Interviewed by Inspector Airy, of the Provincial police, and Mr. Gorvett, the Stamford woman said that, on August 7, a strange woman came to her house looking exhausted and said she was thirsty. She pumped seven cup fulls of water for her and even then she was not satisfied and asked for something to hold water. She was given a jar, later identified as similar to the one found near the body. The woman said she had been picking raspberries but was lost and asked to be directed to Stamford Township. She then turned away and entered the bush where the body was found last Sunday.

Mrs. Gorvett left her home some time during the afternoon of August 2. She had often expressed a desire to visit Niagara Falls, never having been here. She cooked her husband's lunch as usual and said she would call for him at the office at 5 o'clock, but has not since been seen. The Gorvetts have been married for four years. Several times she has gone out of the house and walked for whole nights at a time and on her return would break down and cry. Since her marriage she has been employed as a clerk in a Detroit store and later as waitress in a restaurant.

Man Arrested at Rochester.

By a curious coincidence, while Mr. Gorvett was telling his story a telegram arrived from Rochester, telling of the arrest of a man named Lillybridge, charged with criminally assaulting the woman with whom he was boarding. In his possession was found a clipping telling the story of the finding of the body here and the belief that the woman had been the object of a criminal assault. The man arrested says his wife died in Toledo, in August, and has never been at the Falls. His record is being investigated and his photo will be sent here in an endeavor to prove or disapprove his story.

It was at first believed that the woman whose body was found in the bush here had been assaulted, but the police now incline to the belief that she died from natural causes or was poisoned by eating choke berries. The latter, it is said, would account for her great thirst.

MUCH INTEREST IN FOURSOMES

Mixed Team Matches at Peterborough Golf Club Are Exciting.

FINISHES CLOSE.

Never before in the history of the Peterborough Golf Club has there been such interest in the game as is being taken this year in the two ball mixed foursome. The handicaps have been real good and the games very close, many of them going extra holes. Yesterday Mrs. Gerald Wood and Dr. Green beat out Mrs. C. Graham and A. H. Stratton at the 19th hole, while Mrs. F. Roy and Mr. Lyons beat out Mrs. E. H. Wood and Carl Webber at the 20th hole.

Mrs. Roy's and Mr. Lyons' win was a real feat in golf, for with five to go they were five down, and a half was all that was necessary for the leaders to capture the game, but they staged a comeback and took the last five holes. On Tuesday, Mrs. Jamieson and Dr. MacPherson beat Mrs. Potvin and G. Monkman at the 19th hole, and Mrs. Carmichael and G. W. McDermid beat Miss Rush and

ALL SAINTS' CHOIR SINGS AT NORWOOD

Rev. J. D. Paterson is Preacher at Harvest Festival Service.

Some forty members of All Saints' Church choir and congregation, headed by the Rev. J. Douglas Paterson, motored to Norwood last night for the annual harvest festival service. Rev. Mr. Paterson was the preacher and the choir furnished the music for the occasion.

There was a large congregation present, not only Anglicans but Presbyterians and United Church members turning out, as the mid-week services in the other Norwood churches had been withdrawn. The service was taken by the rector, the Rev. T. J. O'Conor-Fenton.

Mr. Paterson took his text from the eighth chapter of Deuteronomy, and the eighteenth verse, "But thou shalt remember the Lord thy God, for it is He that giveth thee power to get wealth, that He may establish His covenant, which He sware unto thy fathers, as it is this day."

He dealt first with the annual miracle of the harvest, by which God makes seed to multiply for man's needs. This is a miracle and should make man humble.

This miracle, however, is brought about through the agency of man's work and should, therefore, also make him diligent. God works His miracle through man for a definite purpose which is answered in the first response of the Presbyterian catechism "Man's chief end is to glorify God and to enjoy Him forever."

The special music by the choir included the singing of the Magnificat and Nunc Dimittis in Simper's setting in F, and two anthems, "Praise the Lord, O My Soul," by Roland Smart, and the "Gloria in Excelsis" from Mozart's Twelfth Mass. Hymns sung were "Praise, O Praise Our God and King," "Praise to Our God," "Now Thank We All Our God," and "Thy Hand, O God, Hath Guided." The choir was led by George E. Chandler, while Mrs. W. A. Logan played the organ and Mrs. Percy Hooper the violin.

After the service, refreshments were served the visitors in the rectory, the rector and church wardens taking the opportunity to thank the preacher, the choir, and those who had provided cars for their transportation.

Says Girl is Alive

BUFFALO, Sept. 26. —Although her body was reported found in a canal at Cornwall, Ont., a week ago, Miss Maud Nesselrodt, missing St. Lawrence University student, is still alive, Michael Karanas, candy store owner, declared yesterday. The girl, he said, lived in his home and worked in his store until she left for Cleveland on the day the body was found at Cornwall. She was known to him, he said, as Sallie Sanders, but when she went away she left a card on which was written the name of Maud Nesselrodt.

SCHOOL WATER SYSTEM READY

Report of Analyst Awaited — 203 Pupils in Campbellford High School.

BOARD MEETS.

(Examiner Staff Correspondence)

CAMPBELLFORD, Sept. 28.—For the first time in three months, the school trustees held their regular monthly meeting in the council chambers of the public library last night. There were ten members present including Dr. H. O. Richardson, chairman; Wesley Stephens, secretary, Trustees Benor, Stephens, Lynch, Loucks, Birmingham, O'Sullivan Jeffs and Hall. The caretakers of both the High and Public schools were present. E. H. Greig, principal of the High School was the only member of the teaching staff in evidence.

The business of the meeting was not long and was quickly dealt with. J. C. Birmingham reported on the water supply. As chairman of the committee he said that the well had been dug and stoned and that a cement top had been placed over it. In the cement there was an opening for a man hole and also for a pump. A lead pipe had been installed to carry the water to the drinking system in the school building and the system was practically ready for use. The well, he thought, should be pumped out again before the water was used for drinking.

So far, the water had not been analysed, but it tasted like good water and the committee believed that the report of the department would be favorable. Until the report has been received, there will be no pump installed, other than the system already in the building.

Requested by the chairman, principal Greig gave a brief summary of the high school attendance for this year. He had not brought a written report with him but thought he could quote the figures accurately. The total attendance for the year was 203. The first form was unusually large and there was a shortage of seats. There were forty five pupils in the form and only forty seats. He recommended that the board purchase half a dozen movable seats and spoke in favor of those manufactured by Hendry and Co., at twelve dollars each. The number of county pupils in attendance this year was greater than that of last term. There were more county pupils in the school than there were local students. This year there were fewer students from Hastings County but other counties had sent more. The county pupils outnumbered these from town by about twenty.

On motion of Trustees Birmingham and Jeffs, the secretary was instructed to purchase the half dozen seats as required.

The secretary reported the procedure of the meeting in Cobourg of the secretaries of school boards. The meeting was largely to ascertain just what items should be contained in the accounts forwarded to the counties council.

Just before the accounts were passed, Mr. Greig announced that the High School field day had been set for Thursday, October 4th, on the school grounds. An invitation was extended to the members of the board to be present. The accounts were somewhat larger than usual since they were for a period of three months, rather than for the usual one.

Wedding Bells

STAPLES—GLOVER

A very pretty wedding and one of great local interest was very quietly performed in St. Andrew's United Church, London, Ontario, on Wednesday afternoon, September 26, of Geraldine Ross, only daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Robert W. Glover and Newton Clark Staples, only son of Mr. Francis J. Staples and the late Mrs. Staples of Whitby.

The Rev. Dr. D. C. MacGregor read the ceremony, and Mr. C. E. Wheeler, at the organ, played throughout the ceremony.

The church was beautifully decorated in a profusion of asters, gladioli, hydrangea and other fall flowers.

The bride, who was given in marriage by her father, was gowned in a Vlounet model in beige satin-faced canton, which was simply draped and self trimmed with hand faggoting. With it she wore a small silk felt hat, brown shoes and brown fox fur. She wore a shoulder bouquet of orchids and lily of the valley.

There were no attendance; Mrs. Glover, mother of the bride, wore an imported gown of black satin, with filet ecru lace, small black silk felt hat, mink scarf, and corsage bouquet of yellow roses and lily of the valley.

The bride's going-away costume was a brown-tailored frock, mocha beige coat with long mink collar and cuffs with hat and shoes in matching tones of brown.

The bride and bridegroom will reside in Peterborough after a trip to Washington, D.C.

Scientist Offers Water As Fuel

LONDON, Sept. 27.—(Canadian Press.)—A method of using water as fuel, which was quickly challenged by technicians, was submitted to the world's fuel conference here to-day by Dr. Walter Von Hohenau, of Brazil. Dr. Hohenau said he had found that by applying very high vibrations to water he was able to break it up into the constituent elements of hydrogen and oxygen. Hydrogen, he said, could be used as a fuel gas the same way as coal.

One of the technical secretaries of the conference asked Mr. Hohenau to prove that he could create energy, referring to the fact that some kind of power would be needed to set up the vibrations.

Loud cheers greeted Colgrettoo's opening reference to the 'Good News' from Cheltenham when the conference began its business. The conference has a formidable agenda for the one and only days allotted for its discussions. There will also be two mass meetings, the first being addressed tonight by Premier Stanley Baldwin.

Advertising Rates on application.

R. M. GLOVER, Managing Director.

FRIDAY, SEPTEMBER 28, 1928

A DANGEROUS FEATURE.

It is unfortunate in the extreme that it has required the death of an official to show the foolishness of arranging automobile races by amateur drivers as an attraction for fall fairs.

The tragedy at Port Hope will undoubtedly lead to the dropping of such sensational features.

Motor car races, even with experienced and expert drivers, are decidedly dangerous, not only to the contestants, but to the spectators as well.

To turn loose, therefore, a number of inexperienced drivers on a poor track and with inadequate protection for the on-lookers is to invite disaster.

Automobile racing under the most favorable conditions is a sport that contains a great element of risk.

When it is done by amateurs during a fall fair it becomes a menace that should not be tolerated.

THOSE TROUBLESOME SIGNS.

The complaint made by William Findlay, one of the directors of the Canadian Good Roads Association, at the annual convention of that body in regard to the need of uniform road signs throughout the country, would seem to be justified.

The highways are so littered with private signs, advertising commodities for sale, summer resorts and other things that the official traffic signs lose much of their value.

At some cross-roads these advertising signs are so numerous as to bewilder the tourist who seeks to ascertain his course.

Undoubtedly it is time that something was done to clear up this situation, and Mr. Findlay's suggestion that all signs except bona fide road signs should be prohibited within a certain distance of the highways appears to be perfectly reasonable.

Farmers with eggs to sell and summer resort proprietors seeking tourist patronage should place their advertising where it will not prove distracting to the motorist who is endeavoring to drive carefully and to pay heed to the official signs placed for his guidance.

HERE IS A NEW CANADA.

"A sordid story of increasing drunkenness, accidents, crime, disregard for law."

This is the picture of the Canada of to-day as drawn by an official of thirty-two co-operating dry organizations in the United States "from official records and newspaper comment," he says.

Does any one in Ontario recognize that picture or regard it as true to life?

We would like Mr. Robbins to come over here for a few weeks and study conditions at first hand, for it is difficult to believe that any one living in a country where the law is held in as little respect as it is in many parts of the United States would have the nerve to mention disregard of the law anywhere else.

What Mr. Robbins knows about prohibition we know not, but it is clear that he knows nothing about Canada, and that he is not qualified to speak with any authority upon any phase of Canadian life.

His description of conditions here when read along with the daily crime stories from over the border would be merely amusing were it not for the feeling that what he says may be believed by thousands who know as little about Canada as he does.

DOING A GREAT WORK.

The local Rotary and Kiwanis Clubs, both of which are assisting financially the Bowmanville Farm School for unadjusted and underprivileged boys, have doubtless been gratified to hear the excellent reports from the institution following the second annual school fair held there this week.

It is announced that out of eighty boys who have already graduated from the school, only one has failed to make good, a record that led Premier Ferguson in his speech in opening the fair to remark that it was "unparalled in the history of any institution of this character."

The Premier furthermore characterized the Bowmanville school as "the most important institution we have in Ontario."

The splendid progress that has been made in two years indeed justifies such enthusiasm.

The institution is unique.

Based on the principle of giving a fair chance in life to boys who on account of their home surroundings have not had that chance, and of helping them to develop the manhood that is inherent in them, the results already obtained give every reason to be optimistic about the possibilities of this experiment that is making good citizens out of doubtful material.

In assisting such work the service clubs are rendering a splendid service to the whole populace of Ontario.

PLAYING THE GAME.

With the opening of schools and colleges and the revival of large-scale football operations, parents are confronted with the annual question whether their boys are stealing too much time from their studies to devote to sports.

As a rule, modern psychologists tell us, play calls upon energy that might be dissipated in vacant idleness or put to improper use. Play which is not excessive does not dissipate energy, but trains it and stores it up for future use. The physical value of a proper balance of physical and mental occupation is universally expressed in the proverb, "Sana mens in corpore sano."

However, not all parents recognize the social value of play, particularly team play—its value in helping the child learn lessons of life that will make for happiness and success later.

The purpose of play is pleasure, but incidentally it teaches discipline and regard for the rights of others. These things are required of those who observe the rules of the game. There is no game without rules. "Playing the game" means good-natured acceptance of these rules. The participant must go further; he must be a "good sport," which means a "good loser," if occasion arises.

If these are not the lessons we want our children to learn in school, then we are mistaken in assuming that the primary purpose of education is character.—New York American.

THE MARKETING BOARD'S WORK.

A leaflet issued by the Empire Marketing Board and placed in the hands of the Brockville Chamber of Commerce for distribution endeavors to show in brief compass why the former body should be supported by Canadians for the work which it is peforming in behalf of the greater consumption of Empire products in the Motherland.

The common belief is that the Empire Marketing Board simply endeavors, by dint of advertising, to add to the volume of sales of Empire-produced goods throughout the United Kingdom. But its work, while particularly effective in this connection, is not confined to arranging displays in shop windows and at exhibitions, inserting advertisements in the newspapers, and generally attempting to convert Britishers to the doctrine of extending a preference to goods grown or manufactured within the Empire.

It goes closer to the root of the problem than that, by devoting funds to scientific or economic research that has as its object the improvement of quality and the increasing of supplies. In many institutions scattered throughout the Empire there are to-day working men and women, under subsidy from the Empire Marketing Board, who are devoting themselves peculiarly to the solution of various problems which have arisen in connection with production or marketing, just as there are also stationed at the British docks expert advisors who examine cargoes of Canadian fruit upon their arrival and report upon their condition to the Canadian producers.

The Empire Marketing Board has a big job on its hands in persuading the British public that its interests will be best served if it adopts a preference for Empire products. It is handicapped by a shortage of exportable supplies in certain of the Dominions and by the volume of competition from Scandinavia and elsewhere in Europe. But the value of its work is shown in the gradual growth of the consumption of Empire foodstuffs in the Motherland and in the noticeable improvement which has been made in the quality of Empire foodstuffs placed upon the British market.—Brockville Recorder and Times.

THE ROOT OF PROSPERITY.

Where does the money come from? Who buys all the debentures, the bonds, the preferred and common stocks? Who provides the money for bank loans to business men? Who buys all the life insurance? The prudent citizens who so manage their incomes that they have a reserve on hand for investment. The aggregate reserves of some half-million prudent citizens make the deposits in the Canadian banks, the income of the insurance companies, the assets-in-trust of the trust companies. All trace back to the common man with "gumption," who determines that to-day's income is more than enough for to-day's needs.

Since all business and finance rest upon the savings of the people, it ought to be a matter of national importance to train the citizens in sane money-management Economists and financial leaders reached that conclusion long ago. Educationists, concerned about the making of good citizens, reached the same conclusion by another road. Here is the way they travelled. "Learn to do by doing," is a maxim of scientific education. "Learn to save by saving," is the corollary. The proper time to teach the habit of saving, like the habits of reading, writing and calculation, is between the ages of six and twelve. Therefore, children should have a regular and convenient opportunity of putting aside their pennies for future needs; of realizing that by denying themselves the momentary pleasures bought by one cent, or five cents, they have a chance of buying in the future some lasting gratification which otherwise would be beyond their reach.

The obvious thing to do was to set up a savings bank in the Public Schools. For more than twenty years the Penny Bank of Ontario has been in operation, beginning in the schools of Toronto, and gradually extending to other cities and towns in the Province. Safety was the first requirement. The Federal charter of the Penny Bank of Ontario provides that the funds must be invested in Dominion Government securities, or deposited in the Postoffice Savings Bank. A liquid reserve to meet possible withdrawals may be deposited with any of the chartered banks. Not a dollar may be loaned to any individual. No one collects dividends. The directors receive no fees.

The bank pays its young depositors three per cent. on their minimum monthly balances and collects on its accumulated funds the narrow interest-yield that comes from Government bonds and bank deposits. For the first nine years that the bank was in operation there was a deficit on each year's business, which the directors paid with cheerfulness; so convinced were they of the public value of the school savings system.

Now the bank, with total active deposits of $1,054,793.49 in some one hundred and fifty thousand accounts, is able to pay its way. That is to say, its income over the interest liability to depositors, meets its salary and maintenance charges at the head office. But it is still dependent for success on the voluntary aid of some thousands of school teachers who accept the deposits and mark the pass-books, on the sympathy and support of school trustees and parents, and on the co-operation without charge of the chartered banks. The Penny Bank is distinctly a public service, designed to teach the root-principles of social life; the wise management of individual income.

Happy is he that hath the God of Jacob for his help.—Ps. 146: 15.

We rejoice, O God, that we are not lonely orphans in the world. We gladly realize that we can look unto Thee and lonely orphans in the world. We gladly call Thee "our Father." Lead us to note Thy nearness. In the midst of the hurry and flurry of the day, quiet our lives and prompt us to listen to Thy voice, and to interpret aright Thy message. We thank Thee for the bright sunshine and the blue heavens, for fresh air and wholesome food. We praise Thee for the privilege of study and meditation; for uplifting books and ennobling thoughts. We are grateful for good friends and loving companions. May our lives, as well as our lips, tell Thee of our gratitude. Speak with our tongues, work with our hands, send our feet on Thy errands; possess our whole being; "Let that mind be in us which was in Christ Jesus."

Save us from listlessness and laziness; keep us from flimsiness and frivolity; deliver us from selfishness; fill us with cheer, and lead us to brighten the lives of all we meet. Remove from us all malice and meanness. Help us to flee from evil, follow after righteousness and fight the good fight of faith. Broaden our vision, deepen our earnestness, lengthen our love, intensify our reverence and increase our usefulness, we ask in our Master's name.

CATTLE, GRAIN AND PRODUCE

TORONTO LIVESTOCK.

TORONTO, September 28. — With 500 cattle held over, prospect for a clean-up is doubtful, and the stale butchers are of poor quality. Buyers of large quantities, having well-stocked plants, showed an independent attitude. Heifers which brought $10.75 last week are bid $1.50 cwt. lower, which salesmen find themselves unable to accept.

Cows and bulls of all grades were selling steady. Current reports from outside sources also show a tendency to cut butcher steers and heifers, while cows and bulls remain firm. On the local market these were disposed of early every day, leaving none for sale on Thursday.

Dealers were taking choice forward springers at $100 to $135, and choice milkers at $80 to $100. Some common and medium remain unsold.

Yearling sheep were $8.00 to $9.00. Choice light butcher sheep $5.00 to $6.00. Offers were lower at $11.50 for choice lambs. A $3.00 cwt. cut on bucks will start October 1.

Bids of $11.50 f.o.b. selects were placed on yesterday's hogs. Hogs from Essex, Kent, and Lambton were $11.

Receipts: Calves 22, hogs 41, sheep 379.

MONTREAL GRAIN AND PRODUCE

MONTREAL, Sept. 28.—(Canadian Press).—Extreme dullness again marked the export trade in Canadian grain here yesterday. There was a steady demand from domestic and country buyers for cash grain and a moderate amount of business was done in wheat, oats, and barley at steady prices.

Prices for all grades of spring and winter wheat flour were well maintained under a fair demand.

The millfeed market was active and firm. The demand for standard grades of rolled oats was good and values were unchanged.

A featur of the wholesale egg trade was the increased demand from dealers for fresh extras and as the offerings were not large a stronger feeling prevailed in the market and prices scored an advance of 2c per dozen with sales of fifty case lots of Ontario extras at 46c to 47c per dozen, F.O.B. shipping points, while British Columbia dealers were asking 46c per dozen for extras, 44c for firsts, and 36c for pullet extras, F.O.B. Vancouver, and offerings of fresh extras from Alberta were made at 42c per dozen, firsts at 39c, and seconds at 32c, F.O.B. There was no change in prices in the jobbing market, but the impression in the trade was that fresh extras may possibly reach a higher level in the near future. The receipts were 1,654 cases.

The market for imported beans was quiet, but the undertone remains very firm on account of small supplies available on spot. There was a steady demand for small lots and sales of choice white hand-picked were made at $4.20 to $4.40 per bushel, and car lots to arrive were quoted at $4 per bushel, ex-track.

The potato trade was quiet with car lots of New Brunswick grade A offering at 70c per bag of 90 lbs. in bulk, ex-track.

The trade in butter yesterday showed no improvement and the undertone was easy, but there was no actual change in prices announced. The receipts were 466 packages.

Little business was done in Cheese but prices were steady. The receipts were 9,781 boxes.

CHICAGO GRAIN

CHICAGO, Sept. 28. —(Canadian Press.—Broadening out of export business in wheat from North America helped give an upward tilt yesterday to the wheat market here. Estimates of the amount of wheat taken yesterday for Europe from Canada and the U.S. as high as 2,000,000 bushels.

Closing quotations on wheat unsettled at the same as Wednesday's finish to 1½ cents higher. Corn finished ⅝c to ¾c to 1c off, oats, unchanged to ¼ cent up and provisions varying from 12 cents decline to a rise of 62 cents.

Price bulges at Liverpool did a good deal to focus the attention of wheat traders yesterday on evidence of better export demand.

Besides, news of crop failure and of threatened famine in parts of Russia were received and there were also advices that Canadian wheat is being shipped to India, specific mention being made of our vessels chartered to take Canadian wheat to Bombay. Meanwhile, however, the rural movement of wheat in Canada continued to be on a liberal scale, deliveries for one day at interior points totaling 7,790,000 bushels against 3,070,000 bushels last year.

Throughout the day a feature in the Chicago wheat pit was buying of September for elevator interests that simultaneously were selling December. As a result of this process, the price difference between the two months narrowed to 2¼ cents compared with 3¾ cents at Wednesday's close.

The buying of September was taken to indicate that good milling wheat is wanted and also as reflecting the fact that primary receipts of domestice wheat yesterday were less than either a week or a year ago. Some notice was also given to Kansas reports of dry weather causing hindrance to plowing and seeding.

Corn values weakened at the last as a result of profit taking sales and of increased country offerings of corn. Earlier, the corn market was stronger owing to frost reports, talk of export buying of corn, and to month-end evening up of accounts. May delivery of corn touched a new high record for the season. There was complete absence today of any offers of old corn to arrive in Chicago, oats averaged higher, sympathizing with wheat.

Provisions were irregular, but most of the list showed little change despite a further set back in hog values.

BUTTER AND EGGS.

TORONTO, Sept. 28.—Prices on the local butter market were unchanged yesterday. Trading was quiet, with jobbers reporting receipts on the light side, and buyers scarce. There was a small turnover of fresh creamery butter between houses and to the trade at a market price generally ruling at 39¾c per pound for No. 1 pasteurized solids, and 38¾c per pound for unpasteurized and second grade butter. Consumptive demand is fair.

The Toronto egg market continues firm, especially for top grades, with dealers' quotations to shippers well maintained for eggs of extra grade, and with indications of a firming up in price for extras for future delivery. Local receipts continue quite light, although shippers have reported no noticeable falling off in production during the past two weeks. It was reported again yesterday that United States markets are easier in tone on both fresh and storage eggs, and this situation may be reflected here in the future, with prospects of American eggs being consigned to Canadian markets.

Somewhere in Ontario or Quebec

TODAY, possibly in the early morning or in the late afternoon, somewhere in Ontario or Quebec, one of our installers is putting in the 700 thousandth Bell telephone. It may be in a humble home, a mansion, an office in a skyscraper, or a warehouse.

But the significant thing is that Bell telephones in the two provinces have reached the 700 thousand mark. Add to these 700,000 the 135,000 telephones of the other Canadian systems whose lines connect with ours, affording complete intercommunication, and you have a total telephone development of very impressive proportions. There are few communities anywhere in the world where the service is more widely used.

Note the present telephone development in some of our leading cities—

Rural School Fairs In Peterborough District

Warkworth

(Examiner Correspondence)

WARKWORTH, Sept. 27.—The annual school fair was held on the Agricultural grounds Monday, with a large attendance of grown ups as well as interested pupils and teachers.

The hall with the exhibits of fancy work, art, writing, cooking and manual training was surely a splendid display.

The competition in the parades was close and the way in which each one entered showed the interest and careful training of the teachers.

The live stock and poultry was a great show and worthy of comment.

Although rain caused the early closing of the fair the children went feeling they had had a wonderful day.

Asphodel

(Examiner Correspondence)

WESTWOOD, Sept. 27.—The annual School Fair was held in Westwood on Monday afternoon. The weather, although cool, was very bright in the morning, hence a good crowd was present and a large number of exhibits were shown, six schools being represented. Car-loads of children, bringing their various exhibits, began to arrive about ten o'clock, and the placing of these occupied the directors until well past the dinner hour.

Judging competitions on domestic science and livestock were held early in the afternoon, a team of three pupils from each school being allowed to compete. Four schools took part in the school parade: Nos. 1, 5 and 12, Asphodel, and No. 3 Otonabee, the first prize being awarded No. 12, Asphodel. The children showed the careful training they had received in marching, physical drill and school yells.

The public speaking and singing contests revealed talents of no mean order in the rising generation, and a point worthy of comment was the absence of boys in this contest, only girls taking part.

A list of races was run off, the children, as usual, being eager to take part and proudly displaying their prize ribbons. In the driving contest there were only two entrants, who showed their ability and practice with the lines very effectively.

The opening of the hall was the signal for a rush to its entrance, and for a couple of hours the exhibits were open for inspection. Each class had a splendid array of exhibits. One long table was devoted entirely to flowers, another to manual training and nature collections, while sewing, writing and drawing, domestic science, fruit, roots and vegetables, grain and corn were each displayed to advantage, and revealed the special care and interest the youthful exhibitors had taken in their preparation. A short talk by Mr. Gardner, prior to the opening of the hall, enhanced the interest of the exhibits to the spectators. Mr. Gardner referred to the art of making the right choice when selecting articles for exhibition and the proper method of preparing them, demonstrating in each case.

Each year a marked improvement is noted in the exhibits, thus proving the truth of a statement in one of the speeches in the public speaking contest that children of to-day are capable of accomplishments which were unheard of by their grandparents, and the credit is due to the school fair.

A booth, in charge of J. G. Manley, was well patronized during the afternoon, and despite the lowering temperature, ice cream, drinks and chocolate bars were much in demand.

DEANERY W. A. HEARS TALKS ON MISSIONS

Inspiring Addresses Given By Speakers at Campbellford Meeting.

MISSIONARY SPEAKS.

Next Annual Meeting Will Be Held in All Saints' Church, Peterborough.

(Examiner Staff Correspondent.)

CAMPBELLFORD, Sept. 27.— The Woman's Auxiliary of the Deanery of Peterborough met in the Parish Hall, Rear street, all day yesterday. Both meetings were well attended by delegates from every branch in the district and in the afternoon, two most inspiding addresses were heard. Lunch and tea were served by the ladies of the Campbellford church at the end of the morning and after the afternoon sessions. The morning took the form of a Holy Communion service with the Rev. Clarke Wallace, Rector of Campbellford, the celebrant and the sermon by the Rev. C. A. G. Spence, of Apsley, the rural dean of Peterborough. Mr. Spence selected his text from the Book of Revelations.

In the afternoon, the first part of the meeting was taken up with the usual business, the minutes of the last meeting, which was held in Havelock a year ago, and the selecting of the place for the meeting next year. All Saints' church, Peterborough, was selected and the date was left in the hands of the executive. Before receiving the reports of the various branches, Mrs. James P. Archer, president of the local Woman's Auxiliary, officially welcomed the guests. Tribute was paid to the members of the Auxilnary who died during the past year.

Miss Chappel was the first speaker of the afternoon. She is the Dominion Secretary of the Extra Cent a Day Fund and her remarks were very interesting to the ladies. She began by explaining that the organization was the woman's, not the Women's Auxiliary, the singular and not the plural. Each woman was a unit within herself and all the units were united to work toward a common goal. The union reached from coast to coast and from north to south. It was the duty of each and every woman to be present at every meeting since without her the organization would not be complete and the most efficient progress could not be made, nor expected. When there were members absent, the branch was not an efficient auxiliary.

Organization Expands.

The Woman's Auxiliary, said Miss Chappel, was one of the first women's organizations on the Church of England, but of later years it had branched out and established the Girl's Department, the Juniors and the Little Helpers. The Little Helpers were the corner stone of the future of the Auxiliary. She believed that the first seven years of a child's life formed the character, and 'made' the child. Were the women moulding their children along the proper way? Naturally the mother was the first person to set an example to her child. Later the child reached the junor age, then the teen age, and finally reached the age of maturity. But the first seven years were largely in the hands of the mother.

Referring then to the extra cent a day fund, Miss Chappel showed how the fund helped meet a number of outside appeals. It resembled much the famous picture of Holman Hunt, "The Light of the World." It had been pointed out to the artist that there was no latch on the door in the picture and he had been asked why. His explanation was that the latch was on the inner side, our own side. And it was our individual responsibility to open the door for others.

Following the address, Miss Hilda Bonnycastle sang a solo, which was warmly applauded. Miss Maynard was her accompanist.

Missionary Speaks.

Miss L. Thomas was the second speaker. Miss Thomas is a missionary in Chili, South America, and claims to be the only Canadian missionary there. The others are chiefly from the British Isles. Her address was illustrated by a large map and was most interesting. She began by mentioning the fact that the country of Chili was approximately twenty-four days' travel from here. Since her return she had frequently been asked to explain the difference between the natives of the country and the Chili Indians. This she said was much the same as the difference between the Canadians and the Canadian Indians. In each case the Indian was the original settler in the land. The work of the mission with which she was connected was mainly among the Indians which she named, Araucanians.

'The country, she said, was so large that it was impossible to reach all the natives, so schools had been built and the Indians brought to them. At first the attendance was of men only, and these were only for a few days at a time. Then graduates went out and opened other schools. There were native religious meetings held several times each year. These were invariably conducted by witch doctors, and these witch doctors were always women. Prayers were offered up for good crops and general success of the nation. There was also singing, dancing and feasting. The latter part of the program was by far the greatest drawing card of all. In cases of sickness the witch doctors were also in evidence. Their belief was that sickness was caused by evil spirits. The treatment was partially of herbs, and these witch doctors are given credit for possessing a wids knowledge of these.

It was to these people that the missionaries were attempting to bring the knowledge of the only living true God. Besides instruction in the gospels the students at the schools were also taught reading, writing, and some arithmetic. Knowledge was imparted to them as rapidly as they were capable of learning. The boys were also taught useful trades as carpentry and agriculture. It was the intention of the mission to try to keep the natives from the cities by making the rural life more attractive and lucrative.

Girls Being Admitted

Only lately had there been any girls in the schools. It was not the belief of the natives that women should be anything but servants. The girls attended separate schools and were taught useful household duties. A very noticeable trait was the fondness of the native girls for scrubbing. They usually have no floors save those of mud in their homes and the floors in the schools seem to incite into them a desire to keep them spotlessly clean. They were also taught spinning, weaving and mending. Last year the attendance at the school where Miss Thomas was located amounted to ninety five. Of these, forty-five were boarders and the remaining fifty were day pupils.

The divisions in the schools were made after much the same manner as in the Canadian institutions. Indian teachers were supplied for the pupils who did not understand and speak the language of the country, Spanish. In conclusion, Miss Thomas asked for the prayers of the women, for the girls of Chili and for the missionaries who were their guides.

An offering was taken and immediately after votes of thanks were tendered the Rev. N. Clarke allace, rector of Campbellford, the Rev. C. A. G. Spence, Rural Dean, Miss Chappel, Miss Thomas, and the Woman's Auxiliary of Christ Church, Campbellford, for their hospitality during the day. The meeting closed with a word of prayer and the benediction by the Rector.

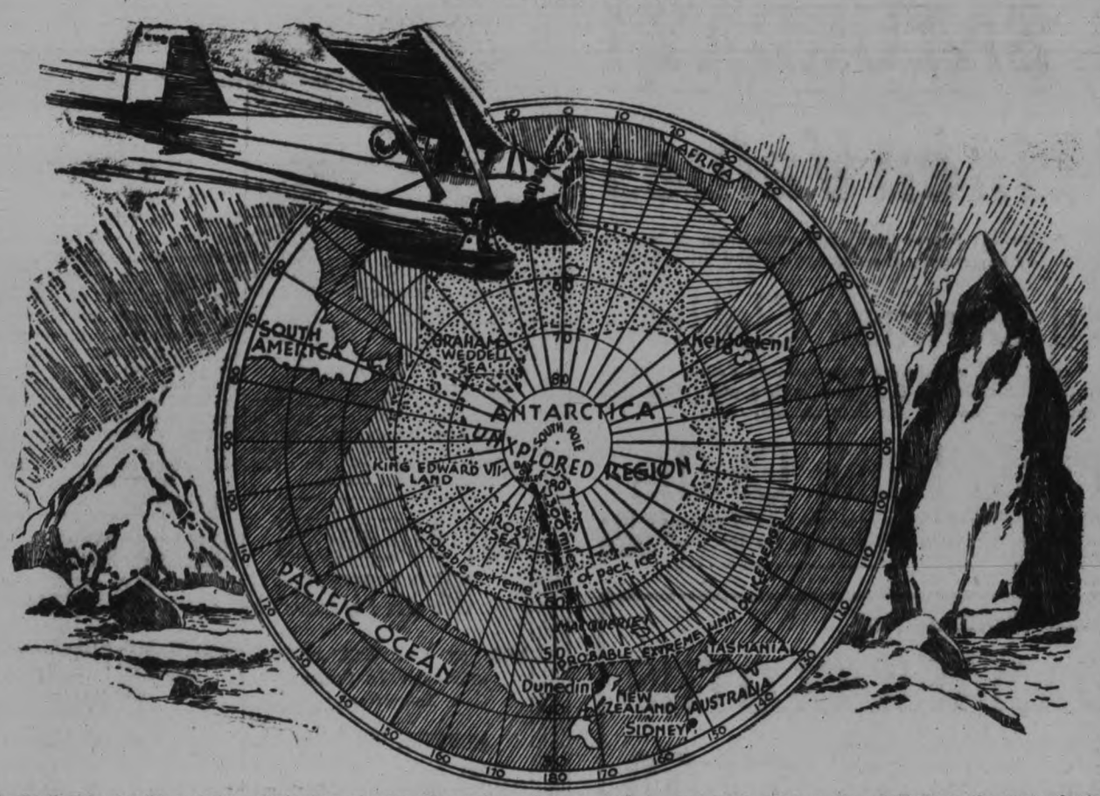
BYRD'S EXPEDITION STARTS SOUTH.



The South Pole expedition of Commander Richard Evelyn Byrd is already in movement—two of his supply ships being now southward bound. The City of New York, a barkentine, set sail from New York on August 25, carrying 32 men and 200 tons of supplies and equipment and has passed through the Panama canal on her way to New Zealand The trawler Eleanor Bolling—named after Byrd's mother—set out to sea from Brooklyn on September, carrying 30 members of the expedition and 600 tons of supplies and equipment, although it is now laid up at Norfolk, Va., for an overhauling. The big whaler Larksen, however, is now out at sea headed for Panama. She is carrying four dismantled planes. Those aboard include Bert Belchen of Greenely Island rescue flight fame, who is Byrd's chief aerial lieutenant, and two other pilots, Harold June and Dean Smith. The steamer Ross, fourth of Byrd's ships, is scheduled to sail from Hampton Roads this month with other impediment and with the 100 Eskimo huskies which will help in establishing Antarctic bases. Most of these dogs came from Quebec and Labrador. Commander Byrd himself plans to join the Larksen when it reach San Pedro, Calif., two weeks hence. From there he will sail for Dunedin, New Zealand. They will then proceed as shown on the map for 2,300 miles to their base camp at Bay of Whales on the great polar ice-barrier. From this point the major explorations and the final dash to the pole itself will be made by plane. It is expected that Byrd will be continuously in touch with the outside world by radio—not only during the early stages of his journey, but also from his Bay of Wales base in Ross Sea and even while flying by plane over the 10,000 feet high mountains which he must conquer on his final dash to the pole.

social side of the work? Surely not! While these things are all encouraging they are not the things we call success. 1st, to be successful we must be in partnership with Christ. As Enoch walked with God, so we must walk with Him. The test of this is 'partnership in service?"

The speaker emphasized this point with a story told by Rev. Dr. Nathan while on furlough from Morocco, Africa. This story concerned a young Swede who had been converted in one of Dr. Moody's meetings. Though an awkward, illiterate youth, he was anxious to at once do something for this Saviour who had done so much for Him. Mr. Moody asked if he would be willing to become a "sandwhich man." The boy instantly replied "Anything for Jesus." The board on one side bore the name of place and time of the Moody meeting, and on the other, John 3:16. He carried this all day, and was pelted with mud and stones by other boys, but did not mind. A traveller chanced to see him, and watching the spirit with which he met the jeers and taunts of the crowd, was led to attend the meeting, which led to his own conversion. In turn, through the ministry of singing he led a young Jew to Christ.

"I am that Jew," said Dr. Nathan, now a missionary in Morocco. "Shall I receive all the reward for the souls I have been instrumental in saving in Africa?" he asked. "What about the Swede, the traveller and Dr. Moody, and their share in the partnership?"

Partnership in Giving.

"Then, there should be partnership in 'giving.' If we expect to be a success, we must give as the Lord commanded us. J. Campbell White, of Allegheny, Pa., when addressing a gathering of young people at a missionary conference, told a thing or two about the relation of money to religion. He said that if the Christian Church of America could be brought to give one postage stamp per capita a week to missions, they would be giving $10,000,000 a year. One carfare a week would amount to $50,000,000, one dish of ice cream would be $100,000,000 a year. The equivalent of one hour's work, at the rate of unskilled labor, would amount to $150,000,000. And all we are really giving is about $14,000,000.

"The giving of money should be recognized as a part of our worship. If we would give what we owe to the Lord, our treasury would be full and we would not need to resort to so many other means of raising money. Let us not forget that our time, our money, our talents, are gifts given us to use wisely, and we are responsible for the way we use them and must some day give an account. Success and growth in spiritual life depend upon few things more than 'liberal giving.' A 'stingy' Christian cannot be a 'growing' Christian. Give systematically. Set aside a fixed proportion of all money you get. Be exact and honest about it. Do not use it for yourself under any circumstances. A tenth is a good proportion to begin with. Do not let it be less than that.

"To be a success we must be friendly and helpful. As a light sends its rays far through the darkness, so do kindly deeds exert a beneficient influence far beyond our thought or expectation. The world will never be won by science, theology or wealth, but by simple goodness, wooing and warming the hearts of men and women.

"'Do something for each other, though small the help may be, there's comfort oft in little things, far more than we can see. It takes the sorrow from the eye, it makes the heart less sore, if but a friendly hand comes nigh, when friendly hands are rare.'

"Find some person you can help, and do not be discouraged if things do not always go the way you would wish. If you cannot succeed one way, try another.

The Need For Prayer.

"To be a success, we must not forget our seasons for prayer. The habit of prayer is one of the great essentials of the Christian life. It must be a daily habit. It may cost sacrifice and effort, but the result will more than justify the effort. Prayer must be regular. Just as one big meal cannot take the place or do the good of regular meals, so we must have our regular times for prayer. Prayer should be planned. We should decide upon what we need to present to the Father, just as we prepare meals and our clothes. 'The World for Christ' will be a motto without meaning until the whole Church has wakened to a deeper sense of the power of prayer, for 'prayer changes things.'

"To be a success we must recognize that the work is His. We look upon a great deal of the Christian work as 'our' work, and He is only consulted and asked to help in it. True Christian service is giving to Him, and at His bidding, and under His absolute responsibility and ownership. It is not 'what am I doing for the Lord?' but 'what is the Lord doing through me?' God could do His work without us, but has called us to be partners together with Him. A touch of God's hand is worth a million human hands.

"He is calling for workers both at home and abroad. May we get in that position where we can answer the call and say 'Here am I use me.'

"'From the mint, two bright new pennies came, the value and the beauty of both the same. One slipped from the hand and fell to the ground. Then rolled out of sight and could not be found. The other was passed by many a hand, through many a change, in many a land. For temple dues paid, Now used in the mart, Now bestowed on the poor by a pitying heart. At length, so it happened, as years went around, Then the long lost, unused coin was found, Filthy and black its inscription destroyed, through resting peacefully unemployed. While the well-worked coin was bright and clear, through active service year after year. For the bright are those who live for duty; rust, more than rubbing, will tarnish beauty.'"

At the conclusion of the program, Rev. Mr. Thornley, on behalf of Mark Street Mission Circle, thanked all those who had a part in making this entertainment so great a success.

All joined heartily in singing "Blest be the tie that binds," and the benediction was pronounced by Rev. J. H. Dudgeon.

The guests were cordially invited to the Sunday School rooms, where refreshments were served and a social time enjoyed.

WOMEN TAKE SENATE CASE TO HIGH COURT

Alberta Women Take Their Case to the Privy Council.

NOT QUALIFIED PERSONS.

Will Fight the Interpretation of the Supreme Court in the B. N. A. Act.

(Written for The Canadian Press by Anne Anderson Perry.)

TORONTO, Ont., Sept. 28.—Canadian women are not going to quietly accept the decision of the Supreme Court of Canada, handed down in April, that in the meaning and intent of the British North America Act women are not to be reckoned as among those "qualified persons" who may sit in the Senate.

It has been announced from the west on behalf of the five women who were responsible for the appeal made to the Supreme Court that they will now ask the Judicial Committee of the Privy Council for an interpretation of the word "person" in section 24 of the British North America Act and that this proposed action on their part is not opposed by the dominion government.

The appellants, all of whom reside in Alberta, where they are prominent in public affairs, are the Hon. Irene Parlby of Alix, the first woman in the Empire to become a Cabinet Minister; Mrs. Louise McKinney of Claresholme, the first woman to be elected to the Alberta Legislature; Mrs. Nellie McClung, nationally known as a writer, feminist and lecturer, who represented Edmonton in the Alberta Legislature; Mrs. O. C. Edwards of MacLeod, the veteran expert who has been for many years the Convenor on Laws of the National Council of Women, and Magistrate Emily Murphy of Edmonton, well known author who with Mrs. Alice Jamieson of Calgary was one of the two first women in Canada to be appointed magistrates.

"It's a fight for women, but it was not started by women," said Magistrate Murphy in announcing the decision of herself and sister appellants to go to the Privy Council for a final ruling. "Twelve years ago when I was first appointed to the Bench with, at the beginning, jurisdiction only for the city of Edmonton, but later for the province of Alberta, my initial appearance at the Police Court of my city was heralded by counsel for the defense in the case rising and objecting to me. 'You are not a person within the meaning of the North America Act,' he stated, 'and I object to your jurisdiction.' And right there he started this whole discussion, although he was not the only lawyer to take similar objection. A lot of them did it, and meant it too, but a little later on I was able to check them better on the points of the law, and was not worried as I felt that the Alberta government was satisfied of the legality of their procedure before the appointment of myself and Magistrate Alice Jamieson of Calgary."

Similar objections having been taken in a case coming before Magistrate Jamieson, the matter was placed before Mr. Justice Scott of the Alberta Supreme Court, when he found that "a woman is under no legal disqualification in the Province of Alberta from being appointed a Justice of the Peace or Police Magistrate."

This judgment was later endorsed by the entire Supreme Court of Alberta when the case was further appealed.

Publicly the matter of women and "persons" did not arise again as a disputed point until 1919, although in the meantime in post-war days, and by common consent of Parliament, the British North America Act had been so amended that women were made entitled to the dominion vote and to become eligible for election to the House of Commons. In 1919 the Montreal Women's Club, having conceived the idea that this legislation also made women eligible for the Senate, memorialized the then Premier, Rt. Hon. Arthur Meighen, in a lengthy resolution asking for the appointment of women senators. They were assured that the matter would be given "favorable consideration," but when a little later the Federated Women's Institutes came forward with a similar demand, signed by representatives from eight provinces, they were told by Mr. Meighen after considerable delay that in the opinion of the Government women were not "persons" within the meaning of the North America Act.

The same answer was given Mrs. Nellie McClung, M.L.A. of Alberta, and Madame Marchand of La Federation des Canadiennes Francais, who appeared in person with a request that Magistrate Emily Murphy be appointed by the Government to fill a vacancy in Alberta's representation in the Upper House.

In 1923 there appeared somewhat mysteriously on the "orders of the Day" on June 25 in the Upper Chamber at Ottawa a petition to His Majesty, praying that the word "female" be inserted before the word "persons" in Section 24 of the B.N.A. Act. To this motion however there was carefully or carelessly hitched a further section asking that no senator be allowed to hold office after 70 years of age. No sponsor came forward to push this motion. It was bound to be bitterly opposed on account of the last cause and was dropped.

Last year the women interested in achieving this milestone in the complete enfranchisement of women in Canada decided to take the vexatious question entirely from the realm of politics into that of the law. An appeal was made to the Supreme Court of the Dominion on the question, "Does the word 'persons' in Section 24 of the British North America Act, 1867, include female persons?" Touching this action Magistrate Murphy pointed out that under Section 60 of the Supreme Court Act, provision is made that "important questions of law and fact, touching the interpretation of the British North America Act, may be referred by the Governor-General in Council to the Supreme Court for hearing and consideration." The Act further provides that all reasonable fees for such action may be paid by the Minister of Finance, for the "interested parties" making the appeal, from monies appropriated by Parliament for purposes of litigation. A still further provision makes it possible in case of an adverse judgment from the Canadian Supreme Court, to bring the matter to His Majesty in Council.

It was under the second provision that the five appellants backed by the Alberta Government went before the Supreme Court and under it that the services of Hon. N. W. Rowell were secured and paid for by the Dominion Government, to argue their case, although the federal and Quebec governments were upholding the negative side of the argument.

And it is under the last provision that these appellants are now acting in taking the matter to the Privy Council for final judgment.

The latest action taken by the women is unlikely to be influenced by the announcement from Ottawa that steps will be taken to secure necessary amendments to the B.N.A. Act to admit women to the Senate. The women have apparently found that the road through any governmental machinery of whatever party, is a long road. Constitutionalists state that the success of any such governmental action is dependent on the consent of both the Commons and Senate and that it may also be dependent on the consent of every provincial legislature.

Women feel that the consent of the Senate is very far from certain. In the case of Quebec, as a province which has to date refused to extend to its women even the provincial franchise, they feel their position is a little more than doubtful. Therefore they prefer to rely on an appeal for interpretation from the Privy Council, rather than on the slower method of legislation.

As the Dominion is notopposing their procedure the women hope that the result is a foregone conclusion and that at last the women of Canada will be declared in law and fact "persons" for all purposes.

MISSION CIRCLE OPENS SEASON

Mark Street Girls Hold Open Rally Meeting in Church.

INSPIRING ADDRESS.

The Mission Circle of Mark Street United Church marked the opening of their autumn term by staging a very fine social evening, when they entertained the circles of the various United churches of the city on Monday evening, in the auditorium of the church. There was a large attendance and the visitors were met and welcomed at the doors.

The Rev. Mr. Thornley, pastor of the church, as chairman, also welcomed the visiting circles. In his opening remarks he voiced his appreciation of the work being done throughout the city by its organization, assuring them of his hearty support and that of his congregation.

A specially good program was given and was greatly enjoyed, several responding generously to the encores. The program consisted of the following numbers:

Reading, "The Strike in the Church at Millville"—Mrs. George H. Rowe

Vocal solo—Mrs. Hugh Hunter.

Address—"How To Make Our Circle a Success"—Mrs. J. H. Dudgeon.

Vocal Solo, "How Many Sheep Astray"—Mrs. E. Wand.

Readings—(1) "Mrs. Casey and the Billy Goat," (2) "Curfew Shall Not Ring To-night," accompanied with lantern slides—Miss Mabel Reynolds.

Violin solo—Clifford Rusaw.

Vocal solo, "Some Day I'll Understand"— Mrs. Andrus.

Mrs. W. Smith was accompanist for all the numbers.

The address given by Mrs. Dudgeon was a real inspiration to all workers in Mission Circles, who aim at the success of their objective. "What do we mean by success?" she asked "Is it the gathering of a large membership, raising our allocation, or the

BELIEVE DEATH WAS NATURAL

Police Hear Story of Woman Who Gave Girl Sealer of Water.

AT NIAGARA FALLS.

NIAGARA FALLS, Ont., Sept. 27 —Discovery of a woman yesterday by Inspector Airey and her account of a conversation in June last will go a long way toward clearing up the mystery surrounding the death of a young woman whose body was found near here on Sunday last. The police believe now that the young woman met her death by natural causes.

The new witness in the case told the police that in June last a young woman called at her home and asked for a drink of water. She remarked at the time that the caller was very thirsty and drank seven cupfuls. Before she went away she asked for a bottle to carry some water to drink, and was given a sealer. This sealer is now believed to be the one found beside the dead body.

The descrription of the dress she wore answers to that of the clothing found on the body.

The report of Dr. John McGarry disclosed no fracture of the skull, although no definite cause of death could be established. It has been decided that the body is not that of Jean Muir, missing Thorold girl.

CANADA BEST U.S. CUSTOMER

Buys 18.1 Per Cent. of Goods Exported From United States.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 27.— Canada led the United Kingdom by more than $100,000,000 in total trade, both exports and imports, with the United States during the first six months of 1928, the Foreign Commerce Department of the Chamber of Commerce of the United States emphasized yesterday in a further analysis of foreign commerce.

During that period Canada bought more American exports, and in return sold the United States more of its imports, the Chamber said, than any other country. The total business between the two countries was $661,000,000, compared with $560,000,000 for the United Kingdom, the second best buyer and third seller.

"Canada," the Chamber stated, "with a population of about 9,400,000—somewhat less than that of the metropolitan district of the City of New York—in the first half of this year purchased American goods amounting to $429,199,000, or 18.1 per cent. of our total exports, thus becoming by far our most important market, having outdistanced her nearest competitor, the United Kingdom, by nearly $45,000,000. Our Canadian neighbors, in displacing the United Kingdom as our best customer, increased their purchases nearly 1½ per cent., buying $45.70 worth of American goods per capita in the six months."

Exports of American potatoes to Canada have been cut to less than half their total within three years, says a Government announcement.

SHORTHORN SOCIETY RE-ELECTS OFFICERS

Arrangements Made For Annual Sale, To Be Held in February.

The annual meeting of the Peterborough County Shorthorn Breeders Association was held recently in the offices of J. B. Nelson, District Representative of the Department of Agriculture. It was a most enthusiastic gathering, and the members decided to push forward with a greater vigor the work of endeavoring to build up a better quality of Shorthorn cattle in this country. The following officers were elected: President, Walter Bowles; Vice-President, Melville Pimmett; Secretary-Treas., Beecher Matchett.

Arrangements were made for the annual sale, to be held the end of February, and from all prospects the sale will be the largest in the history of the association. It was decided to continue the rigid inspection of animals which are being offered at the sale, and this year they will be inspected before December 15, so to enable those which are not in condition to be offered for sale to be improved.

XXXVIII—THE MIRACLE

The room was dark save for a shaded light behind a screen, and silent—horribly silent.

They had taken away all the flowers, too.

Sanderson thought of the night Poppy Sladen died, and of her hoarse, frightened question, "Am I going to die?"

He had answered, "We've all got to die some day," and she had laughed. It had seemed easy philosophy with which to comfort her and himself, but this was different.

If Sally died there would be nothing left in all the world; if Sally died he would go out with her, or follow her as soon as he could find a way.

Philip Sanderson buried his face in his hands and tried to remember a prayer, but it was so long since he had heard one.

"God—God—oh, God!" were the only words that would come to his lips.

The hours wore by. The little nurse tip-toed to him with a cup of tea.

"It will do you good," she urged when he shook his head, and then, when he again refused: "Don't be selfish. Drink it," she said sharply.

He obeyed silently then, conscious of the kindness of her eyes.

"It's getting light," she said.

Sanderson glanced towards the window where the first grey streaks of dawn shone on either side of the blind.

Dawn! And people so often died in the early morning!

He looked at Sally with agonized eyes.

If she would only speak to him, smile at him! And then quite suddenly, as if in answer to his passionate pain, she opened her eyes.

"Philip——"

It was only a whisper, but the most exquisite music to his ears.

"My beloved!"

She moved her hand closer to him, and Sanderson took it in his.

"Don't talk, Sally. Try to sleep."

But she would talk.

"I've been dreaming—about Garry ——" She drew a little hard breath as if in pain before she said again: "He's gone, hasn't he? Gone away from me, I mean."

"His father is ill; he had to go."

She seemed not to hear Sanderson's loyal excuses.

"I know," she said; and there was a note of strange understanding in her voice. "I know. I saw him in my dream, walking up the road towards the cottage, but he didnt go in; he went by——"

Then she closed her eyes again and lay still.

Sanderson did not move; he felt that the throbbing of his heart would break it.

Dawn! And people so often died in the early morning!

"Sally!" he said hoarsely.

She opened her eyes dreamily.

"Don't go away," she whispered, just as Poppy Sladen had done. "I shan't feel so lonely if you stay."

It seemed an eternity before the little nurse came softly into the room again. She glanced at Sanderson, and then she bent hurriedly over Sally.

For a moment all life seemed suspended in the silent room, and Sanderson's face was grey as the dawn which was knocking at the window.

Then suddenly the little nurse smiled, well pleased.

"She's sleeping beautifully," she said.

It was the end of August before Sally went back to the cottage.

For six weeks she had lain on her back in plaster of Paris, and for another six weeks she had been learning to walk again, taught like a child painfully to put one step before the other.

They had been strange weeks to Sanderson. Looking back upon them, they seemed like a great unreality, during which he had moved and slept and had his being, and had yet been outside the panorama of hope and suffering through which he had so gallantly helped Sally to pass.

She had so often been raised to the highest peak of delirous hope, only to be dashed again into the depths of despair. One moment she had cried out to him, "I can't bear any more, Philip—I can't!" and the next, when he had answered passionately, "You shan't. I won't allow them to let you suffer for another hour," she had answered him angrily, accusing him of not wishing her to get well.

Garry Nairn had not come back again, and the only time when Philip had mentioned his name to Sally she had closed her blue eyes as if to hide the pain in them as she answered:

"He wrote. It's all right. I quite understand. It doesn't matter. We won't talk about it any more. He's just not coming again, that's all. He's not to blame. He's quite right."

To Sanderson he had not written after that first note, but once, when Sally had suffered more than usual and had cried Garry's name in her painful slumber, and Sanderson went down to Ash Hill, it was only to be told that Garry had gone abroad again—unexpectedly.

Garry's father attempted no excuses for his son; he just stood and looked at Philip Sanderson with his kind eyes full of understanding, and when Philip broke out, "Why the hell—I beg your pardon—but the whole thing's inexplicable," he answered, "I know. I wish I could explain, but I cannot."

It was several days before Philip found sufficient courage to tell Sally what had become of Garry, and then when at last he had she just said, "I asked you not to speak of him any more," and changed the subject.

Didn't she care any longer? Philip longed to ask her, but dared not. Whenever he looked at her he thought of Garry Nairn, and whenever he thought of Garry Nairn his big hands clenched themselves into fists, and he wanted to hit someone—hard!

The day before Sally was to go home Sanderson went down to the cottage to see that everything was in order. Mrs. Kiff wept when she saw him, and Sometimes would not leave him for a second. He walked so close to him that he was trodden on dozens of times during the day, but he never uttered one yelp of complaint; he just wagged his whip-like tail and laughed at everything in sheer delight.

"And Miss Sally can really, really walk?" Mrs. Kiff asked for the hundredth time; and Sanderson answered patiently:

"Yes, but only very slowly and with two sticks. But every day she gets a little better; every day she walks a little more steadily."

Mrs. Kiff burst into fresh emotional tears.

"And they say that the day of miracles ain't no more!" she sobbed.

"Sally has wrought the miracle herself," Sanderson answered. "Her pluck and patience have been marvellous."

Already he had forgotten the terrible scenes through which he and the little nurse had together struggled with her; he loved Sally sufficiently well to remember only the days when she had managed to smile through tears of sheer pain and weakness, days when she had held his hand hard and whispered:

"Don't leave go of me. Stay with me, Philip, even if I'm a beast to you."

But Mrs. Kiff had to voice her own opinion.

"I'll lay that the most marvellous thing all along has been your own pluck and patience, sir, or my name's not Sarah Kiff!"

Sanderson laughed brusquely.

"Nonsense. I never had any patience." He stooped to pick Sometimes up in his arms. "Hardly limps at all now, does he?" he asked delightedly. "We have got two miraculous cures, Mrs. Kiff."

LYRICS OF LIFE

DOUGHNUTS

Mother calls them doughnuts,
Grandma doesn't, though:
Grandma calls them friedcakes,
Just like long ago.
Grandma comes to visit;
Then we always say,
"My, but wouldn't doughnuts
Just be fine today!"

Grandma doesn't listen,
Doesn't seem to hear;
Grandma's rather deaf in
One convenient ear.
Then we all remember,
Then we all repeat,
"My, but wouldn't friedcakes
Just be fine to eat?"

Grandma gets her apron,
Asks about the fat,
Mixes flour and sugar
And milk and all of that.
Then we say to Grandma,
When it's time to dine,
"My, your dough—your friedcakes
Certainly are fine!"

Some folks call things one thing,
Some folks something new,
But it doesn't matter
Really which you do.
When you want some doughnuts,
It won't hurt to say,
"My, but wouldn't friedcakes
Just be fine today!"

Why We Do What We Do.

WHY FRIDAY IS CONSIDERED UNLUCKY

By Mehran K. Thomson, Ph. D.
(Author, The Springs of Human Action)

Of course Friday is no more unlucky than any other day. Nevertheless the superstition that it is persists and a great many people believe that Friday is unlucky. They believe this strongly enough to refrain from undertaking anything important and from beginning a long journey on Friday.

This superstition, like all others, is based on false reasoning. The primitive and undisciplined mind easily makes the mistake of linking things together that do not necessarily go together. He is deceived by appearances and assumes that two things that happen at the same time or closely follow each other are necessarily connected.

Therefore if a man has a series of misfortunes, all of them coming on the same day, he concludes that the day must be hoodooed for him. It is his unlucky day. He must ever afterwards avoid doing important things on that day. Since misfortune is bound to come it is better to have it come in trivial affairs.

Friday has long been considered unlucky. The superstition has an interesting history.

Among the Christian nations Friday is regarded as an unlucky day because Christ was crucified on Good Friday. Thus, curiously enough, Friday is both a holy day and unlucky day.

During the middle ages Friday was blamed for all the misfortunes that are recorded in the Bible. The following unfortunate events were all dated on Friday. Adam sinned and was driven from paradise on Friday. Cain slew his brother Abel. John the Baptist was beheaded and Herod slew the holy innocents on Friday. Friday was also the day of the deluge and the confusion of tongues at the Tower of Babel.

Having this suggestion in mind and believing that Friday is unlucky, one is more likely to notice the unfavorable events that fall on that day while misfortunes of equal or even greater importance that fall on other days are likely to be overlooked.

The notion of Friday being unlucky acts as an hypothesis, something definite to which evidence may be attached. And by omitting the negative instances it is easy to make out a good case.

Friday is an unlucky day to him who believes it.

UNCLE WIGGILY

By HOWARD R. GARIS

Today's Bedtime Story

UNCLE WIGGILY AND THE SQUIRT BALL

(Copyright, 1928, McClure Syndicate)

Once upon a time, as Uncle Wiggily was hopping past the Hollow Stump School, the Lady Mouse Teacher leaned out of the window and called:

"Will you hop here just a moment, if you please, Mr. Longears?"

"Why, of course, Lady Mouse," answered the bunny gentleman. "Are some of my forty twelve little rabbit children playing tricks in class?"

"Oh, no, all the children have gone home. School is out long ago," said Miss Mouse. "But during class this afternoon Johnnie Bushytail was playing with a squirt ball and I took it away from him. I meant to give it back to him when school was out for the day but I forgot it. Johnnie is usually a good little squirrel and I wouldn't want to keep his plaything away from him. So I thought I would ask you to take it to him."

"I'll do that," promised Uncle Wiggily. "In fact I should like to see for myself what a squirt ball looks like."

He had a good time all by himself.

"Oh, you have seen them before," spoke Miss Mouse. "It's just a rubber ball with a hole in and when you fill the hollow ball with water and squeeze it, or sit on it, or step on it the water squirts out through the hole."

"I see," said Uncle Wiggily. "So that's why it's called a squirt ball. Well, I'll take it to Johnnie if you wish. I have to hop right past his tree house on my way to the bungalow."

So Miss Mouse handed to Uncle Wiggily, out of the window, the rubber squirt ball.

"Be careful now!" exclaimed Mr. Longears as he reached his paw up for the ball.

"Be careful not to squirt water on me!" chuckled Mr. Longears.

"Oh, there isn't any water in the ball now," the Teacher said. "Even if there were I wouldn't squirt on you. As a matterof fact Johnnie sprayed all the water in his ball down the back of Susie Littletail, who was sitting in front of him. It was because Susie screamed when Johnnie squirted on her that I knew the squirrel boy was up to some of his tricks. Tell him to leave the squirt ball at home tomorrow."

"I will," promised Uncle Wiggily. Then he hopped away with the rubber toy and when he was half way to his bungalow he thought: "I wonder how far Johnnie's rubber ball squirts? Here I am near the duck pond of water. I can fill the ball and try it myself."

So Uncle Wiggily squeezed the ball and put the hole under water and soon the ball began to fill. Then, when it was puffed out round again Uncle Wiggily pressed it some more and he jumped and cried "Wow!"

For by mistake he had aimed the hole right toward his face and when he squeezed the ball it squirted a stream of water on his pink nose.

"I must be more careful!" said Uncle Wiggily and he couldn't help laughing at himself. He squirted all the water out of the ball back into the duck pond and had a good time all by himself. Then he thought he would fill the ball again and take it full of water to the squirrel boy.

"I want Johnnie to show me how far he can squirt," thought Mr. Longears. "He must be pretty good at it and perhaps he can teach me some tricks. I'd like to be a good rubber ball squirter."

Squeezing the ball again and sending out a stream of water about as far as from here to there, if not farther, Uncle Wiggily emptied the ball once more and then filled it for the third time.

"I wonder if there is any magic in three times?" thought Mr. Longears to himself as with the squirt ball full of water he came up from the duck pond. "If there is, something ought to happen for this is the third time I've filled this ball with water."

"Yes, something is going to happen!" suddenly exclaimed a voice behind the bushes.

"Oh dear!" murmured Uncle Wiggily: "Who are you?" he asked, for he could see no one.

From Youth to Age

THERE are three trying periods in a woman's life: when the girl matures to womanhood; when a woman gives birth to her first child; when a woman reaches middle age. At these times Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound helps to restore normal health and vigor.

Three Generations

"My daughter took Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound when she was 15 years old. She always felt like crying and her legs would feel like rags, she was so weak. Now she is much stronger. I took the Vegetable Compound when I was 16 for this same trouble and my mother took it too after she was married and before I was born. I recommend this medicine to old and young women."—Mrs. George Goudreau, Barons Lalemant, Quebec.

Change of Life

"I am taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound through the Change of Life. It helps me and I cannot praise it too highly. I was troubled with heat flashes and my limbs were heavy so I could hardly walk to do my farm-work. I saw in the newspapers the Vegetable Compound and thought to give it a trial. The first bottle gave me relief and I have told others what it does for me. I am willing for you to use my letter."—Mrs. D. B. Peters, Wilton, Ontario.

THE MIRROR OF THE MODE

By Mary Marshall.

Velvet coat of the old Burgundy so much favored is trimmed with collar of gray fur.

Gray is not mentioned in the lists of the fabric colors for autumn or winter, nor from the impression one gains from the clothes now worn by fashionable women is there any ground for saying that gray is important in the new color scheme. But gray fur is decidedly important and the furriers who have to do with the best-dressed women tell me that there is a decided vogue for gray peltries of many sorts among the women of the sort that they refer to as "exclusive." In other words, gray fur should be considered if you want to look decidedly smart but not commonplace. There is nothing to indicate that "everyone" will be wearing it.

Gray kid, gray Persian lamb and gray krimmer are mentioned by one furrier as the gray furs most in favor. One of the leading Paris furriers struck a new note recently by using gray monkey fur. The three furs first mentioned are used for coats of the sort that may be worn for sports events—football games, etc.—and for general street wear.

Frequently gray fur is used to trim cloth coats and frocks of other colors. Navy blue cloth with gray krimmer is especially smart, and some of the new wine red shades may be trimmed with gray fur with very good effect. In spite of the smartness of gray fur I have seen very little squirrel, though it has been brought forward by Paris dressmakers for trimming. In fact it is upon the members of the sheep tribe—Persian lamb, krimmer and various goats—and the foxes that fashion seems to focus her attention at present. Krimmer is naturally of a light gray tone and it is only through the well-established custom of dyeing Persian lamb black that it has come to be thought of as naturally black.

The furs that are in demand at present seem for the most part to be of the very long-haired sort like fox or the very short-haired sort like the kids and lambs. One or two of the prominent dressmakers have, it is true, shown beaver for autumn, but this is not a widespread vogue as yet.

MARION'S MAIL

Address correspondence to Marion, at The Examiner Office.

"Dear Marion,

I certainly think your page is wonderful, and look at it first thing. I am sending in the coupon for the pleated skirt and ribbon flowers. I see in yesterday's Examiner that you still have a few copies of the pointed slip and camiknickers. If so, would you please send them along, too?

Yours truly,
M. M."

I am glad to learn your good opinion of our page, M. M. I've sent the helps requested. It's funny about those helps of which I ran short—I had more printed, as announced a few days ago, and then forget to tell the printers to take the line out of the coupon saying the helps were all finished. I hope I remember tomorrow!

"Dear Marion,

I hope you won't think my request too absurd—I know you have answered a lot of questions that would seem to the average person impossible. Can you tell me how to make the little wool decorations one sees on sweaters and coats. Don't go to any trouble about it, please.

I surely enjoy reading the Women's Page, and, like many others, I appreciate specially your little sermonettes. Your talk on what that man 'Croy' wrote was particularly good. I sure can't see why we girls should act like dumb-bells just to tickle some man's vanity! I liked, too, the one you wrote on Friday about children learning to be courteous. Such ideas are needed, and we can all profit from them.

I look for your page every day when The Examiner comes.

Yours truly,
BESSIE.

Thanks a lot for your encouraging letter, Bessie. It's funny, isn't it, that I should have arranged for just such a help for next week and then discarded it because I thought there would not be many interested. I have typed out the instructions and sent them to you privately. If any more are interested I'll work in the help week after next, with sketches.

I'm awfully glad you like the "sermonettes." Really, they are not intended to be sermons, and I hope no one thinks I'm preaching.

"Dear Marion,

I received the directions for the ribbon flowers and thank you very much. Enclosed was a card asking for recipes or suggestions, and I see someone last night asking for a recipe for tomato mincemeat. As I have one I have used, and some folks like it better than apple mincemeat. I am sending it and hope it will be what M.T. is looking for.

Wishing you every success, believe me,

Yours truly,
Mrs. W. A. W."

I wish to thank you for the recipe, Mrs. W. A. W., which I am passing on. I have sent the other helps requested in your letter, and hope they are what you desire. I'm sure M.T. will appreciate your help, as, indeed, I do.

THE WHATNOT

A Place for Little Bits of Everything of Local Interest

By MARION

WE ALL HAVE FRIENDS, perhaps some of us only one we would consider a close friend, but I wonder if we stop to think how we may keep them. Would you call a person who discussed the faults of a so-called friend to others, a real friend? I think true friendship means that loyalty which may see the faults and yet overlook them. None of us is perfect, as we all know; so why should we expect perfection in others?

Can you imagine brothers living in the same town for years and not spending Christmas together? Even worse than that, not even speaking to each other? Maybe the trouble was all over the fact that John's small son let Tige dig in Uncle Bob's pet cucumber bed. Admittedly Tige was a terror to dig, but was it worth years of misunderstanding to have a fuss about it. Surely Tige could have been tied and not allowed to crawl through that hole in the fence that gave him his only chance to get into Bob's yard. Maybe it was a dispute as to who was to mend the hole that caused the trouble.

• • • • • •

Perhaps some of you remember the wise crack in one of our recent movies. Two partners, both Irish, had quarreled over the administration of a piece of property. One man died and the other in explaining to his niece said, "He was right, but he was so pig-headed that I wouldn't give in." Doesn't that describe the attitude of a great many friends who quarrel?

• • • • • •

Most of our misunderstandings are caused by the same thing—pig-headedness.

• • • • • •

Why not arrange your living-room with the avocations of your family in mind. Naturally the comfy chairs will be group about the fire-place with a low, flat-topped bookstand nearby to hold the tea cups when necessary. The table would be best near the window for light when playing solitaire, doing homework or writing that long-planned letter to Cousin Vera.

• • • • • •

A deep arm-chair placed by a small table comes in handy for the overflow in dutiful correspondents or for a certain young man who is waiting (they still do wait) for her to appear.

• • • • • •

A certain fireplace in a home in the south-end was placed in a nook. Somehow it don't seem to have the proper setting with wall paper as its background. The handy man of the house provided the right atmosphere by paneling the wall with a plaster-board grained to resemble oak panels. As he said to me, "We couldn't afford to get the necessary wood and if we had been I should still have had this." In his case it was quite all right, as he must have been an artist to get the realistic appearance he did.

• • • • • •

I must tell you that the ceiling of the room of which I spoke is beamed in oak. The beams are not solid as they would have been too heavy, so two-inch planks were nailed together to form three sides of a solid square.

• • • • • •

While we are on the subject of room decoration, let me tell you what a resident of the west-end plans for the windows of her living room. She explained that she didn't want a formal room, but one that would give a feeling of at-homeness. Her room has a group of casement windows, large ones in the side, a similar group in the end of the room and a small pair of windows in the wall at the end of the fireplace. The large window is to have red cotton damask with sash curtains of casement cloth for use in daytime, while the small pair will be dressed in thin red material and casement cloth. The group in the end wall will have chintz, as the centre window is in reality a door and the windows on each side of it are recessed and have shelves placed in them for the resting place of pottery and transparent glass.

Did you ever want to disinfect a mattress or some article which you were afraid would run or look faded. I have seen whicks dipped in a solution and shaken over the article, but an even better way to my mind is to put the disinfectant in one of the many makes of spray guns and use just as if you were killing flies or moths. A much finer spray can be had than with the use of a whisk.

• • • • • •

Do you remember when you came in after school with, "Mother, I'm hungry, may I have something to eat?" How many of us received as an answer, "No, wait until supper-time, it isn't good to eat between meals." Well, "them days is gone forever." It is now considered good form as well as good health to give growing children, younger children who come in from school, or those whose families "wait for Daddy" a lunch of fruit or milk with perhaps the addition of crackers or bread.

• • • • • •

Why not make a note of where the sun shines most and where least about the house during the summer right now. Why? So that next spring when you plant your flowers you will know just where to put those worshipper of the sun-god and where to put the shy, retiring plants that are so charming in just the right spots. This doesn't apply naturally to those who have been in their homes for years or for even two seasons, but for poor unfortunate movers in, it would be a help.

Questions and Answers.

Question: Mrs. G. J. asks: "Will you please give the first aid treatment for acute indigestion?"

Answer: The simplest remedy to employ when suffering from acute indigestion is to drink three or four glasses of water as hot as can be borne. This will assist in carrying off the offending food material, and in some cases produce vomiting, which brings quick relief. Where vomiting is produced it is well to drink immediately afterwards more hot water to overcome the irritation of gastric juice and bile which is generally thrown out in large quantities during acute indigestion.

Question: Anxious asks: "Will you please tell me what to begin feeding a five months old baby? It is breast fed but seems hungry. Weighs fifteen pounds, twelve ounces, and is very lively. What would cause a baby's feet to perspire and feel clammy?"

Answer: A five months old baby should be given only orange juice and milk, using about four feedings daily of milk, each feeding to be preceded by one or two teaspoonfuls of orange juice. The quantity of milk used at each feeding should vary between four to six ounces; according to the baby's digestive ability. The baby should be kept warm and the circulation in the legs not interfered with by having the diapers or underclothing too tight.

Question: A Young Lady asks: "Do you think that having such blemishes as moles removed from one's face paves the way to growths of a more serious nature, such as a cancer, etc.?"

Answer: If moles are removed carefully with an electric needle there is no danger of cancer forming in the same place. I have personally never seen a skin cancer which had formed at the site of a scar caused by removing a mole.

BATHROOM GOES COLOR

The modern bathroom has "gone color" as has every other room in the well-decorated house. Linen towels have, for some time, been a feature of the scheme with their colored damask borders. These may be pink, green, mauve, yellow—chiefly pastel shades. Another novelty is hand-painted designs on linen towels. These are skilfully applied in delicate shades and may be laundered with impunity.

GOLD MONOGRAMS ON SILVER

A new process has just been developed in the marking of sterling silver, making possible distinctive monograms of gold inlay. The simplicity in design which this permits has a particular appeal to people who care for the finest, most delicate lettering on their plain patterned sterling. It is free from any semblance of ostentation or show. Single letters or monograms are treated equally well in this process.

EMPIRE PLAN OF INSURANCE IS SUGGESTED

Lord Melchett Believes Some Scheme Could Be Worked Out.

UNEMPLOYMENT AID.

Favors Immigration System That Would Be Advantageaus to Both Countries.

(Special to The Examiner)

TORONTO, Sept. 28.—A plan for Empire unemployment insurance was suggested by the Right Hon. Lord Melchett, formerly Sir Alfred Mond, in an interview with The Examiner. When asked regarding the effect of the "dole" on emigration from Great Britain to Canada, Lord Melchett stressed the need of the adoption of a migration scheme which would be advantageous to both countries, and suggested that this should take the form of land grants by the Dominion and the financing of the undertaking by the British Government.

In reference to the British miners, he said that they were well adapted for agricultural settlement as most of them had training in gardening during the summer months.

Lord Melchett is accompanied by his son, the Hon. Henry Mond, the Hon. Mrs. Mond, Sir Frank Spickerell and Mr. Lincoln Strong.

"I would like to see a scheme," said Lord Melchett, "under which 50,000 people would be brought out at a time. You need producers and consumers, and it would help us in our problems at home. When I was on the Empire Settlement Board we met with difficulties in the Dominions and some said the difficulties were on the other side."

"Is it true, as suggested by some, that unemployment insurance has a deterrent effect on emigration?" asked The Examiner. "I think it is possible," replied Lord Melchett. "I have always thought that we should have some Empire scheme for unemployment insurance. Men have paid into it for years, and they feel that they should get something out of it. An arrangement could be made to transfer these obligations in some way."

BRINGING PULLETS INTO WINTER HOME

Provide Clean Houses and Handle Birds Gently—Treat For Lice.

Pullets are rapidly coming to maturity. Have you taken any steps to make room for them in the laying house

Buildings which were used before should be thoroughly cleaned, repaired and disinfected before putting new stock into them. In addition to removing the litter, all the poultry fixtures as, for example, mash hoppers, drinking fountains and nests, should be taken out, the walls and ceiling brushed and the interior given a good coat of whitewash. This will improve the appearance of your houses and, at the same time, help to disinfect them.

Keep Only Healthy Stock

As you bring the pullets in off the range, handle each bird as it will save you much time and money later. Pullets with shallow bodies, small pelvic regions, crooked breast bones, and slow in maturing, are more profitably sold to the local market than put into laying houses. The only kind to keep is pullets that are of a thrifty appearance, in good health, active, alert, well matured and in good flesh.

This is also a good time to treat the pullets for lice. Birds that have been properly dusted with sodium fluoride or some good louse powder will remain free of lice all winter. Give the pullets every chance possible to make a nice profit for you this fall and coming winter.

In handling young pullets remember that they are easily frightened; handle them as gently as you can and for the first few weeks, while they are in the new quarters, move slowly about the house. Talk to the birds as you move through their pens. It is well to have the equipment as, for example, the mash hopper and drinking fountains, should be as nearly alike as possible to that used on the range. Care must be taken not to close the pullets in too suddenly. If you do, you may set them back two or three weeks.

When to Move Pullets

It is advisable to move the pullets to their permanent quarters a week or two previous to their coming into egg production. Moving them after they have started laying is almost certain to mean an upset and likely a partial or complete molt. All pullets should be off the range into the winter quarters sometime before the 1st of October.

Start the pullets off by giving them a good egg mash. It has cost you considerable to raise them, so you cannot afford to take any chances with some cheap mash just because it is cheap in price. A good mash, though it may cost more, is the cheapest feed in the long run. If you have never fed a real good egg mash this is a good time to start.

KIWANIANS HONOR DIVISION OFFICER

challenge which the honor would imply and spoke in glowing terms of the efficiency of the local organization during the past two years.

In this connection, he presented the efficiency trophy, won a year ago at London, and again this year through the concentration acshrdi through the concentrated activities of his club members, and President John accepted it with fitting words of pleasure and satisfaction.

Harry Boyle's Report

Harry Boyle's report on the Religious Musicale held in the Grant Hall at Kingston during the convention, and also the meeting of the secretaries had been well prepared. In it he spoke of the effectiveness of both those gatherings and made various suggestions for the betterment of the club. Jack McKone's bulletins came in for favorable mention, while the members were urged to begin immediately the boosting of Isaac McNabb for Governor of the Ontario-Quebec and Maritime district.

Charlie Elliott had an equally interesting verbal report on the Boys' Industrial Farm which the Peterborough club has been assisting.

Other Features

George Liddle and his capable accompanist, Miss Olive Prest were the contributors of two musical numbers as delightful as they were unusual. George chose "The Song of the Flea" while Miss Prest followed that vocal number with a piano number bearing the more dignified title of Beethoven's Sonata in Key of E. John Turner thanked them along with the speakers of the day, while Joe Wearing was one of those who paid tribute to Isaac McNabb in his new office.

Herb. McCannan's booster prizes, ("prizes" flatters them) were won by Harry Dickin, Charlie Elliott and Joe John, but alas, Harry's prize was but an humble head of cabbage. The other prizes were not exhibited.

Every week The Examiner offers several Household Helps that every woman reader will appreciate. There is no charge for the service; all that is necessary is to send in the coupon with a 2-cent stamp.

SCHOOL FAIRS

CAVAN SCHOOL FAIR.

(Examiner Correspondence)

CAVAN, Sept. 28.—The Cavan Rural School Fair was held at Ida on Tuesday afternoon.

The weather was very unpleasant, but in spite of this, there was a good crowd present.

The ladies of St. John's W.M.S. served lunch and sold ice cream.

There were more exhibits than last year and everything was of good quality.

In the tent the entries, in almost every class, were numerous, and the competition was very keen.

There were eleven school lunches entered, and other classes in domestice science were equally well filled.

The corn, carrots, beets, tomatoes, etc., made a good showing.

The flower exhibits were beautiful, showing that the children's plots had been well cared for.

In manual training there were bird houses, window sticks, miniature hayracks and many other articles made by the boys, which showed care and good workmanship. A few girls competed in this class, as did a few boys in the cooking classes.

Five schools participated in the school parade.

Their costumes, school yells and marching were good.

A new feature was the "First Aid" work.

This is a feature well worth emphasizing, teaching the pupils how to quickly render assistance in case of accident.

Four schools took part in the physical culture.

The public speaking was unusually good. Five spoke, three boys and two girls.

Mr. Killough, district representative, stated that this was the tenth fair in his district this season, and that the public speaking was the best yet. Those taking part were: John Clark, S. S. No. 9; Claremont Morgan, S. S. No. 3; Mary Staples, S. S. No. 3; Allen Winslow, S. S. No. 4; Emma Fee, S. S. No. 2. (Named in the order in which their speeches were judged.

The stock judging, giving reasons for the placing the animals, was another new feature, preparing the boys to participate, after a few years, in the junior farmers' judging competitions.

A list of prizes will be published.

School Parade.

In the parade at Cavan Rural School Fair, Beechwood, S. S. No. 4, won first prize. The teacher of this school is Miss McCullough; Mount Pleasant, S. S. No. 2, won second prize, Miss Margaret McCamus, teacher; Fairmount, S. S. No. 3, won third prize, Miss Helen Staples, teacher; Cairo, S. S. No. 9, won fourth prize, Miss Fairbourn, teacher; Cavanville, S. S. No. 5, won fifth place, Mr. R. Sutton, teacher.

In physical culture the standing was: first prize, S. S. No. 5; second, No. 2; third, No. 3; fourth, No. 9.

The public speaking contest was good, better than in any previous year. The speeches were well prepared and well given. The prizes were as follows: John Clark, first; Claremont Morgan, second; Mary Staples, third; Allen Winslow, fourth; Emma Fee, fifth.

OTONABEE

KEENE, Sept. 26. — (Examiner Correspondence). — Despite the threatening weather a fairly large crowd attended the Otonabee School Fair at Keene yesterday.

The competition was very keen among the exceptionally fine exhibits and large entries were made in each class. The bouquets of flowers are deserving of special mention, there being some fine displays in spite of the recent frosts.

A feature of the fair was the school children's parade from S.S. 4 and S.S. 7. To Miss Douglas of S.S. 7 goes the credit for winning first prize with her school. The youngsters looked very pretty with the girls wearing white middies trimmed with red and blue and red bow ties and the boys with white shirts trimmed with red and blue and blue bow ties and all wearing red and blue hats with a monogram S.S. 7 prominently on the front.

Two boys carried a banner with S.S. No. 7 inscribed on it, trimmed with maple leaves and flags and the whole trimmed with red and blue, making it red, white and blue. This was a big point for their favor.

S.S. No. 4 of Keene, although not in fancy costume, nevertheless went through their evolutions with precision which showed the effects of good training by the teachers, Miss Ferne McCarthy and Mr. Nelson.

In the speaking and singing contests all the contestants did remarkably well and showed excellent training.

While the judges were comparing notes in the singing contest, M. A. Anderson M.P.P. gave a short address relative to the school fairs.

Mr. Gardiner the judge of the vegetables also gave a talk on what should be exhibited and how to prepare them for exhibition purposes.

While the girls probably held the spotlight in cooking, drawing, etc., the boys were in their glory outside with the horses and colts, sheep and calves, of which there was a good showing.

These school fairs are creating interest year after year and it is excellent training for the boys and girls, many of them probably in a few years to come becoming officials or large exhibitors in larger fairs and it is to these same boys and girls that credit for the betterment of agricultural pursuits will go.

Also great credit is due all the teachers of the different schools for their efforts.

CATTLE SUPPLY BELOW AVERAGE

BUYERS COMB COUNTRY

Summer cattle markets are about over and we are approaching the Autumn period, within the boundaries of which usually there is a long and protracted movement of mediocre stock, associated with a marked downward trend to prices on a dead and buyers' market. Usually the buyer pays all the cattle are worth and performs a great service to the industry by clearing the market of a great deal of trash. It should be remembered, however, that the Autumn of 1927 was distinctly an exception to the rule, for under a supply more than 20 per cent heavier than during the previous Autumn and containing a large percentage of very poor stock not of butcher quality, the market showed unusual strength and developed an upward tendency even during November with the daily trading strongly in the sellers' favor. It looks as though last year's market conditions are going to repeat despite the fact that at this time prices are ruling from 2c to 3c better. It is regrettable, however, that at this time when the market outlook is so promising, its benefits should be restricted in a large measure, by a wide shortage in the good beef supply, particularly of good weights.

The information which follows represents analysis of reports made by officers of the Dominion Department of Agriculture, through the Markets Intelligence Service of the Live Stock Branch, situated at the central stock yards in the different provinces. Stock yards are the most strategic points from which to view the possible trend of the market, providing as they do exceptional advantages in the way of daily contact with those consistently tapping the various sources of supply. Observation made at the Yards and information obtained from shippers and country buyers, combined with a study of market history, clearly indicates for both the East and West, a continuation of satisfactory market outlets for our cattle surplus for the remainder of the year and during 1929.

From Ontario, the movement of butcher cattle during the Autumn months promises to be below the average in volume. The deficit in Ontario supplies at the Yards and country feed lots in the province may be somewhat off-set by a liberal increase in the receipts of Western stocker cattle at both these points but this will not, of course, aid in increasing the supply of butcher quality stock for the present Autumn. Ontario cattle of butcher quality, especialy those with reasonable finish, already have been closely marketed. The number of cattle turned on grass during last spring was smaller than usual, and this condition is manifest in the fact that there is now in evidence a scarcity of finished cattle, a condition likely to remain with us until the fed-cattle marketing period is at hand. Steers of good weights are running far below requirements and domestic buyers are combing the country and meeting with very strong competition from the Buffalo market demand. This situation is allowing very few good weights of butcher cattle to appear on the public stock yards. It would seem as well, that the percentage of off-casts from the dairy industry will be fairly heavy during the next three months owing to the attractiveness of the prices being paid for such stock.

The store cattle inquiry has been to date, and promises to be during the Autumn, the strongest feature of the market, although there is a danger that such high priced competition as at present may curtail the movement back to the country. Practically all the price difference between feeders and butcher stock has been eliminated at time of writing. At the present time, farmers seem to be willing to pay the ruling prices, providing the quality is there and in the absence of sufficient animals of the better grades, common stockers, while not popular, are moving fairly well.

We are advised that in many localities the grass has been soft so that while cattle have grown they have not fattened. Now that we have drier weather, the grass is showing more substance and cattle are doing well. But even now the stock is being very closely sorted and the supplies coming out later may show a shortage in finished stock.

We may consider the present to be a very strong price making situation. Indeed, there are some, optimistic enough to believe that cattle values have not yet reached their peak, but the majority hope that prices will stay at reasonable levels because if they go too high there is likely to be a heavy back-fire from the consuming end. Feed is quite plentiful and the relation as between the prices of finished cattle and grains and roughage is favourable.

In Western Canada the situation is no less heartening than in the East. The West is not likely to put out a normal Autumn run of cattle. The early spring made early grass and brought cattle along very fast. This, combined with high market values, encouraged drovers and buyers to comb the country for stock. As a result the runs during the past six weeks have been unusually heavy. Indications are that the movement will continue liberal throughout the present month and October. By October end, the bulk of the available stock will be exhausted and last year's strong November market may be duplicated. Some idea of the conditions existing back in the country may be gathered from the fact that the present runs include a very large volume of light stockers of around seven hundred pounds weight while heavy feeders are in comparatively small volume and decreasing in numbers as time progresses.

The condition of Western stock is steadily improving. Feed is plentiful and the Prairie wool, hay and grass seem to have exceptionally good fattening qualities this year. Demand for store cattle has been exceptionaly strong both at stock yards and country yards and country points and there is likely to be a still keener inquiry during the present month and later. A feature of the trading at Winnipeg and farther West is the very keen demand from country points in Ontario. Unless competition from the United States forces prices out of line with Eastern views, this inquiry promises to continue as the strongest on record at the St. Boniface Yards. Later, if the harvest turns out as well as expected; there should develop a strong inquiry from Western farmers that would make unparalleled competition for anything of fair feeding quality or better, thus precluding any chance of weakness late in the year in the market on eligible cattle. It would seem that the development of such demand should result in the United States buyers perhaps getting the pick of the offering with Ontario feeders a close second. Some are of the opinion that Ontario demand will give United States inquiry much stronger competition than during last year and posibly outbid the export demand.

Reports from mid-Saskatchewan are to the effect that United States buyers are combing the country for stockers and feeders, and at some stock yards there are standing orders which cannot be filled at the present time. Country-point buyers, however, are not taking the poorer stuff and offerings are being culled very closely.

The movement of cattle from farm points in Alberta promises to be rather restricted. The September run may be lighter than that of August and the movement during October and November will be on the light side. We have learned from reliable sources that United States buyers are likely to obtain the long end of the steers from the ranches in Southern Alberta. If that is true the domestic trade is likely to be short on contract cattle for the next three or four months. United States buyers in Alberta are reported as not being too particular regarding weights and quality of the cattle and some are said to be taking unfinished cattle at weight which, about two years ago, were being passed up by Canadian feeder buyers.

The prospects for winter feeding in Alberta are not quite clear to us at the present time. Feeder cattle are likely to be high in price, a feeling which is developing a great deal of uncertainty as to the wisdom of carrying cattle through to the spring market. However, there will likely be a liberal number of cattle purchased for a run on stubble and as well for a short feed for marketing in January and February next year.

THE NOBLE OF EARTH.

Are those, and those only, who ere they may be,
Of whatever station or state, or degree,
Although, boasting no blue blood, or patrician birth
Beyond all dispute, they're the noble of earth;
Yes, nature's nobility, by rightful claim,
Of Heaven's own, patent well worthy the name.

Those who, by their pledged promise bravely abide
Or winning or losing whatever betide
Who like Socrate, injured, ill-treated, forgive,
For the good they can do here, unselfishly live
To themselves, and to others, just loyal and true
With firm trust in Heaven, though earth's friends are few.

Those who grudge not the victor, his well earned prize,
Nor with high haughty frown, humble merit despise,
Above the world's favor, a clear conscience hold
And friendships pure need more than silver or gold,
The high souls up life's high road will valiantly go
While low souls will follow the broad road below.

Aye, there are the noble of right royal worth
This old world's sheet anchor, the salt of the earth
They alone shall inherit that fair, promised land,
And unquestioned of creed, on the holy hills stand,
In that Kingdom above, shine, more bright than the sun,
And hear those blest words, faithful servant, well done.

Giants Win And Lose While Cardinals Gain

NEW YORKERS SPLIT DOUBLE

Cardinals Score Six Runs in First Inning to Defeat Braves 8-3.

REGAIN LEAD

NEW YORK, Sept. 28.—(Canadian Press).— The league-leading Cardinals improved their pennant chances by defeating the Braves, 8 to 3, in the first game of the Boston series yesterday while the Giants were dividing a double-header against the Cubs in New York. The Red Birds thus regained the half-game they lost Wednesday when Brooklyn defeated them, and they rested last night one full contest ahead of the runner-up New Yorks.

The Cardinals hopped off to a start of six runs in the first inning when Ed. Brandt was assaulted in a cruel and inhuman manner. Brandt was both wild and easy to hit, and the Cards made the most of their opportunity. Johnny Cooney rushed to Brandt's rescue after three runs were in and two more in a position to score and did a creditable relief job over the rest of the journey.

Jess Haines pitched the distance for the Cardinals to score his twentieth victory. His ninth straight and his eighth consecutive complete game.

The big first inning of the Cardinals was helped along when Hornsby, with an easy double play set up for him, tagged Holm on the base line with an empty hand, and then threw to first retiring only the batter. One run scored on his play, and two more came home a moment later on a double by Haines.

Frank Frisch had a big day in the field, running back into outfield terrain several times to clutch difficult flies which had a bright sun for their background.

At Brooklyn the Robins climbed back to the 500 mark yesterday by defeating Pittsburgh in both ends of a doubleheader. Jess Petty triumphed over Burleigh Grimes, 7 to 6, in a ten-inning first game, while Lou Koupal scored an easy 8 to 1 triumph over a flock of Pirate recruits in the second clash.

Del Bisonnette provided the slugging features with a home run in each game bringing his total for the year to 25. The defeat of Grimes in the opener prevented him from reaching 26 victories for the season. He has fourteen defeats.

Bally Pipp's two home runs over the Philadelphia right field fence helped Cincinnati score a six to two victory yesterday. He hit his first with the bases bare in the third and his second with one on in the fifth. Pete Donohue held the Phillies in check with six hits, all singles, while Caldwell, Miller and Baecht who hurled off the Phillies were slammed for fifteen safeties by the Reds.

By making three double plays in successive innings, Cincinnati ran its record for the season to 191.

WHITE SOCCER GAME HERE SATURDAY

Kick-off Is Scheduled for Three O'clock—Winners Will Meet Deloro.

Saturday's soccer bill is the semi-final of the White Challenge Cup between the De Laval and the Canadian General at King Edward Park. Kick off is scheduled for three o'clock, and Alex. McKinley will act in the capacity of referee. In the event of a drawn game at the end of the regulation time, there will be an extra twenty minutes played—ten minutes each way.

In previous years the White trophy was always given as the emblem of the league championship, but the donors this season requested that it be played under the cup-tie principle and drawn the same as the rest of the coups. The winners of this match go to Deloro in the final tussle.

The City League Rugby teams will practice again to-night at 5.30, in Confederation Square.

Rugby fans here will do well not to forget the double-header that is slated to be held in the James Stevenson Park to-morrow afternoon. The first game, P.C.I. vs. Lindsay, in the initial match of their season, will start at 2.30 sharp. The second game is a City League fixture and from the looks of the material that showed up at the practices, a steady battle can be expected.

The City Softball League will hold a banquet as a successful conclusion to their season sometime within the next two weeks, it was decided at an executive meeting held last night. The presentation of the softball trophy to the winning team and the usual entertainment will take place.

The Yankees are very nearly sure of capturing the American League pennant for the sixth time, needing only one more game to clinch the honors. By defeating the Tigers in a double-header yesterday, their lead was increased to two and a half games, as the Athletics had but one contest to win from the White Sox.

The Cardinals regained their old stand of one game in the lead of the National League by defeating the Braves 8—3, while the Giants split even in a double-header with the Cubs, at home. With the season rapidly nearing a close, the race is getting tighter with the remaining gams.

NEW PLAYERS FOR OTTAWA

Former Hamilton Men Will Be Welcome Addition to Senatorial Squad.

PLAY ON SATURDAY

OTTAWA, Sept. 28. —(Canadian Press).—Ottawa rugby rans received encouraging news of new material almost on the eve of the first game of the local season. At last night's practice, two new men watched the workout and signified their intentions of turning out with the Senators this evening.

They are Norman Long, last year with the Hamilton team of the O. R.F.U. and "Bud" Friend, last season with Balmy Beach.

Both these men are backfielders and their addition to the Senatorial squad will be a welcome one.

With McInely gone and very little relief in sight for Turman, Kehoe and Brassington, the prospect of additional material is being loudly acclaimed. This has been the end of the team which has worried the local officials and the team's chances are brightened considerably.

Wednesday night one of the best workouts of the year was held, when two teams were lined up for a full hour. Last night's practice was less strenuous, but highly beneficial. Today's drill will necessarily be a light one, as the team goes out against Camp Borden in their initial engagement on Saturday and no chances will be taken on injuries. The Senators are in comparatively good shape and expect to defeat the Fliers in the opener.

The will have Tubman, Kehoe, Brassington, Long and Friend for the half line, along with a promising junior, "Pop" Irvin, who has been somewhat of a sensation in local junior circles. Lynch gets the quarter assignment with Connell and Emerson at flying wings. Bruce Mill snap, flanked by Ketchum and Kealey on the insides; Dunne and Bradley, middles, and Starr and Herbert, outsides. Humphrey, Hutchingame, Cherry, Wilson, Buells, Cote, Stanyar and Pinhey are all men who may get into action. The lineup is not definite however, and may be changed before the team takes the field.

DORA VIRTUE ELIMINATED FROM PLAY

Canadian Defeated by Mrs. Stetson in Women's Golf Tournament.

PUT UP GOOD BATTLE

Three Former Champions Will Enter Semi-Finals To-day.

(By Brian Bell, Associated Press Sports Writer).

HOT SPRINGS, Va., Sept. 28. — Three former champions of women's golf in the United States fought back the rush of the younger set yesterday to enter th esemi-finals of the women's championship to-day while one was bowing to the enthusiasm of youth.

Mrs. Dorothy Campbell Hurd, Miss Glenna Collett and Mrs. G. H. Stetson were left in the fight along with the youthful Miss Virginia Van Wie, who put Miss Marion Hollins, the 1921 champion, out of the competition yesterday.

Canada went out of the tournament when her one survivor in the quarter finals, Miss Dora Virtue of Montreal, wa defeated by Mrs Stetson. The young Montrealer put up a stern battle and carried the former champion two holes beyond the regular eighteen. Throughout the tournament Miss Virtue has shown astonishing cool-headedness, combined with ability to hit a very long ball with both wood and iron.

In the semi-finals, Mrs. Hurd will play Miss Van Wie. Mrs. Hurd won the women's championship of the U.S., Great Britain and Canada in 1909, and missed the French title by one stroke, while Miss Van Wie will not be 20 years of age until next February.

The other semi-final will find Miss Glenna Collett, the champion of 1922 and 1925, opposing Mrs. G. H. Stetson, who won the title in 1926.

Only Miss Collett did not have to come to the home green yesterday. Mrs. Hurd won from Maureen Orcutt, the Englewood, N.J., girl, who was runner-up last year and medalist of this championship, two up at the 18th, when earlier indications had pointed to a far more crushing defeat.

Miss Van Wie came from behind to defeat Miss Hollins, one up at the home hole, thanks to a great explosion shot.

Played Good Golf.

Miss Collett yesterday played her best golf of the tournament and the best anyone has played thus far to stop Miss Virginia Wilson, the Chicago girl who holds the Canadian championship, three up and two to play. Miss Wilson played well enough to defeat any one else playing yesterday, but the game the Rhode Island girl flashed against her would have had many of the best men players down. Miss Collett played the 16 holes needed to win her match in six strokes under women's par, going out in even fours to be three up at the turn on Miss Wilson, who was even part for the women for the first nine. Miss Wilson finished one stroke under par for women.

To-day's semi-finals will bring together contrasting types of women golfers in each bracket. Mrs. Hurd, meeting Miss Van Wie, probably will be behind her younger opponent's tee shots, while Miss Collett, a consistently long driver, may be expected to outdistance Mrs. Stetson from the tee. However, the short game of Mrs. Hurd and Mrs. Stetson leaves little to be desired.

In the Stetson-Virtue match, Miss Virtue was two up on Mrs. Stetson at the turn, but the Philadelphia woman squared the match at the 11th and went one up on the young Montrealer at the 13th.

The Canadian girl got a tremendous drive at the 237-yard 15th to score a birdie three and again square the match, and she assumed the lead again at the 17th. Mrs. Stetson continued to make it a ding-dong affair by winning the 18th to make extra holes necessary. Miss Virtue's drive went in the lake at the home hole, while Mrs. Stetson was near the green from the tee.

She made an easy four, while five was the best the Montrealer player could negotiate, after her difficulties. At the 19th both missed putts to win and the hole was halved. The Quebec champion drove into the woods on the 20th, while Mrs. Stetson was straight, though short. The former champion got a five-foot putt down for a four to end the long-drawn out contest.

NEWS IN BRIEF

Reward Recommended

LONDON, Ont., Sept. 28. -- In a verdict brought in last night by a coroner's jury inquiring into the death of Joseph Fox, aged London pawnbroker who was killed by a hit-and-run motorist two weeks ago, a recommendation was made that the municipality should offer a suitable reward for information leading to the arrest of the driver, in view of the heartless manner in which the aged man was killed. A reward of $500 has already been offered by the Fox family here.

"Kid" Roy Would Defend His Title

VANCOUVER, B.C., Sept. 28. — (Canadian Press). — Raoul Codrout, manager of Leo "Kid" Roy, holder of the Canadian featherweight and lightweight titles, telegraphed to the effect that Roy will defend his featherweight title against Vic Foley in Vancouver provided he received a guarantee of $4,000 with an even option of thirty per cent of the gross receipts. He also states that he would demand an outside referee.

TOOLE IS PLEASED WITH BALL SEASON

Five of Eight Clubs at One Time or Other Held Leadership.

W TORONTO, Sept. 28.—President Toole, of the International Baseball League, has given a lengthy interview regarding the season just closed. In part, he says:

"It was the closest race ever staged, not only in this league, but in any league. Since August 23 there have been fifteen changes in the leadership of the league. Isn't that a record for the last month of a baseball season?

"Five of the eight contenders have occupied the upper berth at some time in the last thirty days. Baltimore, which is finishing sixth, was on top on August 24; Reading, in fifth place, was leading the procession August 28. Since that date Buffalo, Rochester and Toronto have led the procession at various times.

Skeeters Not Low

"Interest has been centred on the championship race, and that is not surprising. Some fans may have overlooked the fact, however, that there is another evidence at hand of the closeness of the International League race. Jersey City, in last place, is higher in point of games won, and in percentage, than the last place club in any league that has come to my notice. Jersey City, too, is quite a bit behind Newark in seventh place. It is the largest gap in standings in the International.

Jinx to Toronto

"Look at the record of the Jersey City club. It won its series from Toronto with thirteen victories to eleven defeats; it broke even with Reading, twelve victories to twelve defeats. It came within one game of breaking even with Baltimore and Montreal, winning eleven and losting thirteen in both of those series. It was against Rochester and Buffalo that Jersey City fell down. Rochester won nineteen of the twenty-four games, losing but five to Jersey City; Buffalo won seventeen and lost but seven to the Jersey club. Newark made about the same kind of a record against its neighbor, as did Rochester and Buffalo. It can hardly be said, however, that there has been a really soft spot in the league. When a last place club can win nearly seventy games, it indicates a pretty tight race.

"Here is another significant indication of the kind of race the league put on. Though the International plays fourteen more games per club than are scheduled for the teams in the National and American Leagues, the winner in the International will have fewer victories to its credit than the champions in either of the major leagues. This even division of victories has made the 1928 race one of the most remarkable in baseball history."

Rochester and Toronto are the teams that were handicapped most by their inability to play the full schedule. Rochester, for instance, had to play six games in the last three days with Montreal, and even then finished with but 164 games completed, instead of 168. Those four games practically meant a pennant for Rochester. Toronto's two sacrificed games had much the same bearing up to within a few days of the finish.

Skeeters a Farm?

In spite of the failure of five of the clubs to play out their full schedule there is little sentiment around the circuit for a reduction of the schedule, either in the number of games played or in the playing season. It will be surprising if the league takes any action next winter to change the structure of its schedule.

There appears to be little likelihood that the Jersey City club will be purchased by the Yankees as a farm. President Toole will not discuss the subject, but Edward Barrow, business manager of the Yankees, is quoted as saying that no such deal will be made.

Chain Store Clubs

Chain store ownership of strings of minor league clubs by major league clubs is another subject that President Toole prefers not to discuss. This practice has touched the International League in but one spot and the result does not appear to be injurious to the league or to the sport. For years major league clubs have singled out clubs in the International League with which to establish working relations in the exchange of players, without going through the formality of buying clubs. Many students of baseball believe that the practice will persist. They feel that ways will always be found to circumvent any rules that may be set up to stop the chain store practice.

YANKS NEED ONE VICTORY

Defeat Detroit Tigers in Double-header to Nearly Clinch Pennant.

RUTH GETS TWO

NEW YORK, Sept. 28 (Canadian Press).—The Yankees moved to within one short stride of their sixth American League pennant by staggering through to two victories over the Tigers at Detroit yesterday by scores of 4 to 3 and 8 to 5. The second game was called at the end of the seventh inning on account of darkness.

One more victory by the champions now would clinch the flag, even if the Athletics should sweep their remaining three in Chicago. The Yankes lead yesterday was increased to two and one-half games, as the Mackmen, in second place, had but one contest to win from the White Sox.

Miller Huggins was forced to call on Fred Heimach, Al Shealy and Henry Johnson to slip in with the second game, and their combined performance was such that the champions were in danger from the first inning right down to the moment when darkness saved them from further anguish.

Babe Ruth got a home run in each engagement, running his total for the season to 52, but remaining far behind his 1927 major league record of sixty.

"Lefty" Grove's slants worked miraculously yesterday as he hurled the Philadelphia Athletics to a 5 to 3 victory over Lena Blackburne's White Sox at Chicago.

Grove not only limited the White Sox to six scattered hits, but he struck out nine. In the seventh inning he struck out Berg, Thomas and Mostil on nine pitched balls. He also aided his own cause by knocking out a home run in the third inning for the Athletics first tally. No one was on base. The drive was a long one, landing in the right field bleachers. It was Grove's sixth straight victory over the White Sox and his twenty-fourth of the year.

The Athletics, each of whom got one hit, bunched their blows on Thomas, who also got into trouble by walking six.

The Indians and the Boston Red Sox divided a double-header at Cleveland. The tribesmen took the opener 14 to 10, after overcoming Boston's seven-run lead, while the Sox walked in with the second, 7 to 4.

Charley Ruffing pitched for Boston in the first game allowing seven hits but fanning eight men. Big Ed Morris kept the Indians in check throughout the nightcap.

The Senators batted two St. Louis pitchers out of the box yesterday and won the first game of the wind-up series at St. Louis against the Browns, 6 to 5. Hadley hurled for Washington and was hit freely in the ninth when the Browns scored all of their runs.

Walter Stewart, southpaw, started on the mound for St. Louis but was replaced by Coffman in the eighth inning. Wiltse took Coffman's place in the ninth.

Heinie Manush, heavy hitting left-fielder was responsible for three of the St. Louis tallies when he hit over the right pavilion for a home run with two on base.

Heatherbloom Cup Won By Canadian

PHILADELPHIA, Pa., Sept. 28. (Canadian Press). — Sir Clifford Sifton, noted Canadian horseman, captured the Heatherbloom Cup at the annual Brynmawr Horse Show yesterday.

His bay gelding, The Wizard, ridden by his son, Clifton Sifton, Jr., jumped away with the trophy from under the noses of the best hunters and jumpers of local stables. The Canadian stable also took second honors with Brian Boru. The event was one of the features of the second day of the show.

TONY CANZONERI TO MEET ROITIS

Will Defend Title for First Time To-night Since He Won Championship.

NEW YORK, Sept. 28 (Canadian Press).—In his first title bout since he clinched the 126-pound championship by outpointing Benny Bass early this year, Tony Canzoneri of New York, featherweight champion of the world, will meet Andre Routis, fiery little French challenger, at Madison Square Garden to-night over the 15-round route.

Since winning the championship, Canzoneri has fought only once in New York, a four-round affair with Pete Passafiume a short time after his meeting with Bass. His principal opponents in the past six months have been Vic Foley of Vancouver, perennial challenger for the Canadian featherweight title, who lost a ten-round decision at Montreal, and Harry Bliman, of Philadelphia, who scored a victory over the champion in a non-title bout in the Quaker City. Preparing for his title defence he scored a one-round knockout over Bobby Garcia at Newark a short time ago.

Routis has fought his way through rugged opposition to the title bout Canzoneri has one decision over the aggressive Frenchman, scored two years ago. The verdict at that time was clouded with considerable doubt. The forecasts generally point to a close encounter to-day with Canzoneri favored by a slight margin.

OTTAWA WINS MANN TROPHY

Play Inspired Lacrosse to Outscore Winnipeg for Dominion Championship.

BY 5-2 SCORE

OTTAWA, Sept. 28 (Canadian Press).—Rallying after a poor start, the Ottawa Emmetts yesterday afternoon played inspired lacrosse through three periods to outgeneral and outscore the Winnipeg Wellingtons by 5 to 2 and capture the fourth game of the Mann Cup series and thereby annex the coveted trophy and the title of Canadian lacrosse champions.

The Winnipeg team went into a first period lead of one goal when the locals seemed unable to settle down, and for more than half the second session they were in command. But after Charbonneau had tied the score the complex changed and for the remainder of the game the Western champions were on the defensive practically all of the time.

Leading his team with another magnificent game of lacrosse, Charlie Connell scored three goals and was the main-spring in the White and Green machine which brought premier Dominion lacrosse honors to the capital for the first time.

The Wellingtons were glorious in defeat, and never stopped trying to redeem a lost cause until the final whistle halted their efforts. In the early stages of the game they appeared the better team and it seemed that they would sweep on to victory. But when the "Wild Irish" attack got properly under way in the third period the situation was reversed and it was Emmetts who did the pressing in no uncertain manner.

Murray Hardy and Art Shaw, Wellingtons' sharpshooters in the entire series, kept up their good work yesterday with a goal apiece, but this pair was not enough to cut any figure against Emmetts' total.

The game was cleanly played, only five minor penalties being inflicted. Despite the cold weather, a crowd of more than 1,200 turned out to see the crucial tussle. The field was a bit slippery, but not wet enough to seriously interfere with the play of either team.

The teams:

Wellingtons—Thompson goal; Buckingham, point; G. Neil, cover; H. Neil, Maitland and Alexander, defence; Lawrence, centre; Coultry, H. Murphy and M. Hardy, home; B. Hardy, outside; Shaw, inside; Frederickson, V. Johnson, M. Johnson and Stewart, subs.

LON CHANEY IN "LAUGH, CLOWN LAUGH," DRAWS FULL HOUSE AT THE CAPITAL LAST NIGHT

Lon Chaney again proved his popularity as a screen star, when he drew a full house, in spite of the rain, at the Capitol last night, where he opened a three day engagement in "Laugh, Clown, Laugh."

Lon portrays a new character in his latest vehicle—that of a clown, and again displays his wonderful art in make-up.

It is a most interesting story dealing with stage life, showing the inner side of the actor; how ofttimes he has to appear before the footlights to amuse and entertain, when his heart is sad. The whole show is good. Max Davidson had the audience in roars in a scream of a comedy entitled "That Night."

Same show to-night, and three times on Saturday, namely, 2.30, 7.00 and 9.00 p.m.

AT THE REGENT.

"FLEETWING."

Bronzed and animated after his sojourn on the glittering sands of the Mojave, Ben Bard returned to Hollywood after completing the exteriors of "Fleetwing," to recount what he considers the most thrilling episode of his career.

"We were taking it easy between shots when, on the horizon, appeared a dark spiral-like cloud. As it came nearer we could hear the howling of the wind that accompanied it. Director Hillyer seemed to be the only one who kept his head. He ordered everyone under cover with the exception of Frank Goode, our chief cameraman.

"Like a thundering dark wall, the sand storm approached at express speed, sweeping everything in its path. The air was filled with tiny particles of sand, and we were almost smothered for the want of air. It seemed hours to us, but in reality we were only under cover seven minutes.

"Luckily, it broke before it reached us or a different story might have been told. But during it all the cameraman kept grinding," Bard concluded.

Therefore, Director Hillyer was fortunate in securing many feet of a spectacular sand storm so prevalent among the sun-drenched sands of Arabia.

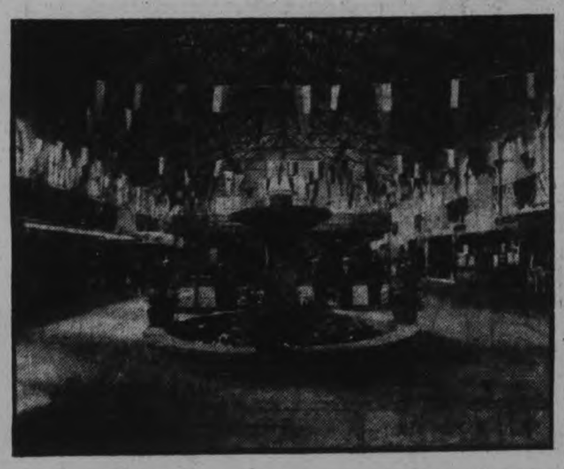
"Fleetwing" is now playing at the Regent.

EXPANSION PLANNED AT EXHIBITION.



The interior of the Armouries at last year's Kiwanis Club Produced in Canada Exhibition. This year's fair, to be held next month, will be far more pretentious. The attractive fountain shown in the foreground will be again the meeting place of hundreds.

When Harold Starr lines up this fall in his old position as outside wing for Ottawa, the Senators' chance to grab the Big Four rugby title will improve by a wide margin. The Senators, to put it mildly, will make it rough, tough and nasty for the rest of the boys in the group. For Ottawa teams at whatever sport, have a reputation for grit, and if occasionally they taste defeat they at least go down fighting. Witness the final rugby game last autumn between Hamilton Tigers and the Senators. When the smoke and dust finally cleared from the field of battle there were more black eyes, floating ribs and dislocated molars than you would find in half a dozen of Tex Rickard's boxing bouts combined.

Starr dons his uniform again this season after a year's absence. A tenacious tackler, hard hitting line plunger and speedy runner, few players on any team fill a pivotal position more effectively than he. His initial bow to rugby was made with St. Brigids in the O.R.F.U. in 1922-23. Improving with practice, he developed into one of the big factors in Ottawa's successful offensive for the Dominion title in 1925-26. He is an all-round athlete and incidentally holds down second sack for the Gunners in the Ottawa City Ball League. BABY CYCLONE ON LAKE ERIE

HEAVY RAINFALL.

PORT COLBORNE, Sept. 28. — Trees were ripped from the ground, barns unfrooled, verandahs torn off Summer cottages when a baby cyclone and water spout combined swept a long, narrow area on the lakefront yesterday. The amount of damage cannot be estimated, as it was done chiefly to Summer cottages now vacated by their United States owners.

The twister extended from Erie Beach to Crescent Beach, two Summer resorts 15 miles east of Port Colborne. The water spout came in the form of a light grey streak, which swept out of the sky and gradually became larger as it neared the lake. As far as he eye could see the lake was churned up and water rose 80 feet in a heavy spray, witnesses stated.

Mrs. J. . Hershey said she saw the streak go down and up again four or five times. Incariably it started from the sky and grew larg- there was a striketacsihrdluchshr er as it descended. Going up, there was a striking resemblance to a funnel.

The spout appeared during heavy rain and was followed by darkness making day turn to night. Terrific rain fell for a few moments.

At Crescent Beach, windows were blown out of cottages and trees were uprooted and branches ripped off. Farmers in the district stated that damage to cottages would be heavy.

From various sections come various reports. Some experienced heavy hail; other escaped with rain. Some viewed what they believed to be a water spout; others felt only the miniature twister which created local havoc.

One woman described the spectacle as 'most amazing, almost indescribable, and awe-inspiring."

POWER HEARING OPENS NEXT WEEK

Dominion and Provincial Rights To Be Argued Before Supreme Court.

OTTAWA, Spt. 27 (Canadian Press). — Dominion and Provincial rights to water powers will be argued in the Supreme Court of Canada next week. Recognized as one of the most important questions with far-reaching ramifications, which has come before the courts in years, the matter undoubtedly will be carried to the Privy Council in England for final adjudication.

The development of the potential water powers of the St. Lawrence, international and inter-provincial in character, the development of water power on the Ottawa River and a number of other power projects, all are vitally concerned in points to be decided respecting Federal and Provincial jurisdiction. The case will probably extend over two weeks.

Hearing of the argument is scheduled to open here on Tuesday next with an eminent array of counsel present. The Dominion Government and at least five of the provinces, Ontario, Quebec, Manitoba, Saskatchewan, and British Columbia, will be represented.

News From the Mines

Through Solloway, Mills & Company

AMULET
The annual meeting of Amulet Mines, Limited, was held yesterday afternoon at Montreal. A supplementary report covering the period from July 1st to September 22nd was read to the shareholders by A. A. MacKay, the managing director. P. M. Connell was added to the board of directors, while the other directors were re-elected. The report, which was sent over the wires of Solloway, Mills & Co., shortly after the meeting yesterday, was optimistic in tone and indicates that the directors and managing director have planned a very extensive development campaign.

MOFFATT HALL
It is reported that silver values have been found in the vein uncovered recently on the Moffatt Hall property. The vein which was located last August is situated in approximately the centre of the property. The management is now under the direction of McIntyre Porcupine Mines.

MARKET REVIEW
The reception given to the Amulet report was reflected in the rapid price change which characterised the movements of this popular Rouyn issue in yesterday's trading. Opening at 3.75, Amulet was freely sold, closing at $3.34-5.

Noranda's action was to be expected following the somewhat bearish report which the president issued late yesterday afternoon. Noranda sold as low as $49.30, rallying to close at $49.50-65. The street is talking $48 or $47 for the stock. It is quite evident that strong interests are showing a bearish attitude at the present time. It is thought that they desire to accumulate stock at lower levels before the next upward move.

Malartic at $1.72-3 was quiet and unchanged. Mond Nickel, a recent star performer, eased off 75 cents on a considerably reduced volume, closing at $31.50 bid. Barry-Hollinger at 51-52 was off 3; Granada at 27 to 27½ was off ½; Howey at $1.04 was down 2.

Mandy strengthened up at the opening, but under heavy selling sold down at $1.85, closing at $1.91-$1.94. Abana at $3.55-9, San Antonia at 36-37, and Siscoe at $6.30-45 were all one to three points firmer. Sudbury Basin at $6.30-45 was down 30 points. Hudson Bay and Sherritt-Gordon remained steady under small trading.

Wright-Hargreaves at $3.00-$3.01 was soft, while Newbeck at 53 to 53½ was off ½.

Newbec
A despatch from Rouyn states that the Newbec management do not expect to intersect the ore in the next drill hole before the middle of next month. The new plant is now being installed and drill is being set up for the second hole.

Granada
It is reported from Rouyn that Mr. Douglas Wright is making an examination of Granada for outside interests. No. 2 vein on the 500 foot level is over eight feet wide and carries commercial values.

Mayland
Our Calgary office reports that Mayland well is now down to a depth of 3,010 feet with conditions looking exceptionally good. Oil men in Calgary expect that the Home sand will show production within the next 75 feet.

San Antonio
Mr. John A. Reid, consulting engineer of this company, has recently made an exhaustive examination of the property. Mr. Reid's report will be made public some time the beginning of next week. Mr. Reid, in conversation with Mr. Martin, the president, before he left for the East, stated that conditions at the mine had greatly improved, but that the property was still in the prospect stage.

Mond Nickel Company
Mond Nickel Company's smelter at Conniston is at present handling 2,000 tons of ore per day, which is 500 tons over original capacity. The matte output represents two and one-half million pounds copper and two and one-half million pounds of nickel per month. In addition to this, precious metals.

MARKET REVIEW
In point of interest Noranda's continued decline dominated yesterday's trading on the Standard Stock and Mining Exchange. Selling pressure still continues follow the president's report, with liquidation freely taking place both in Toronto and New York. Over 17,000 shares changed hands during the five-hour session. Closing at $48.65-75, Noranda registered a 60-point loss, $48.25 being the low for the day.

Bolschatel and Picard provided the day's volume, bringing the total to over 1,400,000 shares. Opening at 1½, Pickard sold up to 2¾, easing off at the close to 2¼-2½, while Bolschatel at 2¼-2½ was half a cent weaker.

Trading in Mond Nickel was relatively quiet in comparison with its former activity. At $31.60-$32.00, Mond was 20 points softer. Pend Oreille held strongly on a few sales, closing firm at $13.90-95, up 15 points. Abana at $3.74-5 showed a gain of 15 points.

One of the stocks which shows consistent accumulation around its present price of $22.50 is Lake Shore. Malartic at $1.70-1 was off 3, Hudson Bay at $19.15-25 was off 35, Granada at 26-27 was off 1½, and Howey at $1.03-4 was off 3. Wright-Hargreaves still continues to hover around the $3 mark. Clerley at 27½-28 was fractionally higher.

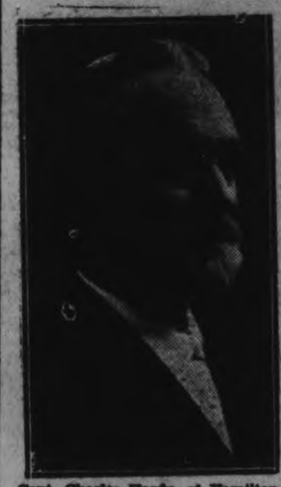
Late in the session Mandy took on a new lease of life and moved up to close at $2.05 bid, showing a gain of 10 points for the day.

Trading continues to be dull and featureless due to the fact that the market lacks a leader which can pull it from its present inactivity, now that Noranda has lost some of its lustre.

Nickel and Oil Stocks Hold Lead at Toronto

TORONTO, September 28 (Canadian Press).—Nickel and the oil stocks continue to attract most attention on the Toronto Stock Exchange, but price fluctuations this morning were narrow. With the exception of International Nickel, which was the leader in point of activity, trading was mainly centred on the unlisted section. More than 2,000 shares of Nickel changed hands in the first two hours of trading, the price sagging fractionally to 122¾. British American Oil led the oil stocks, remaining steady at 41¼. Imperial Oil was unchanged at 78¼, International Petroleum advanced a half to 39½, and

COMMANDED MACASSA



Capt. Charles Hardy, of Hamilton, brought out from Glasgow, Scotland, in 1888, the Macassa, recently renamed Manasoo and which was sunk in Georgian Bay with the loss of many of her crew.

Service Stations was up a similar amount to 44. Trading in all these issues was heavy.

Goodyear Tire scored the greatest gain of the morning, being up five at 168, while Hayes Wheel moved up 3 to 36. Bell Telephone declined two at 162, while losses of a point were also recorded in C.P.R. at 219½, and Page Hersey at 102½.

Weakness of Noranda Affects Other Shares

TORONTO, September 28 (Canadian Press). — Weakness in Noranda was reflected in the easier tendency in the majority of stocks on the Standard Mining Exchange this morning. Selling in the Rouyn leader continued to-day and at noon it recorded a loss of 1.50 at 47.25. McIntyre lost 50 cents at 21.00. Trading was fairly active throughout the list, but price changes generally were insignificant. Pend Oreille continuer to sag, at noon being 65 cents lower at 13.25, while Mond Nickel was down 35 at 31.25. Lake Shore lost twenty cents at 22.30 and declines of 15 cents were suffered by Sylvanite at 15 and Consaurum at 3.40. Hollinger was among the stronger issues, gaining twenty at 8.70 and Abana, on transactions of more than 40,000 shares, was up five at 3.8. Hudson Bay advanced 10 to 19.25.

A distinguished visitor from Great Britain, Rt. Hon. Hugh Patterson MacMillan, Lord Advocate of Scotland, and one of the leading senior counsel of the British bar, is in Canada just now. Wheat Prices Go Up On News From Europe

CHICAGO, September 28 (Canadian Press). — With gloomy reports about the Russian grain supply outlook continuing, wheat prices here averaged higher early to-day. Significance in this respect was also attached to Liverpool cables saying declines in wheat quotations met resistance. Opening at ¼ cent decline to ¾ cent advance, Chicago wheat underwent a sag all around, but soon rallied. Corn was irregular, starting at ¼ cent decline to ⅛ cent gain, with September subsequently undergoing a sharp drop. Oats were firm.

Opening prices were: Wheat, September, 116¾, December 118¼. Corn, September 95¾, December 78⅛. Oats, September 42¾, December 43¾.

BANNON—SIMMONS.

A very pretty wedding was solemnized on Wednesday, September 26, at All Saints' Church, the Rev. J. D. Paterson performing the ceremony, of Mary Lucille, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William Simmons, and Walter Edgar, son of Mr. and Mrs. Robert Bannon, both of this city.

The bride entered the church on the arm of her father, looking charming in powder blue georgette, with metallic hat and carried butterfly roses.

Mrs. Clifford Nixon, as matron-of-honor, wore orchid georgette, and carried yellow tea roses. The bridegroom was supported by Mr. Edward Simmons, brother of the bride.

During the signing of the register, Miss Annie Burns sang "Until," accompanied by Mrs. Logan.

The ushers were Mr. Cecil Bannon and Mr. Douglas Simmons.

After the reception held at the home of the bride's parents, which was decorated in pink and white, Mr. and Mrs. Bannon left for St. Catharines, where they will spend their honeymoon, the bride travelling in grey crepe romaine with blue coat and small grey hat. On their return they will reside in Peterborough.

WILLIAM SCOTT.

(Examiner Correspondence.)

MOUNT PLEASANT, September 28. —The sudden death of William Scott, which took place at Lampman, Sask., after less than a week's illness, was a shock to the entire community.

The late Mr. Scott had left to visit relatives in Saskatchewan just four weeks previous to the day on which he passed away, after a critical operation on Friday, September 21.

Deceased was sixty-eight years of age and was the fourth son of the late Mr. and Mrs Walter Scott, and was one of a family of eight children, six of whom still survive: Mrs. A. R. Robson, Peterborough Mrs Joseph L. Walton, Benson, Sask., Robert of Toronto, James of Lethbridge, Alta., Walter and John of Peterborough. His wife, the late Amelia Jackson, predeceased him in June, 1927.

His only son Bruce mourns the loss of a loving father.

A spirit of warm-hearted hospitality was an outstanding feature of Mr. Scott's nature, and his many friends will always recall with pleasure this characteristic, of which they had practical experience during many happy hours spent as guests in his home.

Cheerful and helpful in disposition, a true neighbor and friend to those in need, the large gathering of neighbors, friends and relatives for the funeral service which took place on Tuesday afternoon from the residence of his son, Lot 1, Concession 1, Smith, gave ample evidence of the regard in which deceased was held.

The services at both the house and the graveside were conducted by Rev. William Allan, of St. Paul's Presbyterian Church, of which the deceased was a faithful member.

Rev. Mr. Allan gave an earnest and thoughtful address, basing his remarks and touching on the subjects of sorrow and death. 'Only by faith in God and His Son Jesus Christ," said Mr. Allan, "can sorrow be lightened and death lose its sting." "Whosoever believeth in me shall never die."

The pall-bearers were: T. Lillico, North Monaghan, R. Hinton, E. J. Ruiter, N. Moore, E. Watson, and W. J. Young, all of Peterborough.

There were many beautiful floral tributes laid in loving memory upon and around the casket. Interment was in Little Lake Cemetery.

Board Reduces Charge for School Sewer

Aldermen Do Much Work

Three Committees of City Council Meet for Month-End Business.

NEW PAVEMENT BROKEN

Board Votes to Make Connections Before Pavements Are Laid in Future.

That the aldermen are weak-kneed and lack the courage of their convictions, was the charge made by Ald. Walter Stocker at last night's meeting of the Board of Works when the Board voted to make the rate for the Confederation School sewer connection $80. The agreement, signed for one year, is for $100, and the $80 rate will go into effect at the end of the year for a period of five years, the same period for which the agreement for a $16 rate for private connections will be in force.

Aldermen Stocker, Macdonald and McIntyre were opposed to reducing the rate charged school board of S.S. No. 2 North Monaghan, for this connection, but the rest of the aldermen present felt that if the township would come up $20 from its pervious offer of $60, the city should meet it.

The amount charged for private connections under the agreement is $7 lower than the average, declared Ald. Stocker, stating that he would call for the yeas and nays at Monday night's council meeting. The city has a million dollars invested, and will have to spend more, while the people of Monaghan "haven't a nickel in it," he added. "And they'll make us spend more on it, too," interjected Ald. McIntyre.

Ald. Macdonald wanted to know why the time of the agreement is being cut from ten to five years. "If it had been for five years," he charged, "they would have wanted ten."

That the matter had been hanging fire for some years and this offered an opportunity to reach an agreement was the Mayor's contention, to which Ald. Stocker repeated his remark that the council had been weak-kneed.

First payment under the agreement for private house connections are to be for 1928, Mayor Denne assured Ald. Greene, who brought up this point.

Need Two Maintainers

The chairman, Ald. Hamilton, and the City Engineer were authorized to buy a new road maintainer of the same make as the one now in use for snow removal this winter. The engineer recommended this purchase, pointing out that the one machine cannot cover all the streets necessary. His recommendation was supported by the Mayor and Ald. Stocker. Payment is to be made in January out of next year's estimates.

The engineer was instructed to get in touch with the C.N.R. officials to arrange for the rebuilding of the Bethune street bridge, which is kept up jointly by the railway and the city. The planking is in bad shape and the engineer recommended that it be rebuilt, but shorter than at present, and that the channel be deepened.

Ald. Stocker pointed out that the railway has used Bethune street for years without paying anything, yet the city has to keep up the bridge, except for the centre eight feet. He declared that the agreement called for the maintenance by the railway of a sidewalk on the east side of the street. While this matter is being taken up the railway will be asked to clean out the culverts at Antrim and Edinburgh streets behind Brondell Dantbeweaol9 wells that they may be free for the spring freshets.

Will Lay Sewers

In future, when pavements are to be laid on any street, the city will make sewer connections to the street line of all vacant lots and unconnected houses and charge the cost to the property. This decision was reached when Ald. Stocker reported that the pavement laid only this summer on McDonnell street has already been broken for a sewer connection to a house which has been erected for a number of years.

Paid For Holidays

The employees at the sewage disposal plant were granted pay for the overtime necessary in order that they might get holidays. Ex-Ald. J. O. Fife, the superintendent, pointed out that while one man was off the other two had to work twelve hours a day, whereas in other departments extra men did the work or it was divided up without overtime. The caretaker of the city hall was a case cited, as he is on holiday now and the city is paying a substitute.

The purchase of several carloads of traprock screenings now, when the price is down, was authorized. The rock will be used in place of sand to cover the road oil next summer. The saving to be made was pointed out by the Mayor, who re-

Sept. 29. — National Council of Women of Canada Week starts October 1st when an army composed of several thousand members of the organization will take an active part in the public appeal which the Council is making in towns and cities throughout the Dominion for a Foundation Fund of $200,000.

HARVEST JOY IS EXPRESSED AT ST. GEORGE'S

FITTING SERMON.

Rev. Canon Loucks, of Toronto, Draws Three Lessons from Harvest.

Having generously decorated their church with products of field and garden and orchard, the congregation of St. George's last night gathered for the annual harvest festival services. An inspiring hour of music and prayer, and a beautifully appropriate sermon delivered by one who once was second curate of St. John's Church, Peterborough, but who is now identified with Holy Trinity Church, Toronto, the Rev. Canon Loucks, marked the occasion that must have brought gladness to the heart of their rector, the Rev. J. L. Hughes.

After expressing the pleasure which he felt at returning to the field of his first clerical labors, when he was second curate of St. John's Church, many years ago, the Rev. Canon Loucks, without claiming any special text, began a most inspiring sermon on the lessons which God would teach with the harvest as an illustration.

"God would have us take three distinct lessons from the harvest," said the reverend gentleman, "and in this way, He would help us to a better understanding of His power and His love, and an appreciation of the blessings which he sends us. The first of the three lessons which the harvest teaches is the greatness of God's power.

"We live in an advanced age in which man's search and research have made common, wonders of science beyond the comprehension of the average man. These tihngs are taken for granted, yet we should remember that while these things have resulted from man's genius inspired by God, man cannot produce a harvest, nor a blade of grass nor a grain of wheat. In further emphasis of God's power, we look westward to a 600,000,000 bushel wheat crop. And a further illustration are these products of the garden and the farm which to-night are to be seen so plentifully in your church. Let us thank God for His power, which makes it possible for the world to be fed.

"Power without love would be incomplete," continued Canon Loucks, "but God's power and love, combined, are irresistible. And so it is that God provides a bounteous harvest in one part of the world so that the less fortunate people of other countries may be fed. If you are ever tempted to question His love, remember the harvest."

Continuing the thought of one part of the world being provided to care for the other, the Canon passed on to the second lesson—that God uses the harvest to illustrate how he would have men gather the products of the field and the garden, and, as a part of a great system, function for the benefit of his less fortunate brothers. He would have us realize that one part of that system cannot get along without the other.

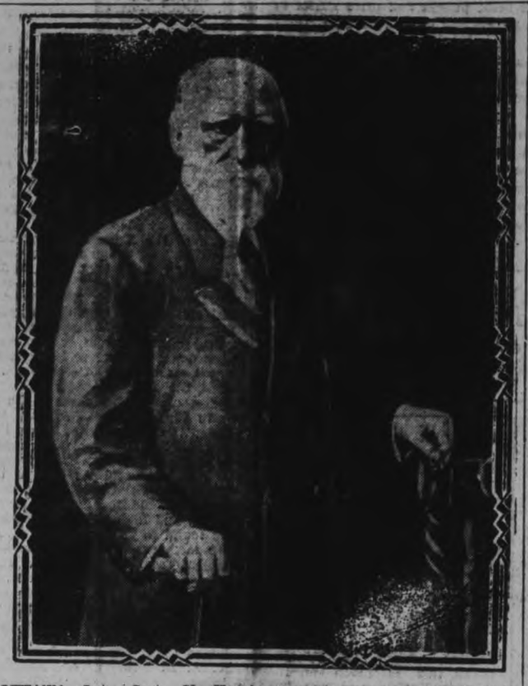
The third lesson taught by the harvest is that "as ye sow, so shall ye reap." Speaking especially to the younger element of his congregation, Canon Loucks pointed out the folly of an all-too-common belief that the young people must "sow their wild oats." He declared that Nature is relentless in dealing with those who offend her and that a universal law of Nature makes it a certainty that "ye shall reap as ye have sown. But as surely has ye sow kindly deeds, ye shall reap blessing untold."

LORD MAYOR IS ELECTED

Sir Kynaston Studd Becomes Lord Mayor of London.

EXTRAORDINARY SCENES.

LONDON, Sept. 29. —(Canadian Press).— Sir Kynaston Studd was elected Lord Mayor of London today. The election was marked by what described as extraordinary scenes at the assembly of liverymen of the ancient Guilds of the city of London at the Guild Hall. Sir Harold DeCourcey Moore, who was the leading candidate last year and with drew did the same thing a few days ago without knowledge of alderman and this caused some resentment. When his name was called to-day it was greeted with cries of "Never, Never" while Sir Kynaston's name was greeted with "All, All."



OTTAWA, Ont., Sept. 29.—Hon. Casimer Dessaules, dean of the Canadian Parliament, is 101 years old. He entered the Uper Chamber 21 years ago, when 80 years of age. There was a competitor in Quebec at the time of the Senate vacancy and the powers that were decided to give it to Senator Dessaules until the tumult died down by which time the vacancy would probably recure. Senator Dessaules, however, fooled his confreres and has held the seat ever since. He lives at Ste. Hyacinthe and is reported in good health.

T. H. HOOPER FORTY YEARS IN BUSINESS ON MONDAY, OCT. 1

Apprenticed to Long Brothers At $1.00 a Week As a Baker.

QUIT FOR HOLIDAY.

Opportunity Beckoned to Him One Day Across George Street.

On October 1st, forty years ago, Thomas H. Hooper ventured into business as a confectioner. He had been working for Long Brothers, Harry and James Long, and when he asked for a holiday toward the close of the summer, it was refused.

"Well, I guess I'll quit," the young baker calmly announced. He had his holiday, no doubt, and then his thoughts turned back to work and the getting of a job.

There was no market building then," he recalls, "and the farmers backed their wagons against the wooden sidewalk on the east side of George Street. I was standing on the sidewalk one day in September, thinking of nothing in particular and looking across the street. The store which I have occupied continuously since then was vacant. It had been a plumber's shop. Noble & McAndrew had been in business for a while. McAndrew was his son-in-law, and Noble was the father of James Noble, who was later a plumber in Peterborough, but has lived in Toronto for years. I remember that it was a Wednesday and there were many farmers on the market. The thought occurred to me that I could sell lunches in that store to the farmers. I turned the idea over in my mind, and not long afterward I went up to the Trust and Loan Company (Toronto Savings and Loan Company) to see George A. Cox about renting the place.

Mr. Cox asked me my name, and where I had been working. I told him I had been with Long Brothers seven years.

"That ought to be enough," he said, and put on his hat, and we went down to the vacant store to look it over and see what I wanted done. That's how I started. I opened on a Saturday, and my receipts for the day were $16.00.

His First Customer.

My first customer was Jimmy Sheehy. He was in the drygoods business up the street, and came in on Friday night when I was getting ready, and said, "I'll buy something to-night just for luck." That was my first five cents in the till, and although there was plenty of hard work in the succeeding years, I never had any business worries, and lunches for farmers have always been a feature of my lower store trade.

Mr. Hooper's attachment to the confectionery business seems to have been accidental in its origin.

Wife's Mercy Saves Beater From Prison

NEW YORK, September 29. — Michael Grazis, of Brooklyn, an ex-convict, yesterday walked out of the King's County Court arm in arm with his wife, Julia.

She had caused his arrest on a charge of beating her, but when she learned he was liable to ten years' imprisonment under the Baumes law she refused to testify against him.

Assistant District Attorney Goldstein sat helpless, admitting he had been beaten. The Baumes law had been made powerless — a thing the Court of Appeals had declared could not be done, a thing astute lawyers and hardencriminals had tried in vain to do for years.

ENGINEERS HEAR TALK ON BEARINGS

S. E. Partridge, of Timken Company, Delivers Interesting Address.

OPENING MEETING.

Pictures Show How Steel Is Made for Anti-friction Bearings.

S. E. Partridge, District Sales Manager of the Timken Roller Bearing Company, was the speaker at the first meeting of the season of the Peterborough Branch of the Engineering Institute of Canada, held last night in the Board Room of the Chamber of Commerce. Without exception, the meeting was the largest the local branch had held in a number of years; the board room being filled to capacity and many chairs were placed in the doorway and the hall outside.

The rapidly increasing use of the ball and roller bearings on automobiles and machines of all kinds no doubt had a lot to do with the size of the audience.

Moving picture illustrated Mr. Partridge's subject after which a full hour was taken up by asking questions and an informal discussion of the Timken bearing and other roller and ball bearings on the market today. Mr. Partridge thoroughly knew his subject and answered the questions, much to the delight of many men who are considering making the change in parts of machines under their personal observance and charge.

The two rolls of film shown gave a most interesting idea to those present of how the Timken bearing was made, starting in the first stages as alloy steel and coming out in the final stages ready to cut into bearing and measured up and fit into the raceways.

V. S. Foster of the Canadian General Electric Company introduced the speaker, after which Mr. Partridge gave a brief review of the early beginnings of the Timken Roller Bearing Company's steel plant. The Timken Company before 1916 had been buying their steel in more or less of the semi-alloy state, but with the war, good steel for bearings was hard to get, so the company built its own steel plant and commenced to reclaim its own steel from the raw state. By 1928 the plant was only partially completed, and by 1924 the company had its own complete steel plant in operation.

The pictures started with the raw material being dumped into the large furnaces, where it was melted and many of the alloys being drawn off, after which followed the pouring into large ingots where the metal was cooled; then followed the rolling out process where the large ingots would be rolled out. In the melting process a large 60-ton electric furnace, the biggest in the world which is fed by six electrodes carrying a power of about 10,000 k.w. was shown.

Massive saws cut up the long strips after they had been rolled, and then followed in one single operation the making of a solid round seamless tube with uniform thickenss to the walls. The tubes were then scaled and rolled up into large coils ready to go to the bearing factory, where they were cut up into bearings of the required size.

In the discussion period Mr. Partridge told of the using of the Timken bearing on the railway cars on some of the lines in the United States, but so far as Canadian lines were concerned he said they were only being tried out on a few of the gasoline and electric coaches. In every case, he claimed, the maintenance cost was lowered and the life of the Timken bearing was longer than any other of the roller and ball bearings. He stressed the conservation of power, and several of the audience gave their own experiences where it had proven that there was a decrease in the amount of power to operate the machine. Where bearings had falled down, the speaker said he had usually found as the chief reason, especially with automobile, that there was not enough lubricant used. In giving as the reason why the Timken was ahead of the ball-bearing kind, the speaker said that the weight was more distributed instead of being concentrated upon one place as in the ball bearing and that the antifriction of the roller bearing made the machine much easier to operate.

The next meeting of the branch will be held on October 11th when R. E. Doherty of the consulting engineering staff of the Canadian General Electric Company will be the speaker. Mr. Doherty is well versed in the education of the young students who enter the plant as they all have to pass through his observance, and his address will be more along the educational line.

British Critics Laud The Talking Pictures

LONDON, September 29. — British critics generally agree that the silence of the film drama has been permanently broken by the new art of the "talkies," which were seen in the first full-length theatre program in England on Thursday night. Everything from announcements of future attractions to the full-length film of Al Jolson in The Jazz Singer, and God Save the King, at the conclusion of the program, was reproduced by the sound films without a musician in the theatre. Short films, such as the New York Symphony, a solo by the tenor, Martinelli, and entertaining by Eddie Peabody with his banjo, seemed to please the audience almost as much as the feature film. Critics to-day commented freely on the synchronization and the mechanical perfection, but said that the reproduction tone was not yet perfect, while some seemed to think that Americans ought to cultivate Oxford accents.

GOVERNMENT IS CRITICIZED

League Believes United Reply Indicated Willingness for Conference.

NO COMMENT.

GENEVA, Sept. 29 (Canadian Press).—The deduction which the League of Nations circles draw from the American note rejecting the Franco-British naval accord, is that the United States would be willing to participate in a five power naval conference to find a basis for naval limitation acceptable to all.

As press despatches have indicated the American aversion to any private party, Geneva sees no hope for London's suggesting that the unofficial conversations be held, particularly as those presumably would be founded on the Franco-British accord which Washington now declines to accept as a basis for discussion.

Government Criticized

A despatch from London says: criticism of the British Government in the Opposition press and gratification that the door was not slammed upon further discussion were outstanding points in the majority of newspaper comments to-day on the United States rejection of the anglo-French naval proposals.

In official quarters it was stated that any comment from the Government must be deferred until the Cabinet meets probably on Tuesday.

The Times maintained that the Anglo-French proposals were a genuine effort to avoid a deadlock over disarmament and thought that this point was misunderstood, although quite sincerely in United States. The paper found that, after all, there were "clear indications in the American note of a desire for further consideration."

The Morning Post expressed hope that "The entirely reasonable and friendly tone of the note will assuage resentment which is being worked up by a section of the press."

HOME SECRETARY IS ASKED TO BAR AIMEE

Daily Mail Fears No Good Will Come From Evangelist's Trip.

LONDON, September 29 (Canadian Press).—Representations that Mrs. Aimee Semple McPherson Los Angeles evangelist and native of Oxford County, Ontario, should be barred from entering Great Britain have been made to the Home Office, it was stated there to-day. In authoritative quarters, however, it was understood that the Home Office would not deny Mrs. McPherson admission. It was stated that the immigration officer at no port has power to prevent alien landing. Should he have any doubt regarding any particular persons desirably he would consult the Home Office.

The Daily Mail this morning editorially expressed the hope that the Home Secretary would look very carefully into the question of Mrs. McPherson's proposed visit, saying: "This Californian woman evangelist, as she calls herself, is coming here to conduct a mission. Those who are interested in serious evangelical work on this side of the Atlantic are convinced her presence can do nothing but harm. Representations have already been made to the Home Office, urging her exclusion as an undesirable alien. The Home Minister will do well to investigate Mrs. McPherson's conduct in the past."

Little Hope Held For Recovery of George Osborne, 23 Years Old.

FOUR HOURS' WORK.

Young Man from Prince Rupert, B.C., Had Worked Here For One Month.

George Osborne, aged about twenty-three years, a student employee of the Canadian General Electric test department, remained unconscious at two o'clock this afternoon, despite a four hours' attempt to save his life, following his electrocution in the brass test department this morning. Dr. G. Murray Fraser, the C.G.E. resuscitation squad, and Dr. T. W. H. Young had about given up hope at this time.

Osborne, who has no relatives in the city, had come to the local plant only a month ago, and had resided at the home of Mrs. Robert Wilson, 584 Charlotte Street. His home is in Prince Rupert, B.C. As yet, no explanation of the accident has been found. Osborne was doing testing work when he received the shock at about 10.30 a.m.

NEW MINISTER TAKES OFFICE

Hon. Phillippe Roy Presents His Credentials to President Doumergue.

SECOND DIPLOMAT.

PARIS, Sept. 29. — (Canadian Press Cable).—Diplomatic relations between Canada and France were established to-day when Hon. Phillipe Roy, who has served the Dominion for more than 17 years as Commissioner-General, presented his credentials to president Doumergue and became Canada's Minister Plenipotentiary and Envoy Extraordinary to the French Republic.

Mr. Roy is Canada's second diplomat to be accredited to a foreign power the first being Hon. Vincent Massey, Canadian Minister at Washington.

To-day's ceremony was held at the historic Chateu De Rambouillet, the summer residence of the French President. Mr. Roy was accompanied to the Cheateau by M. De Fouquieres, whose duties inclue introduction of diplomats. The text of the credentials which Mr. Ray handed to the President was not made public and after a brief audience the Canadian Minister returned to Paris where with Premier King of Canada he participated in placing a wreath on the tomb of the unknown soldier at the Arc De Triumph. The Canadian Legation here will be formally opened on Tuesday.

IRVINE WHITE IS ACQUITTED

Jury Frees Fenelon Falls Boy of Criminal Negligence at Lindsay.

OUT 50 MINUTES.

LINDSAY, Sept. 29.—At a session of the Supreme Court of Ontario at the Court House yesterday, presided over by Mr. Justice Raney, Irvine White of Fenelon Falls was acquitted of the charge of criminal negligence arising out of the death of Victor Harris, of Cameron, on July 1st last. The jury was out fifty minutes.

The defendant, White, in company with Max Brandon, was motoring to Fenelon Falls from Lindsay at midnight on July 1st, and when near the Harris farm, situated a short distance from Cameron village, crashed into a buggy containing Victor Harris. Young Harris received fatal injuries, the horse was killed and the buggy reduced to kindling wood.

White was originally charged with manslaughter, but owing to insufficient evidence, the Crown, on the suggestion of Justice Raney, reduced the charge to criminal negligence. The case aroused intense interest throughout the district.

U.S. Ready Make Public Naval Pact Protest

LENGTHY NOTE BARES EFFORTS TO CUT ARMS

Reviews Washington Conference of 1921 Which Junked Flower of Navy.

GIVE MINUTE DETAILS.

Expected Will Be Presented to British and French Foreign Offices To-day.

WASHINGTON, September 29. — One of the longest notes in American diplomatic history is to be presented to the British and French Foreign Offices within the next forty-eight hours in protest of the secret naval alliance, it was learned to-day.

The document reached the respective capitals by cable to-day. It is being decoded and verified in an exchange of cables between the State Department and the American Embassies at Paris and London.

It awaits only instruction from Secretary Kellogg that it be formally handed to the respective foreign offices. This is to go forward shortly and before the end of the week the formidable document will be published to the world.

The note goes into the most minute details of the relations between the United States and the world Powers in the efforts of this country to promote peace by a mutual and equable limitation of naval armaments.

Reviews Parley.

It first reviews the Washington armaments conference of 1921-22, in which this country made junk of the flower of the most formidable navy float, while the other nations made little or no sacrifice.

It points out on this occasion the United States expressed a willingness to eliminate submarines altogether, a measure favored by the British. The attitude of the French and Italian Governments on this occasion, it is stated, made this impossible. Both insisted on submarines.

It also points out on this occasion the Powers agreed to fix a limit on the size of light cruisers such as the building. That is, such ships were not to exceed 10000 tons with armament of not to exceed eight 8-inch guns.

At that time, it is stated, the United States proposed that, in addition to fixing a limit on the size of the cruiser the total tonnage of cruisers should also be limited. This the British refused to do.

When it was found impossible to limit these auxiliary craft, it is stated, the subject was dispensed with and the conference fixed limits on capital ship construction—that is ships above 10,000 tons.

The United States also points out and emphasizes that under the British proposal every merchant vessel under that flag could be converted overnight into a cruiser, thus giving that country a ratio of from fifteen or twenty to one against the United States.

Since then, the note states, the British have launched upon the unrestricted construction of fast modern cruisers, somewhat smaller than the few in the United States navy, and carrying armaments of 6-inch guns. Last year President Coolidge and his advisers deemed the time ripe to ask the Powers if they would meet to fix limits on auxiliary craft and halt this building race, it will be said.

Made No Reply.

On that occasion, the note goes on, France and Italy did not favor the United States with the courtesy of a reply to the invitation. Great Britain, Japan, and the United States made up the conference. Great Britain was adamant for building an unlimited tonnage in modern cruisers and the conference proved a failure. France at that time was not interested.

Now, it is stated, the United States finds France and Great Britain in close alliance, with France approving the unlimited construction of cruisers by the British, and the British, formerly opposed to submarines, favoring unlimited construction of submarines, principally by the French.

CANADIAN SINGERS HIGHLY COMMENDED

Toronto Newspaper Praises Organization That Will Sing Here.

Writing of the Canadian Singers, who will give a program every night of the Produced-in-Canada Exhibition, the Toronto Telegram says:

"High-backed chairs, tapestry and other rich and costly stuffs draped here and there, little bay trees lifting globes of bristling green, impressive footstools, and the stage is set. Enter from left and right, nymphs, muses rather . . . they move like tall pine trees swaying in the wind. . . . They are clad in silk and brocades, in large flowered patterns or plain, or shot with lights, sky blue, daffodil, orchid, scarlet. Smooth coiffed heads are bare, or covered with caps of open lace. Lofty collars rise with the grace of lyre birds' tails. Bodices fit closely; skirts are full and farthingaled and cover the tiny silken slippers. . . .Hush, the Singers are about to begin! . . . This hearer liked best of all the old Christmas carol, 'Tyrle Tyrlow,' with music by Dr. Healey Willan. . . . The songs were principally from the 15th, 16th and 17th centuries—hymns, carols, lyrics, choruses and madrigals, French and English. . . . An intensely enthusiastic audience applauded the muses while January snow and rain lashed the streets last night. . . . They are Renaissance ladies, entertaining themselves in their own moderate, dignified and pleasant fashion . . . they are fit to charm an audience of any size, but they are essentially chamber performers. . . . They aim at purity of expression, not volume of voice. They sing as ladies would do were they passing a pleasant evening in the marble halls of Florence or in any of the old world palaces two or three centuries ago. . . ."

Edison Turns Earth For Ford Museum Which Will House His Own Inventions

DETROIT, Sept. 29.—Thomas A. Edison yesterday afternoon turned the first spade of earth at a site in Dearborn near the Ford airport, where a museum commemorating the inventions he has given to the world will be housed.

Near the building site is an ancient steam engine which Edison once owned and with which he experimented. It was purchased by Henry Ford as part of his collection for the Edison Museum, which will also contain early models of Edison's most famous inventions, including the phonograph and motion pictures.

One of the first things that caught the inventor's eye was a steam engine, once his property at Fort Myers, which was bought by Mr. Ford twenty-five years ago.

The engine was connected with belts, pulleys and drive shafts to many of the implements that Mr. Edison had used in his Fort Myers laboratory.

While in the laboratory Mr. Edison showed much interest in his old work tools, particularly in the dynamo which he used with his first electric lighting system. The globes that lighted the room were also made by him forty years ago.

The party then went to the site of the museum. Here Mr. Edison was handed a spade that had been the property of Luther Burbank. The inventor climbed the steps to the eight-foot platform that had been constructed next to freshly laid concrete. He stuck the spade deeply into the soft material. Then he walked across the concrete, leaving his footprints. He picked up a stick and carefully scrawled his name beside the footprints.

CAMPBELLFORD FALL FAIR PROVES MOST SUCCESSFUL

4,000 Attend on the Second Day — Entry List Large.

JACK ABBE WINS.

Four Races Are Run Off in Afternoon—Some Going Five Heats.

(Examiner Staff Correspondence)

CAMPBELLFORD, Sept. 29.—On a par with the great fair of 1927 and in some departments, far in advance of the event of last season, Campbellford Fall Fair closed last night with the assurance that it had been a complete success. Accommodations for the exhibits are generally considered to be ample, but the directors were hard put to find room for the thousands of articles that were placed for the inspection of the judges and the public. Early in the afternoon, the crowd began to arrive. Men who have taken tickets at the gate and also been in the box office for more years than they care to mention are emphatic that in their opinion, the crowd has never before arrived so early nor in such great numbers. The weather was bright and sunny, thought perhaps slightly chilly than might be considered ideal. The gate receipts show that there were more than four thousand people on the grounds this afternoon.

Long rows of motor cars parked outside the grounds and a slowly moving line passing through the gate forewarned the visitors to the grounds of what they might expect once they arrived inside. Everywhere were crowds and every person seemed to be having a good time.

Class Large

The reason why the poultry judges were not finished early was quite evident to the visitor to the poultry building which is immediately to the right inside the main gate. There were no empty cages, save for perhaps less than a dozen in all the hundreds that constitute the long rows that run the full length of the building and are three tiers high.

Exhibition hall, to the left of the gate was transformed into a mansion of treasure. The exhibits were generally considered the best that have yet been seen in Campbellford. All afternoon, the building was crowded with men and women anxious to see the cream of perfection before the hour arrived when it was permissable for the exhibitors to remove their possessions.

To the general public, the midway and its subordinate concessions was perhaps the greatest attraction. Aside from the entertainment to be derived from the various rides such as the ferris wheel and the chair plane, the local people are interested in the success of the venture since it is owned and operated by a local citizen. Nor did this citizen forget that Campbellford was his home. By nature generous, Mr. Hubble endeared himself to many citizens here when he granted the local branch of the Canadian Legion rent-free space for a booth. When the booth was erected and in operation, Mr. Hubble congratulated those responsible for it and said that he was pleased to have such a creditable stand in connection with his shows. His business was excellent during the day and evening and will be operating again this afternoon and evening. Age did not seem to make any difference in the patronage which drifted toward the midway attractions. This same show will be one of the attractions at the Kiwanis Made in Canada Fair in Peterborough, October 15th to 20th. It is described as one of the best in Canada.

Band Present

Good music from the Northumberland regimental band was a feature of the fair. This year, the band occupied a portion of the grandstand and were in the best position to see the speed events that they had been for many year. Also there was a noticeable lack of bad temper in the judges stand due to the band being too far away to be stopped whille the races were one. This year the two co-operated wonderfully well.

Four Races.

There were four speed events in all, and the class of racing witnessed here yesterday afternoon was, in the opinion of lovers of the sport, the best that could be seen anywhere. The races were held under the Canadian

GERMANS CHEER THE BREMEN, BACK FOR AVIATION EXHIBIT

BREMEN, Sept. 29—The airplane Bremen, on which Captain Herman Koehl, Major James Fitzmaurice and Baron Gunther von Huenefeld made the first westward trans-ocean flight to America, arrived in Germany to-day. The machine which was brought home to be exhibited at the Berlin International Air Navigation Exposition, arrived in Bremerhaven this afternoon on the steamer Krefeld and was immediately loaded on a railroad car, amid the enthusiastic shou of a large crowd of spectators.

The appearance of the plane shows plainly that it went through hard times. The entire body and wings are badly oxidized, the only bright spots being the places where repairs have been made and patches inserted. The lettering, "Bremen D.1167," is still plainly legible, however.

After the Berlin exposition the historic plane will be returned to New York and turned over to a museum there, as announced by Baron von Huenefeld recently.

WARSAW LADIES AID PLANS FOWL SUPPER

United Church Social Event Will Take Place on Oct. 15.

(Examiner Correspondence)

WARSAW, Sept. 29.—Mrs. Bert Rae was hostess to the members of the United Church Ladies' Aid which met at her home on Thursday afternoon.

There was a large attendance of members as well as several visitors.

Plans were completed for the fowl supper to be held on October 15.

It was decided to buy six dozen knives and forks, and as many dishes as are needed.

Mesdames Digweed and Weller will canvas the ladies of the congregation for supplies and Mesdames Herrington, Geo. Taylor, Rufus Payne and Roland Payne will arrange for the program.

An endeavor to get more men than usual to help is being made. Mrs. George Taylor's class and Mr. Rufus Payne's are asked to assist as waiters and waitresses.

Just before closing Mrs. Weller read an address to Mrs. McCauley, speaking of the regret the Aid feels in losing a member who has always been so ready to help, in any and every way, and wishing her happiness and success in her new home. She was also reminded to keep hold of the higher things of life and not fail to connect herself with church work, but to do as she has done in Warsaw.

Mrs. Arthur Payne presented her with a hotpoint iron, and a brown leather purse.

Mrs. McCauley thanked the ladies.

Silo filling has commenced. John Darling filled his silo on Thursday.

Farmers have been very busy all summer and are still perhaps even more so, for there are threshings and silo-fillings to attend. There is still a lot of buckwheat uncut, because it is too green. However, it is filling wonderfully and drier weather and warmer may come yet. There is abundance of feed and pastures are quite fresh and green. Young cattle out on summer ranches are in good condition, and beef cattle are being sold from eight to one hundred and twenty-five dollars. Some of the threshing is very dirty, but the fairly general use of formaldehyde has lessened the amount of fungers.

Levon Kricorian has gone to Roseneath.

Mrs. Joseph Tedford is still in the hospital

S. S. WORKERS HOLD MEETING

Stirling, Rawdon and Marmora Association in Good Standing.

OBJECTIVE PASSED.

(Examiner Correspondence)

MARMORA, Sept. 29—Well attended sessions in the afternoon and evening marked the annual convention of the Stirling, Rawdon and Marmora Sunday School Association held at Mt. Pleasant United Church in the township of Rawdon on Thursday. In the afternoon devotional exercises were taken by the Rev. P. F. Gardiner of Springbrook. W. J. Sharpe welcomed the delegates after which F. T. Hulin, of Stirling, retiring president, gave a short but helpful address. The roll call was responded with a report from each delegate of the fifteen schools of the Association. An anthem by the choir preceded the reports of the Department Superintendents who later on were re-elected for the ensuing year. The statistical report of J. F. Baker the energetic secretary-treasurer, was of the usual encouraging type. This year the township ranks 105 per cent and receives a bonus from headquarters of the Ontario Religious Educational Council on account of having remitted the full apportionment to the treasurer within three weeks of "Go to Sunday School Sunday." Including its cradle roll and Home Department, 1603 are enrolled as members of the Association. The average of all schools is 74 per cent of the international standing. Two of these schools, St. Andrew's Presbyterian, Stirling, and Bethel United, Rawdon, were found to be 100 per cent. All these facts brought forth favorable comment from the lips of the Provincial Representative, Rev. J. N. H. Norton, who also gave an able and inspiring address, "What I would do if I were a Sunday school teacher." Discussion of Sunday school problems followed under the leadership of the Rev. A. N. Reid of St. Andrew's, Stirling.

Nomination of officers also featured in the afternoon program with confirmation and installation at the evening session. Officers for the following years are:

President, Rev. A. N. Reid; 1st vice-president, Mr. W. J. Sharpe; 2nd vice-president, Mr. C. W. Thompson; secretary-treasurer, Mr. J. F. Baker.

Department Superintendents:

Children's work, Miss Hazel Bateman, Springbrook; boys' work, Mr. Willie Warren, Stirling R.R. 1; girls' work, Mrs. G. S. Eastwood, Bonarlaw; young people, Mr. Thomas McMullen, Stirling R.R. 1; adult division, Mr. A. Brown, Frankford, R.R. 3; home department, Mrs. C. V. Clancy, Stirling, R.R. 3; teachers' training, Miss Freda Matthews, Stirling; missionary, Mrs. William Potts, Stirling, R.R. 3; temperance, Mr. F. S. Pearce, Marmora.

At 5 p.m., the session adjourned delegates being the guests at supper of the members of the Mt. Pleasant congregation whose homes adorn the picturesque neighbourhood of what is the more familiarly known at Hubble Hill.

Evening Session.

The evening session was opened with prayer and scriptural reading by the Rev. M. J. C. Levason, rector of Rawdon. The report of the nominating committee finding acceptance the officers were duly installed by Rev. F. G. Joblin. The choir very creditably sang the anthem "Hallelujah Praise Ye the Lord." The matter of a training school, the selection of Wellman's Corners for the next convention and the appointment of a delegate to a forthcoming temperance convention in Ottawa were matters endorsed by the Resolutions Committee in their report presented by C. W. Thompson and passed by the convention. Following a rousing address by the Rev. E. W. Rowland of Stirling United church, F. T. Hulin, retiring president, presented the banner to St. Andrew's Sunday school, Stirling. Miss Spry, a teacher of that school receiving it on the school's behalf. Before giving the address of the evening, Rev. Norton mentioned that it was his first experience in years to see a plus township for him to address. Using as his theme, the miracle recorded solely by St. Mark of the blind man whom Christ in healing, took by the hand, the speaker gave a most uplifting half hour's talk on humanity sharing the ministry of Christ in word and deed, helping those who are spiritually blind to see Jesus and also the needs of their brethren. The benediction was pronounced at the end of the sesion by Rev. A. B. Caldwell of Marmora.

GREAT SERMONS
BY GREAT MEN

THE LOST COIN

BY VERY REV. C. J. VAUGHAN, D.D.,
Dean of Llandoff.

Luke xv., 8.—"Light a candle, and sweep the house, and seek diligently."

THREE parables stand together in this chapter. The occasion of all is one and the same—the murmuring of scribes and Pharisees against the Saviour who would eat with sinners. And the general drift of all is the same—the feeling of God towards a possession lost and found. Thus far there is unity—there is even identity—in the three. But no two parables of our Lord are really identical, however like may be the incidents of one to those of another. And so it is here. There is a climax natural and real in the three losses in this chapter. In the first parable, the owner of a hundred sheep loses one of them. In the second, the owner of ten pieces of silver loses one of them. In the third, the father of two sons loses one of them. Now the second lost thing, though it is the less valuable is to the owner more so. The third is a loss differend in kind, and appealing yet more forcibly to the understanding and heart of mankind. There is a climax also in the thing signified. The sheep has strayed in its ignorance from the flock and the pasture. The son exiles himself of self-will and rebelliousness from the home and from the father. Between these two extremes of mere simplicity and utter wilfulness lies the insensate unconsciousness of the lost coin. If the first figure is the type of the erring soul, the second is the type of a soul ignorant of its death, utterly unconcerned with the thought of sin and ungodliness, and needing a special ministry of loving-kindness suitable to that particular condition. On the other hand, this soul itself is already in the figure of a parable, a coin. It is not a mere fragment of brass or silver unappropriated. It has already an image and a superscription. It may be covered with dust; it may be stained with weather; it may be half defaced with much handling; it may be hidden under heaps of rubbish; but it has not returned, and it cannot return, into the uncoined state. The impress of a Royal Owner is upon it; and His treasury, however far distant, is its origin and, therefore, its home. Meet emblem, my brethren, of man's soul in its lowest, its most lost, estate. "I am God's coin," said one of old. "From His treasury-house I have wandered. Have mercy on me!" Made in God's image, after God's likeness, we cannot unmake, though we may undo, ourselves. We cannot cease to be God's property, though we may put ourselves to very base uses. We cannot be reissued from another mint, though we may cease to circulate as God's coin. The very figure is a sermon. There is that in us all which testifies whose we are; and we do no honour to God when, in a misplaced humility, we speak of ourselves as not yet His. The finally lost spirit has effaced the superscription. When that is accomplished, there is no recovery and no return; but while the day of grace lasts, the image is there, and God, who speaks to us from heaven, speaks to us as His own. It is a mighty secret of love and redemption. We are God's, and therefore He seeks. We are God's, and therefore we can be found.

Some, in their anxiety to find types everywhere, have busied themselves in interpreting the figure of this woman. We will not follow them in saying positively that she has a name, though some of her characteristics might, I grant, be found in God's Church. I would rather see in this feature of the parable how God takes to Himself, and makes part of His Divine nature, the essential graces and virtues not of man only, but of woman—speaks of Himself now and then, in places that I could point to, as not the Father only, but (with reverence be it spoken) the Mother also, of His creatures, as though pleading with us in tones which must penetrate the heart of all who have ever known the love of woman—of mother or sister, or wife or daughter—and bidding us not only to feel His tenderness, but also to reciprocate and to hand it on.

Thus at every turn we see a distinctiveness in this parable, something peculiar and unique in its imagery; and so it is not less with those brief clauses of it which I have made my text. The woman who has lost one of her ten pieces cannot acquiesce in and rest in her loss. Little in itself, to her it is vital. She waits not for the light of day, but, discovering her loss at night, by night she sets herself to repair it. She lights the lamp, sweeps the house, and seeks diligently till she finds it.

It is a parable, beloved brethren, of the love of God. God represents Himself as missing one soul. Little is that soul in itself to the great God. Myriads of such spirits, washed and sanctified, already people the blessed home where God is. But God would show to us that each one is precious. Each one was separately created: each one has a place designed for it in the universal temple: each one not filling that place leaves a blank. The eye of love misses it, and therefore the hand of love seeks it. We would not speak where the Divine Interpreter is silent: we would speak but timidly, and with peradventure. If Christ, the Divine Interpreter, had here spoken as He speaks in the key to the sower and to the tares, might He not, perhaps, have said this: "The coin is the soul, and the candle is the word, and the house is the man, and the sweeping is God's discipline, and the diligent search is the meaning of this lifetime, and the finding is the everlasting salvation. And as the woman in the parable calls together her friends and her neighbours to rejoice with her in the finding, so does the love of God share its joy with an innumerable company of angels, often as one sinner is brought to repentance, often as one lost life is reclaimed to sorrow and prayer, and faith and amendment." No loss, in God's judgment, is comparable to the loss of a soul. A soul may be lost—is commonly lost—life still continuing. Doubtless in the sight of God there are some soulless lives present here this evening. Whosoever cares not for God, lives not to God, asks only how he can please himself—get the most of earth's goods, its wealth or pleasure or honour—avoids trouble and pain, shirks duty, would sin and not suffer, would do wrong and hide it, would pass for the thing he is not, or be endured, accepted, honoured, being the thing he is—that is, a soulless man; that is, one of those coins which have God's image and superscription upon them, but have got hidden in the dust and mire and refuse of this world and are as much lost to all the real purposes of their being as the shilling that has dropped between the chinks of your floor, or behind the wainscoting of your wall.

Now, know that, though you may care little about your lost soul, God cares for it much. God has lit His candle—the candle of Divine revelation—and He is throwing its illumination upon you. We wonder why you have come here if you do not intend to be shone upon. Here in this place the secrets of hearts are revealed, and soulless men are shown their destitution. Oh, be sure, conscious or unconscious, you came here to-night to be shone upon. There is that in you which cries out for God—which will not rest—which you cannot persuade to rest—out of God's light; and you are here because you feel that. Yes, many a man feels without knowing what he wants. The Divine Master interprets. You want God's love, and the love of God. The one is the echo, the reflection, of the other. And God's love has lit her candle, and will throw its light full upon you. Godis going to look for your soul. Hinder not, thwart not, the search. But love herself might kindle the light, and yet the lost cannot be found: for indeed, brethren, that soul which is the coin, when lost as we have described, keeps itself well out of sight,—is thoroughly overlaid, overgrown, overwhelmed, with weeds and thorns, with papers and books, with long indulged habits and easily besetting sins" and no mere lighting up, no, not if the candle is that of God's word earnestly preached and keenly applied, will suffice to discover it. That is the object—to discover the lost soul. Therefore the parable goes on to speak of a sweeping. I know it is a homely figure, —too homely, perhaps, for some tastes, —beneath the dignity, some might say, of this pulpit, only that here Christ has gone before—has written it in His book, and given it to me for my text.

And how wonderful, however homely, is this figure. The love of God first lights up in the world this lamp of revelation, telling man what man could not know, for no man hath ascended up to heaven to read there, in the light of that world, the things that were, and that are, and that shall be. First this, and remembering that this light will never fall of itself upon the lost coin, the very loss of which lies in its being out of sight of the man himself. Then, secondly, the love of God sweeps—sweeps, I say, the house, which is the man. Oh, this—the stirrings of the life which Providence works—is not this the real meaning of that disappointment, that sickness, that bereavement, which seemed to you so casual, or so wanton, or so cruel? The love of God had failed in its illumination. You might have let it succeed, but you did not. You suffered the dust of earth to lie thick upon you,—perhaps the amiable dust of kindly sentiment, of satisfied affection or, perhaps the ugly dust of eager grasping, of predominant self, of overmastering passion and so, evading the illumination, you necessitated the sweeping. It was the love of God still. I pray you lose not that thought. Only it was a love which, in order to succeed, must now sweep, when, if you would have had it so, its bright shining would have been enough. And then there comes into the very life's life a stir and an agitation which cannot be disregarded, though it is easy to misinterpret it. Now begin all manner of questionings, from which previously you were free. To your astonishment, truths once self-evident become now incredible. While you cared not for God, you took God for granted. Now you want Him, and you cannot believe. You thought, before, that at any moment God could be found if you happened to want Him. To question God's being, or His attributes, or His word, or His omnipresence, would in those days have been monstrous to you but now you want Him, and you cannot find. The besom of the Divine discipline is busy, and its first effect is to raise the dust which it would remove. All is confusion, all is added doubt and added conflict. Your very sins seem more powerful. While you were let alone, you could fancy yourself independent you only sinned because you chose to sin. Now you find that sin is your master, and you are its slave. An alien usurper holds the key of the being, and you are not your own. Yet in truth, strange as it may be to say it, the condition is more helpful. You are passing now from death unto life, passing, not passed. The love of God is at work, and will seek diligently till she find.

Marvellous word! Record at once of difficulty and perseverance. How much is required ere the finding be accomplished! To find the lost soul is not easy. The whole work of sanctification is wrapped up in it. Every thought has to be brought into captivity every motive has to be elevated every habit uncoined and re-nicked. Objects indifferent once, or distasteful, are to be made the aim of the life and that holiness which, to fallen man, is repugnant, must be cultivated for a purpose to fallen man repulsive—that he may at last see God. This is the meaning of that diligent search by which love at last shall find for without success, love cannot live. It is not enough for love to have done its duty in trying to find. Love cannot sleep till its object be accomplished. No toil is too great, may she but attain.

Surely, brethren, we read here the explanation of much that is so perplexing in our life's history. Why is it that God will not let me alone? God knows that I do not want Him. Again and again I have prayed the Gadarene prayer, "Depart from me, O Christ! Torment me not before the time. Grudge me not this brief truce. Is not eternity long enough, which is before me?" No, we will not frame into words these dreadful blasphemies, though they are the secret prayers of many. We will but interpret.

This seeking is unto finding. Love will not stay till she finds. Help her, brethren, every one, in her gracious, her wonderful work. Let her find. Help the joy of angels. Let the heavenly feast be cheered by the tidings of another finding. Kick not against the goad. It drives till you will let it lead. Then all is peace. Love and you are at one. Then, as a prophet has written, there is "quietness and assurance for ever."

What remains but that, in a brief word or two, we treat the text as I first read it—as a precept. "Light a candle sweep the house and seek diligently" till you find. Your soul is the lost thing. The love of God is seeking, but you have the power of frustrating that search. The mystery of the free will is one of two enigmas the mystery of Divine grace is the other. How can they co-exist? Perhaps Heaven will tell us the secret. We know not, but at present we see this—that the neglect of either half of the truth is the loss of the whole. Enough—that shall suffice for us in the present—both parts are true. Meanwhile, be we workers together with God. Let the free will help the grace. Light a candle God has lit it in the word light it in the soul Take the lamp, which is God's word, and let it shine. Take the bushel off it, and let it shine for thee. This is a different thing from hearing sermons this is a different thing from reading the Bible patiently, tolerantly, or even attentively. This implies a resolution on your part that the Bible, that the gospel, shall mean something for you. This implies that you will not live and die with a mere sound buzzing in your ears—no, not if it be a pleasant sound like that of which Ezekiel wrote of old but that you must and will have not a sound but a voice, an articulate voice, come to you out of that book. However little it says, even if four-fifths or nine-tenths or ninety-nine-hundredths of it be at present unintelligible to you, and unreal, yet the little it does say shall be a voice and not a sound—a voice of information, a voice of direction, a voice of counsel, and a voice of comfort. I will keep to its plainest parts till I have them by heart and by soul. I will never hear one sermon without learning from it, and doing something after it. Thus shall I light God's candle within, and make it shine through the chambers of my imagery. Then I will sweep the house.

Remember, what you are looking for is your soul. You see your mind plainly enough—you see your heart—you see your life, so far as these things have to do with this world, with its business, its studies, and its affections. But the soul is still out of sight. That one silver piece, so inestimably precious, if not in itself, yet to God and to the man, is still covered up, overlaid, hidden. Then I must sweep for it. It is a true parable still. I must look well into my inmost life. I must ascertain which way my life looks at present,—whether downward or upward,—whether around or beyond,—whether to self, that ugly, deformed, obscene idol, or to God and my brother. I must investigate thought and speech I must search out habit and temper and spirit I must see where that innermost being is, and how occupied, which alone can converse with, live for, and at last live with, God. Oh, I dare not die, and therefore I will not live, with all this unsettled. I must seek diligently till I find. I must not search languidly, search for a day or an hour, and cease. I must find this hidden, this buried, this lost thing inside me and, if nothing else would stir me to this, let the thought of the love, let the thought of the joy, here disclosed, arouse me to it, and animate and quicken. Think of the revelation of that world here made to us spirits unfallen, spirits that left not their first estate, spirits to whom sin is intelligible and the spectacle of sin must be hideous, stooping from the heavenly places to watch and to sympathize with His finding of the sinner angels beholding the face of God as the angels of Christ's little ones angels desiring to look into God's human dealing, and finding in His Church a disclosure altogether new of His unsearchable wisdom God Himself occupied, not alone, not chiefly, with the upholding of systems, each atom of which is indispensable to the revolutions of the universe—occupied rather with this, the setting right a disarranged soul, the bringing harmony out of that human discord, the eventual bringing home of that stray exile, self-exiled, and yet not forgotten. Oh, if this be heaven, if this be God, how, how shall I escape if I neglect so great salvation?

A PRAYER

Prayers On Seven Words From Cross

Prayer No. 3.

O Blessed Jesus, Who hadst compassion on Thy Mother in her bereavement, and didst appoint for her a new home with Thy beloved disciple; We beseech Thee to bless us in all the duties of our home life, to sanctify all our friendships, and to grant us Thy consolation in all our sorrows and bereavements, that by faith in Thee we may rejoice in the Communion of Thy Saints, and may learn to look for the glories of our eternal home with Thee, Who livest with the Father and the Holy Ghost, God for ever and ever. Amen.

And this is the record, that God hath given to us eternal life, and this life is in his Son. He that hath the Son hath life, and he that hath not the Son of God hath not life. I Jno. v, 11, 12.

O Israel, return unto the Lord thy God; for thou hast fallen by thine iniquity. Take with you words, and turn to the Lord say unto him. Take away all iniquity, and receive us graciously: so will we render the calves of our lips Asshur shall not save us: we will not ride upon horses: neither will we say any more to the work of our hands, Ye are our gods for in thee the fatherless findeth mercy. I will heal their backsliding I will love them freely for mine anger is turned away from him. Hos. xiv, 1-4.

For I know the thoughts that I think toward you, saith the Lord, thoughts of peace, and not of evil, to give you an expected end. Then shall ye call upon me, and ye shal go and pray unto me, and I will hearken unto you. And ye shall seek me, and find me, when ye shall search for me with all your heart.—Jer. xxix, 11-13.

Saturday's Sermonette

II Kings, XIX, 14.—"And Hezekiah received the letter . . . and read it, and Hezekiah went up into the House of the Lord, and spread it before the Lord."

* * *

If trouble cometh upon thee, nor grief nor temptation cease,
Take thou thy burdened heart to the House of God where peace
And quiet reign, nor the world distract with sounds of strife,
And spread out thy burden of sorrow there before the Lord of life.
He who knoweth thy weakness, He who knoweth thy need,
Will hearken with tender pity, and give to thy prayer its meed
Of strength, and courage, and wisdom, so thou mayst rightly do.
For wisdom is promised to all men who humbly for it sue.
Tell e'en the merest detail, and bare, and open thy heart,
And the Spirit of Peace and Knowledge shall never from thee depart.
Patiently wait for His answer, and then for the length of thy days
Serene, and calm, and unshaken, the love of thy God thou shalt praise.
—Elizabeth Cameron.

If he know that he is righteous, ye know that every one that doeth righteousness is born of him. I. Jno. ii., 29.

BIG GAINS FOR THE C.N.R.

Reports from the Canadian National Railways continue to afford food for satisfaction.

The latest figures indicate a very substantial increase both in gross receipts and in net earnings.

For August of this year, in fact, the net earnings of the National system showed an increase of over 55 per cent. over the same month of last year.

The figures for the first eight months of 1928 tell the same gratifying story.

The gross receipts for that period were $170,934,671, as compared with $156,273,273.45 for the same eight-month period of 1927, while the net earnings amounted to $29,573,136.35, as against $22,122,845.66, an increase in favor of the current year of 33.68 per cent.

These big gains are putting Canada's own railway system in a financial position that a few years ago would have been thought impossible.

The monthly reports make decidedly cheery reading for the Canadian people.

A COLORFUL EDITOR.

One of the best known figures in the Canadian newspaper world has passed from the journalistic stage in the death of John R. Robinson, veteran editor of the Toronto Telegram.

John R. Robinson was a colorful personality, with an editorial style that was thoroughly characteristic of the man himself.

His short, crisp paragraphs in the editorial column of the Telegram, with their tendency to repeat striking words and phrases, and their tendency to stress certain names, were unusual in their structure, but they carried a punch and they were read, which, after all, is high praise for any editorial.

Mr. Robinson, more than any one individual, helped to make the Telegram an unique newspaper with a color and an individuality all its own.

He contributed much to Canadian journalism, and his passing will be regretted by newspaper men in all parts of the country, as well as by the readers of his beloved paper and the host of personal friends who knew and loved him.

IS YOUR CHILD SAFE?

Parents of Peterborough children who have not yet been innoculated against diphtheria are reminded of the fact that an opportunity is being provided next week to have this protection supplied without cost.

Children below the school age and young children in attendance at school who have not been immunized are eligible to receive the benefit of this safeguard against diphtheria, and in view of the most satisfactory results that have been attained by the innoculation both here and elsewhere, there should be a quick response to the invitation.

It is confidently believed that diphtheria would be practically wiped out in Peterborough were there a general compliance with the advice of health officers in regard to immunization.

Hundreds of Peterborough children have the satisfaction of knowing that they are protected against a dangerous disease that formerly claimed many lives.

There is no reason why every child in the city should not have the same protection.

It is offered without cost to the parents, and should be accepted by all who have not yet been innoculated.

HELP THE RAYBESTOS CLUB.

It would be a pity indeed were financial obstacles to prevent the Raybestos baseball club from winning the intermediate championship of the Province.

The difficulty of meeting the expenses involved in a game or a series with Copper Cliff, the Northern winners, threatens to rob the local team of the laurels, just as they were within their reach.

In this crisis the City Council is in a position to greatly assist in solving the problem.

If the usual charge for the use of James Stevenson Park were waived on this occasion and the grounds placed at the disposal of the Raybestos club without the 15 per cent. of the gross receipts that is usually paid, being demanded, the difficulty of financing the final series for the provincial championship would be materially decreased.

The Raybestos club has given Peterborough much valuable advertising during the season, and the capture of the Ontario honors would add to the fame of this city as an athletic centre.

In view of the situation The Examiner is confident that the citizens generally would support the waiving of any charges for the use of this city property by a city team that is close to a championship.

QUEBEC'S ROAD POLICY.

Quebec, now the largest of the Canadian Provinces, had the reputation at one time of lagging behind in administrative modernity and efficiency. Whatever truth this reproach may have contained in earlier days, little or nothing remains to justify its continuance. To-day Quebec is in the van, not the rear, conspicuously so in the matter of its roads and highways. An enlightened policy of construction and betterment, along with care in upkeep and general improvement, is attracting an increasing number of tourists from across the border and from other Canadian Provinces. Visitors find a growing charm, not alone in the beauty of its natural scenery, but even more in its romantic history and its quaint, old-world flavor. Its Government has been quick to perceive and instant to cultivate the value of the tourist business, and year after year has labored to strengthen the lure of Quebec to the stranger outwith its borders.

From the latest semi-monthly bulletin of the Roads Department we see that the campaign of road embellishment begun and carried on by the Minister in charge is now at its height and that public opinion in the process is entirely in accord with his plans. Already a considerable sum of money has been spent on work intended to increase the picturesque note of the highways, mainly by the planting of trees. Several municipalities, the bulletin reports, have followed suit. In a few weeks, indeed, the department will have completed the planting of trees on the highways that started in the spring, and the hope is expressed that the public will fall into line. The proprietors of land bordering the highways or an improved road are told that if each were to plant two or three trees in front of his property and clean up the grounds surrounding his buildings, the result would be pleasing and the Province assured of a new attraction. Thus the beauty of the roads would be enhanced to the great benefit of the motorist.

Nor has the Quebec Roads Department been less insistent on the advisability of reducing accidents and the risk of accidents. The bulletin acquaints its readers with the fact that from the opening of the tourist season, the Minister of Roads has never ceased to draw the attention of motorists to the question of accidents on the roads. Notwithstanding his warnings, an unusual number of serious accidents occurred during the season now closing. Because of this ever-present danger, the Hon. Mr. Perron urges motorists to use every precaution and reminds them that rain will make the roadways more slippery and, consequently, more dangerous. Therefore, drivers are cautioned to avoid all excessive speed and distractions, to be sober, and to respect the rules, particularly at railway crossings.

The reason for this last counsel is apparent when the statement is made that statistics show 95 per cent. of all accidents are due to carelessness. Were every driver to follow the rules strictly, the bulletin says, road accidents would become a thing of the past. Motorists also have their attention called to a table, issued by the Ottawa Auto Club, giving the number of feet per second covered by a moving automobile, travelling at various rates of speed. Thus at 15 miles an hour it covers 22 feet per second; at 20 miles, 29 feet; at 25 miles, 36 feet; at 30 miles, 44 feet; at 35 miles, 54 feet; at 40 miles, 58 feet, and at 45 miles, 66 feet. In the case of a motorist travelling at 35 miles an hour, who sees an obstacle fifty feet ahead, he has only one second to act and prevent an accident. Drivers who study these figures cannot but convince themselves both of the peril of driving too fast and of the necessity of watching the road for possible danger.—St. Thomas Times-Journal.

GAMBLING.

There is certainly something in the human make-up which impels a man to take a chance. Unfortunately quite frequently he is gambling with money which he has no right to spend and which he cannot afford to lose. In fact, it is the man who cannot afford to lose who is usually the most persistent gambler. Travelling shows and midways usually have a number of concessions which make the most of this weakness. The one here last week was no exception, and while every effort was made by the police and fair officials to check the gambling, there were many, many young men and some older ones who paid anything from a dollar or two to twenty and thirty dollars to learn that the gambler on the outside of the wheel has very little chance to win. Some of these places were watched for an hour or more, and a casual check-up made on what was happening. This indicated that very, very few people carried away any money, the big winner being an individual who turned up at about twenty minutes or half-hour intervals and was quite possibly a "capper" for the game. One such booth was raided by the police, its operator fined and closed up, but there were others on which the police could not interfere. This is not at all unusual as, of course, gambling of this kind are usually prepared to make a sudden shift from money to cigarettes or some other small article as prizes when a constable comes in sight. In this way it is very difficult to curb these games, and about the only way it can be done is for the police to demand that the games be closed on pain of closing the whole midway if the order is not obeyed. Such an action is, of course, very drastic and apt to embarrass the Fair Board quite considerably, but in future it would be advisable for the Fair Board to have a distinct understanding in their contract with whatever shows they engage for the midway that such games are to be barred out. They are seldom fair and even when they are the percentage is so large against the player that it is merely throwing money away. The law is very peculiar in its ruling regarding this kind of thing. The Criminal Code, for instance, while prohibiting wheels of fortune and like games, makes special exception for agricultural fairs, which means that the hands of the police are to a great extent tied. There has been much criticism around town of the police in this matter, but it is unfair criticism as the officers were unable to do anything. The only way they could get anything on the operators of these games on which to make a charge stick was to find that the games or wheels were absolutely crooked in themselves and that, as can readily be seen, is a bit difficult if not impossible since all the officers were spotted men and an army of "cappers" looking for them all the time. Until the law is changed the only way in which this gambling can be curbed is by the directors of fall fairs, such as the one here, making a strict rule and seeing that it is enforced. Lindsay is not alone in suffering from this trouble, for since the amendment was passed in 1925 permitting these gambling devices every fair has had to deal with the problem. Public opinion is strongly against such practices, and most fair boards are taking action to clean up the matter. It is a difficult problem since these games are drawing cards for the fair, and to close them out entirely means a loss, but since they are usually crooked and encourage other crooks to hang around, it is time they were eliminated.—Lindsay Post.

EDITORIAL NOTES AND COMMENT.

Bishop Lloyd is at least arousing some interest in the question of immigration.

The result of recent murder trials in Ontario should do something to offset Mr. Robbins' opinion that there is disregard for law in this country.

"One way to fool the 'pants burglar' would be to let the wife get there first."—The Globe. Well, doesn't she?

Delegates to the Good Roads Association convention favor the "lifting" of licenses as the only satisfactory way of dealing with the reckless driver. And everybody but the said r. d. will agree with that view.

The theory that bank mergers are the concern only of the shareholders is one that should be popular with the banks—if not with the public.

When better boys are built the Bowmanville Farm will build them, may yet be adopted as the slogan of that institution.

GOD'S MINUTE.

Thy Word have I hid in mine heart, that I might not sin against Thee. Blessed art Thou, O Lord: teach me Thy statutes.—Ps. 119: 11-12.

Dear Father in Heaven, we come to Thee in love and praise for all the blessings we enjoy; for the food we have to eat, for the water we drink, the raiment we wear and the fresh air we breathe. We thank Thee for our home, our loved ones, and that we live in a land and an age when we can worship Thee openly. We thank Thee for the open Bible, but above all else we thank Thee that Thou didst lead us out of darkness into light through the gift of Thy dear Son.

O Father, help us to become more worthy of Thy watchful care and love. Keep us in the straight and narrow path. Bless us in our plans and purposes, but defeat us in them if they lead us from Thee. Help us to let our light shine, and give us souls for our hire, in the name of Jesus we ask it. Amen.

A Thought

A YOUTHFUL VIEW

We cannot possibly do without the experience and, to some extent, the control of mature years, yet I do believe that somehow we have erred in not taking into the expression and practice of religion, the experience, incentives, impulses, and natural temperament of youth. Young people are feeling it, and so are old people.

During my experience as schoolmaster, I came quite definitely to the conclusion that if you compare the influences that have worked on boys, the strongest are those which come from each other. I believe the young will always have a tremendous influence upon one another at first. Secondly, youth has its own particular contribution, which we have not appropriated, to be put side by side with other contributions to the power of religious life.

TORONTO LIVESTOCK.

TORONTO, Sept. 29.—With Monday's run augmented by 1,000 stale cattle, bids were reluctantly placed on butchers' cattle at considerably lower prices. A draggy trade existed, remaining prevalent all week.

Choice heavy steers were cut 50c cwt., the best selling at $11.75. Light butcher steers and heifers of choice quality bringing $10 to $11.25. The most drastic cut was on medium and common steers and heifers. Their sales were made between $8 and $9.75.

Feeder steers reflected an easier feeling and were turned over at $9.50 to $10.25, with good quality yearling heifers from $8.75 to $9.25.

Cows and bulls maintained a firm market. All grades were readily disposed of with canners and cutters from $4 to $5.25. Heavy bulls brought $7.50 to $8.

Medium baby beeves sold at $11.50 to $12.50. The demand was for choice at $14 to $15.

The calf trade was slack. Choice veal sold at $15 to $15.50, and grassers $7 to $8.

Closing prices on choice lambs were $11.50 to $12. A desire to obtain heavy lambs at a reduction was in evidence. Sales of choice light butcher sheep were made at $5 to $6.

Hogs dropped 50c cwt. this week. Saturday's loading bids are out at $11.50 f.o.b. selects and $10.50 for Monday loading.

Total receipts for week: Cattle 6588, calves 1,210, hogs 2,564, sheep 7,427.

CHICAGO GRAIN

CHICAGO, Sept. 29.— (Canadian Press).—With ocean freight bookings of grain fom North America reported yesterday as the largest in months, wheat prices here showed an upward tendency at times.

Good export business in bread wheat from Canada and in durum wheat from the U.S. was noted.

Closing quotations on wheat were irregular, ¼ cent net lower to ½ cent advance. Corn finished ¼ cent off to ⅝ to ¾ cent up, oats at ⅛ cent decline to ⅝ cent gain, and provisions varying from 22 cents set back to a rise of 20 cents.

An outstanding feature in the wheat trade was the buying support which developed on price breaks both here and at Liverpool. Meanwhile, bullish reports about Russian famine prospects continued to receive notice. In addition authoritative advices were at hand that frost damage to Canadian wheat is proving heavier than was expected, and that there is now no doubt of a substantial part of the Canadian crop being low grade. In this connection, it was pointed out that only 17 cars in yesterday's Canadian gradings were sufficiently good to rank as number 1 northern.

Intimations that new wheat in Argentina would be available by the end of November failed to exert any decided bearish influence. Something of a counter balance was word that the South Australian government had proclaimed a crisis because of strike riots by dock workers at Adelaide. Another sustaining factor was a comprehensive summary issued here from milling sources stating that movement of domestic spring wheat is not of a volume in keeping with the estimated size of the crop. Further talk was also current that farmers in the northwest are storing their wheat in anticipation of higher prices.

Bigger export sales of corn stimulated greater activity and strength yesterday in the market for corn future deliveries. The new crop months advanced notwithstanding estimates from a leading field expert that despite frosts 90 percent. of the crop has been benefited, and will turn out to be of excellent quality.

September corn showed notable weakness at times as a result of selling by scattered holders, oats held firm owing to smallness of receipts and of country offerings.

Provisions were somewhat influenced by upturn in the values of hogs.

MONTREAL GRAIN AND PRODUCE

MONTREAL, Sept. 29.— (Canadian Press).— The foreign demand for Canadian grain here yesterday was again dull and little business was transacted. A feature of the local cash grain trade was the improved demand from the lower provinces for Canadian Western oats and sales of some fair sized lots were made for shipment to Newfoundland. The local demand was fair and values were firm.

A moderate amount of business was done in spring and winter wheat grades of flour and prices were steady.

The market for millfeed was fairly active with a firm undertone. A steady trade was done in standard grades of rolled oats and prices ruled firm.

The inquiry for fresh and storage eggs continued good and values were strong. The receipts wer 2,771 cases.

The trade in imported beans was quiet but the undertone was steady. Small lots of choice white handpicked were sold at $4.20 to $4.40 per bushel, ex-store, and car lots to arrive were quoted at $4 per bushel, ex-track.

The butter market continued dull and the receipts were 1,633 packages.

An easier feeling prevailed in the cheese market and prices were reduced a fraction. The receipts were 10,047 boxes.

BUTTER AND EGGS

TORONTO, Sept., 29. —In the wholesale and jobbing sections of the butter market this week there has been an absence of activity owing to limited demand from all sources for finest creamery. Prices since Monday last have occupied a steady position, and dealers yesterday reported the market unchanged and quiet. The range for finest creamery is well in line with the previous week, with quotations ruling at 33½c to 38¾c per pound for No. 1 pasteurized creamery solids, unpasteurized and second-grade butter fluctuating narrowly from day to day between a spread of from 38½c to 38¾c per pound. Butter storage figures in the United States and Canada continue unfavorable with last year, but this condition seems to be discounted in the decline because more buying interest is being shown in "future" markets. Receipts this week from country creameries to the local market have been light and domestic consumptive demand only fair, with indications of a better inquiry for "over the counter" requirements as weather gets cooler, when it is expected trade will become more stable.

The Sign of The Three

We boys felt kind o' proud of ourselves for finding out that the three new fellows of the Pelham gang were the ones who had stolen Judge Granbery's brass doorknobs last week. We found their secret place where they kept their stuff, in the hollow tree stump on the island, and in it were not only the brass doorknobs, but a lot of other brass and copper things that they had taken from houses in our town. They knew we had found them out, and they disappeared because they were afraid the Sheriff would catch them. We were glad they had gone. The boys in our club all felt that they would have given us a lot of trouble if they had stayed around here. And I guess I was the one most glad about it, because I knew those three new fellows would be sore at us for finding out their secret, and whenever trouble comes around this old river bank, I'm the one who has to figure out a way to fight it.

So I was feeling pretty happy when I started down for the river on Monday, after school, but when I saw all the boys standing outside our old clubhouse, I began to wonder what the trouble was.

"Go inside, Hawkins," said our captain; "I told all the fellows to let things alone until you came."

I went inside without saying a word. I wondered what had happened, and what I would see in the clubhouse. On the table was a piece of paper, stuck to the table with a long knife. I walked over to the table and read the writing on the paper. Here's what I read:

"You scamps think you can snitch on us, but you ain't gettin' away with it. We are watching you, and we will get you yet. Watch out for the next visit of THE THREE."

I read it over, and then looked up. All the boys had come in behind me, and were waiting for me to say something about it. "What does it mean, Hawkins?" asked our captain.

"Some trick of the Pelham fellows to scare us, I guess."

"Oh, no!" says Bill Darby. He walked over and pulled out the knife that was plugging the note to the table top. "Some frogsticker, this is!" he exclaimed. "I remember seeing this knife once before, don't you, Hawkins?"

"Yeah," I said, nodding. "I saw it in the belt of one of those three new Pelham fellows. It's plain to me—those three fellows have not gone. They are around here, somewhere—they've been in this very place. They put that note there, and stuck it to the table with the knife to show us they are bent on paying us back."

"Well," says our captain, "we can look for a peck of trouble then. They are pretty tough customers."

But I told them not to worry abou it, and they all went down to the river except our captain and Bill and me—we stayed to talk it over and make some plans. "Hawkins," says our captain, "you've got to figure this thing out for us, and tell us what to do."

"I knew it!" I said. "I'll be switched if you fellows don't always give me the job. Well, let's see. Briggen and his Pelham gang must be in on this—I don't think those three new fellows would try to fight the ten of us if the Pelhams weren't going to help 'em."

"What do you think they are going to do to us?" asked our captain.

"How should I know?" I said. "They "They might burn down our clubhouse, or something like that."

"Well," said Bill, "as long as they don't take a shot at us with their rifles—"

"Don't worry!" I broke in. "No boy is fool enough to try anything that dangerous—"

"Oh, I don't know!" exclaimed Bill. "Those three fellows looked pretty tough to me."

"We should worry!" I said. "If they come every day—and leave us a souvenir as good as that knife—we have no kick coming."

But by the following day things looked serious enough. We boys all walked down to the clubhouse together after school, for we knew if we met those three wild west fellows face to face it would be best if we were in a bunch, to beat them. Bill Darby had the key and unlocked the door, and we were all anxious to see if those three fellows had sneaked in again during the night. We had left one of the windows unfastened to give them a chance, so they wouldn't have to break it or the door to get in. And the moment I saw the clubhouse I knew they had been there, because the window was open. Bill shoved open the door and led the way in, and we all pushed close behind him, but all of a sudden Bill let out a yell—"Get back! Get out! Quick!"

We tumbled backwards on top of one another, and rushed madly to the evergreen bushes that line the river path, and there we turned and waited. "Look!" whispered Bill. And we all peeped from behind the bushes toward the open clubhouse door. Out across the doorstep crawled a long black snake. It wound itself lazy-like down the steps and came right for the bushes where we stood. We all scooted out in different directions. I saw the snake crawl under the bushes and disappear in dried leaves that had been piled against them by the wind.

Then we all came back to the clubhouse. All the fellows were white as a sheet. Nobody said a word. We tiptoed around the meeting room and peeped under everything to see if there was anything else in the place.

"No souvenirs," I said; "they weren't good to us this time, were they?"

"What's this?" asked Jerry Moore, and he pointed to the back door, where a piece of cardboard was tacked up. There was some scribbling on it.

"Read it out loud, Hawkins," said our captain. So I read:

"If you fellas live to read this sign,
We might write you another line.
A terrible band of rogues are we.
You know us by THE SIGN OF THREE."

Under this was a big number three. Jerry Moore laughed after I finished reading. "Gee!" he says, "they've got a poet along with 'em." Then we all had to laugh—it was funny; I said: "Can you imagine one of those fellows trying to be a poet?" But our captain didn't see anything to laugh at. He says: "It doesn't make any difference if there is a poet among 'em, or not, putting snakes in our clubhouse is pretty mean business."

"You're right," I said, "and we've got to do something about it, now."

"Let's tell the Sheriff," says Jerry.

"No, not yet," I said; "I guess we can do our own detective work, and when we catch those three fellows, we can turn 'em over to the Sheriff for stealing that brass and copper stuff."

None of the boys cared to stay long in the clubhouse. They sat there talking, but every once in a while I would see one look under his chair, another would get up and peep behind the door, and everywhere they thought a snake might be hiding. It wasn't long until they all scooted out, one after another, and I locked up the clubhouse, leaving one window open. I was hoping those three fellows would come around again and leave me another souvenir—maybe it would be a rifle—you never can tell what fellows like that will take a notion to do next.

On Wednesday Bill Darby was coming down to the clubhouse by himself, after school, because he had to stay for missing his arithmetic lesson, and we had all gone on down before him. And when we saw him, we were all sorry we hadn't waited for him, because he was holding his handkerchief up to his head, and I could see there was something wrong.

"What's up, Bill?" I asked. But he just tried to smile—he was nearer to crying.

"They got me," he said; "they were laying for me up behind the bushes near the main road."

We took him into the clubhouse and Jerry got water and we washed the cut in his head.

"Hit me with a stone, Hawkins," he said; "all three of 'em jumped me, and then ran away."

"Which way did they go?" asked Jerry Moore, quickly.

"Down the main road toward the river," said Bill.

Jerry called a few of the fellows to go with him, and they were off.

"Now, look here, Hawkins," said our captain, "we've got to stop these three wild west fellows even if we have to go right up to the Sheriff."

"Give me another day," I told him. "Give me just enough time to do a little spy work, and see if I can't put a stop to it."

"All right, Hawkins," says our captain, "try it just once more, then."

Jerry and the bunch didn't find a trace of the three fellows. And the next day there was another note stuck on to the inside of the door with a horseshoe nail.

"That's a bum souvenir, Hawkins," laughed Jerry, pointing to the nail But I didn't feel like laughing—I was reading the scribbling on the note, and this is what it said:

"We give you boys a sample
Of the kind of fights we do.
None of you can escape us—
We will get all of you.
"THE THREE (3)"

"More poetry," says Bill Darby.

"If that's poetry I'm a Chinaman!" says Jerry Moore.

"Well, you're not a Chinaman," I said, with a laugh. But I quit fooling and told the fellows we had to look for the hiding place of those three slick workers. We did look until it got dark. I walked over to the lonesome log cabin on the Pelham side, but they were not there. Jerry searched all around the river bank and in the bushes, but he brought back no signs. Roy Dobel thought they might be in his pop's barn, or under some hay stack, but he didn't have any luck either. And when it got too dark to be out on the river bank, we all scooted for home.

On Friday we met again in the old clubhouse after school. I went inside at once to see if the Three had been there again. Yes, sir! You bet they had! I never saw such a dirty place as that meeting room—it was full of muddy footprints, all over the floor, some of them left thick mud. But we couldn't find any note or souvenir this time. So the boys got to feeling pretty spunky again, I guess, thinking that perhaps the Three fellows were going to quit their rough stuff. But I was mad at that mud on the floor. The next thought I had made me glad about it. It's a funny thing how a fellow can change his mind that quick, but I saw something in that mud which told me more than words. I picked up a piece of the mud which had undoubtedly fallen off a heel of one of their boots.

"Look!" I said to Bill Darby. "Ever see any mud like this, Bill?"

He took the mud and looked at it in the palm of his hand. "No," he says, shaking his head, "can't say as I ever did, Hawkins."

"Well," I said, "look at the color of it."

"Yeah," says Bill; "looks kind o' red, doesn't it?"

"You're right," I told him, "and there's only one place around here that I ever saw red mud—"

Bill looked at me and thought a while. Then he jumped into the air and shouted: "Sure! Cave River!"

I laughed. "Gee! You're bright, Bill," I said, "but you don't think quick enough."

Our captain came over while we were talking.

"Hawkins has found the Three fellows' hiding place," said Bill.

"No, not yet," I said; "Bill always talks before he is sure of anything, but if I'm not mistaken, we will catch those three outlaw fellows before sundown tomorrow."

All the boys pulled their chairs up to the table and we had a long talk then. They wanted to go right down to Cave River and catch the Three at once, but I said: "Fat chance! It's gettin' too dark and we'd better wait; tomorrow is Saturday, and we will have all day to do it in. We will make those Three know what kind of fellows they've been fooling with, and they are going to find out they're not so smart, after all."

Jerry Moore was all excited. I could see he was tickled to death.

"You're a detective, Hawkins," he says. "And one of those Three fellows is a poet—Gee! I want to meet him—just for a few minutes." And as he walked away, I saw Jerry double up his fists.

"Throw up your hands and stay where you are."

That's what we heard, the first thing when we paddled into Cave River on Saturday afternoon. We lost most all of our canoe paddles. Every one of the other boys threw up their hands and let go of the paddles and there they went, floating down out into the big river. But I wasn't so scared, myself, I kept my hands tight around the butt of my paddle—we could see the Three fellows standing on the flat table rock in the cave, shining their electric lights at us from their belts.

"Who are you goin' to shoot?" I asked, as I pushed my canoe over and jumped up on the rock. The Three started for me at once. "Stand back!" I shouted. "There's the Sheriff in back of you—coming through the back entrance of this cave—"

The moment they turned to look around all our boys were up beside me on the flat rock. The Three fellows didn't see anybody in back of them, but when they turned, it was too late. We were on top of them as quick as lightning—we had their guns—and the tables were turned.

Then we took them back to our clubhouse. They didn't act like outlaws. They were the softest boys I had ever seen. I kind o' looked for them to put up a pretty good fight, but I guess they were afraid we were too many for them. They were that smart, anyhow. We all took our places around the long pine table in our clubhouse. Jerry made the Three fellows stand up in front, where we could see them. I got out a writing book and pencil.

"Now," I said, "which one of you fellows is a poet?"

The one with the sour look on his face stepped up. The sour look changed to a grin.

"I'm a poet," he says.

"You're a mighty bum poet," says Jerry Moore.

Right away the sour look came back to the boy's face as he turned to Jerry. But I said: "You three boys been acting pretty bad around here where you don't belong, and the Sheriff is coming for you, and you're going to jail for stealing brass and copper things. Step up here and give me your names."

The sour-face fellow looked at me. "You're not goin' to write our names in that book, are you?" he asked.

"Sure," I said; "we keep a record of all the fellows we turn over to the Sheriff."

The poet fellow didn't say anything for a while; he turned around and looked at his two pals, and then he turned to me and said: "Listen, don't send those two fellas to the Sheriff—they been good friends to me, andthey didn't do anything, it was me—I did all that note writing and put that snake in here and bumped one of your fellas on the head with a rock—send me to the Sheriff, and let those other fellas go back home, won't you?"

But before I could answer him the other two walked up to the table. "No, he didn't do that job," said one of 'em, pointing to Bill's head; "it was us two who bumped that kid on the bean; we just been playing bandits like what we read in a book—he is just telling you he did it, so that you will let us go. But if he goes to the Sheriff, we will go with him. We promised to stick together, and we will do it."

Jerry Moore jumped up and whispered something in our captain's ear, and they motioned for me to come outside, and out we went.

"Listen, Hawkins," says Jerry, "it doesn't make any difference which one did that to Bill, they've all got to pay for it."

I said I couldn't make up my mind, we'd better ask Bill himself, so we called him outside, and asked him what he wanted us to do with those Three fellows. He just laughed and said: "My head doesn't hurt any more."

"Just what I thought," I says, and I led them back inside again. I went up to the Three and said: "Did you boys walk all the way here from the wild west?"

"Yes, sure," answered the poet; "how'd you think we come—in a balloon?"

"Oh, no," I said, with a smile; "I knew you walked, but it must have been awfully tiresome, carrying those rifles and everything, wasn't it?"

"You bet!" says the poet fellow. "They got heavier every mile we went."

"That's what I thought," I says, "so I guess you'd better walk back without 'em—we will keep them for souvenirs."

"You mean we won't be turned over to the Sheriff?" asked one of the Three.

"You won't if you start walking right away and don't stop till you get back to the wild west, where you came from."

They flew out of the door. We watched them run up the bank to the main road. We kind o' thought they would turn back into the woods again. But no! They turned to the right and took the road towards Watertown, over to the northwest. We all went back into the clubhouse.

"These are fine rifles," says Jerry.

"Yeah," I said, "but we boys haven't any right to be toting guns around here, they might go off and hurt somebody. We'll take 'em up to Doc Waters, and ask him to keep 'em for us till we want to go hunting."

Which we did.

Have YOU Joined ?

A Letter From The 'Seckatary'

Dear Club Members:

Our club certainly is growing by leaps and bounds, and every new member just thinks it is about the best ever. Our contests seem to be growing more popular than any contests whatsoever, and I guess it is because all of you members are so good writers. Well, we have a good time, anyway, and the members who keep on trying week after week are the ones who sooner or later find their names in the list of winners.

Next week let's all try to get just one new member apiece. That would double our membership in one week, if every boy and girl got one new one. Of course, some of our members will be unable to do so, because some live in far away places where every boy and girl in town already belongs to our club. But in the city where the members have many schoolmates and playmates, there is plenty of opportunity of securing a new member.

All you have to do is to tell them that they can join by filling out the membership blank that they may clip from the paper, and send it in with a stamp so that we may send them their certificate of membership and a club button. Then tell them about our contest—which this week is going to be about "A DAY IN OCTOBER." Don't forget—the title must read that way, and you may send a story or a verse or a letter, or what have you.

We all know how nice the weather is in October, even if it is a bit chilly at night. The trees are turning red, and all the varied colors make them very pretty. I don't think there is a prettier place in the world than Peterborough in October. Little Lake cemetery is a blaze of color, and every street has variety, as the different kinds of trees change at different times and with all kinds of different shades. It should not be hard to find something to write about! Don't forget that Hallowe'en comes in October, and I hope the Seckatary Hawkins Club is going to have a real merry time at The Examiner party that night.

Our Weekly Meeting

The meeting will now come to order

The first item is the announcement of the winner of the prize for the best story on "Birthday." It goes to Margaret Lancaster, R.R. 1, Birdsall, who sent in a splendid story with her membership application. That's the way to do it!

There were several other good letters and stories, some of which we have room to present to the meeting.

This week, the Seckatary wrote a business letter to every member, asking for new members, and a lot of boys and girls helped out by getting their chums to join. A list of the members who have joined since the last list was printed is given to the Club on this page, so that every member will know who belongs.

Notice is given that members should wear their pins every day, and any member who has lost his pin may get another by sending a two-cent stamp to the Seckatary.

Anyone who hasn't joined the Club yet may do so by filling out the application form and sending it to the Seckatary. A Club pin and a membership card are sent at once. Any member who gets one new member is given a picture of the Seckatary, and six new members win a big picture of the gang. Members are eligible to take part in the weekly competitions, for which splendid adventure books are given as prizes.

Now we will hear from some members in this district and in far away places. This is a big club, with members in all parts of the world, and it is very interesting to read what these members have to say.

Here is the letter that won the prize this week. Don't you think Margaret's story is just great?

Dear Seck.:

I have decided I must be a member of your jolly club. I saw one of your prizes and I would like to have one too. Here is my story:

Betty's Birthday.

Betty Brown lived beside the lake. When her birthday came in September she invited all her school-chums to come to the beach at night.

When the guests arrived Betty's father was heaping firewood under a big kettle. When this was fixed he put a match against the shavings and it all blazed up around the kettle.

Betty and her friends had great fun playing "Old Dusty Miller," "London Bridge" and "Jacob and Rachel."

Soon steam began to circle from th kettle. Everyone sniffed the air and then cried, "Corn, it's a corn-roast."

"That's what it is," laughed Mr. Brown.

When it was cooked he lifted it from the fire and took the lid off. After the cobs had cooled the merry group soon ate them all. Then everyone sang, For she's a jolly Good Fellow wished Betty "many happy returns of the day."

Yours fair and square,
MARGARET LANCASTER,
R.R. 1, Birdsall, Ont.

And here we have a letter and poem from our little poet member at Lakefield, Ada M. Riel. Ada won a prize some time ago, and you will see that she liked her prize.

Dear Seck.:

I have very little time to write to the club, but now I am taking time.

I have read your prize book which I received and enjoyed every word of it.

I am entering on this week's competition entitled Birthday. My motto is, If at first you don't succeed, try try again.

Birthdays.

Of all the noble birthdays
Celebrated east or west;
We hold with pomp and glory
Our Saviour's birthday best.

Then in the sunny month of May
When the trees and grass are green,
Comes the great Victoria Day
The birthday of our late queen.

Then July the first, another,
A birthday bright and warm;
The birth of our Dominion,
It holds for us a charm.

Then the birthdays of our parents,
We watch for them each year;
And plan our little presents,
For those we love so dear.

My birthday comes
In May each year,
And when it comes,
It brings good cheer.

—ADA RIEL.

R.R. 4,
Lakefield.

The next is from Walter Ward, who seems to have lots of fun on his birthday.

Dear Seck.—

I am writing a little story on Birthday, which follows:

Birthday.

A birthday comes once a year. Some boys and girls have birthday parties to celebrate their birthday. Others have just a birthday cake. Boys and girls have lots of fun giving paddiewhacks and greetings.

Hoping this story will win a prize,
Yours fair and square,
WALTER WARD,
236 McDonnel street,
Peterborough.

And next is a letter from Irene Vivash, whose birthday comes near Easter. I think it's really nice to get a big basket of Easter eggs for a birthday present.

Dear Seck:

I am writing a letter to tell you about my birthday. I was eleven years old on April 4, 1928.

The first thing I saw when I opened my eyes on the morning of my birthday was a blue basket tied with a big blue ribbon. In the centre of the basket was a big chocolate rooster and all around her were small Easter eggs. You see my birthday comes quite near Easter and so I guess that is why I received that basket. I think everybody likes birthdays, I do. I will close now and wait to see if I win one of your adventure books as I am very fond of reading your adventure stories. If I don't win one I will try again, for that is the best way, I think. Don't you?

Yours fair and square,
IRENE VIVASH.
526 Roger street,
Peterborough.

And next comes Lloyd Perdue, who has brothers and sisters who are awfully good to him, giving him birthday presents.

Dear Seck,

On my last birthday I was ten years old. I have a lot of brothers and sisters that always give me a present of some kind, so you see I always look forward to my birthday.

Yours fair and square,
LLOYD PERDUE.
128 Sutherland street,
Peterborough.

Here is a nice letter from Robert Young, who wants a pin for his new suit. We're certainly glad to have Robert in the Club, and his pin has been sent to him.

Dear Seckatary:

Thanks for putting my name in the paper. I had a birthday cake. I had a good time for my birthday. I am getting a new suit from Eaton's. I haven't got any home-work to do, so I thought I would write my letter tonight. We are going to have a game of football on Saturday. I hope there isn't too many letters yet there for you won't be able to read them all. Have you got any buttons to wear? If you do may I please have one to wear on my new suit? It will soon be time to go to bed and I don't want to go. I guess I will have to stop writing now because it is getting late.

Hoping you have a good-time.
ROBERT YOUNG.
529 Chamberlain street,
Peterborough.

We welcome a little nine-year-old member from the Queen City of the West—and we are glad to have him in our club:

Dear Seck:

I am a little boy 9 years old. I am very much interested in the club and would like to become a member. I sure do enjoy those stories. I hope this letter wins a book, but if it doesn't I will try again.

A future member,
MARK DOWLING, JR.,
2025 Madison Rd., Cincinnati, O.

Mary had a little lamb, and so has Ralph—one of our loyal members from the State of Michigan:

Dear Seck:

I won a book in the spring time contest. I must have read it over about ten or twelve times; it is a good story. The Gray Ghost sure is a smart guy. I have a dog; his name is Rover. He is black and white. I have a little lamb, too.

Your stories in the paper are sure good.

Yours truly,
RALPH SCHEFFLER,
Stephenson, Mich.

We are all glad to have Marion Smith as a member. I'll be looking for your entry in the contest this week, Marion.

Dear Seck:

I have read the stories you have printed in the paper for a long time, so I thought I would join your club. I will try and write a story about some of your contests. I am 10 years old.

Yours fair and square,
MARION SMITH,
473 Bonaccord street,
Peterborough.

And so we are about to pull down the curtain again and adjourn till next week same time, and on this same page. Don't forget the prizes in the contest—you might be one of the lucky ones, so read the rules and then get busy. If you have not already written a letter, send one along with your contest entry. But do, DO something.

'Bye, till next week.

Yours fair and square,

Seckatary Hawkins

PASSWORD

"Blue Ribbon" was our password last week because our contest title was Fall Fair. It was so easy, everybody wrote. Well, make up your mind to work hard at this one:

IDONTMEETRAIN

No, it has nothing to do with what kind of weather I hope to meet when I start out on my Saturday hike, but if you will change the letters around and make up your mind that you will not stop until you get it right, you will find it easy to spell a word that means a quality every one of us must have to start a job and see it through to the finish. Now, try it.

PLAN SERVICE FOR VICTIMS

Simple Funeral Rites to Be Held Over Graves of Storm Dead.

2,300 IN FLORIDA.

WEST PALM BEACH, Fla., Sept. 28 (Canadian Press).—Plans were made to-day for a simple funeral service to be held on Sunday for Florida's 2,300 storm dead. Members of the City Ministerial Union met yesterday and appointed eight of that body to conduct a service which will be held over the graves of more than 700 storm victims buried here.

SPAN OF FIVE HUNDRED FEET IN BIG STEEL BRIDGE

One of the most important features of the new Tyne bridge, constructed at a cost of nearly $5,000,000, is the main span, 500 feet long, says Popular Mechanics Magazine. This is said to be the longest in Great Britain. The bridge has been erected to care for the ever-increasing traffic between Newcastle and Gateshead on the south bank of the river.

The Woman Driver

I like to drive with Champion Spark Plugs because I know I'll not be annoyed with engine trouble due to faulty spark plugs.

Champion is the better spark plug because it has an exclusive silli-manite insulator specially treated to withstand the much higher temperatures of the modern high-compression engine. Also a new patented solid copper gasket-seal that remains absolutely gas-tight under high compression. Special analysis electrodes which assure a fixed spark-gap under all driving conditions.

Beginning October 4th and every Thursday thereafter the Champion Sparkers will broadcast over the Blue Network of the National Broadcasting Company from 6:30 to 9:00 p. m. Eastern Standard Time.

ected under the terms of a bequest by Senator Fulford. It stands close to the Fulford Athletic Grounds and is operated under the guidance of the General Hospital.

In addition, Mrs. Arthur C. Hardy, daughter of the Hon. Mr. Fulford, and her husband, Senator Hardy, have been loyal supporters of many Brockville institutions, notably the General Hospital, the Children's Aid Society and the Brockville Rifles Regimental Band. The shelter of the Children's Aid Society was a gift from Mr. and Mrs. Hardy, who have repeatedly come to the assistance of other community organizations, and not long since erected a handsome pavilion at St. Lawrence Tourist Park to facilitate accommodation of the public of that resort. Mrs. Fulford and Mr. and Mrs. Hardy have also been supporters of the Muskoka Free Hospital, and during the war contributed to the equipment of the University of Toronto General Hospital, the Duchess of Connaught's Canadian Hospital at Cliveden, the Leeds and Grenville Overseas Battalion and other units.

The founder of the Fulford family was a United Empire Loyalist who settled in the township of Elizabethtown, a few miles west of Brockville, on the shore of the St. Lawrence, the farm still being in the possession of his descendants.

LYRICS OF LIFE

THE CROWN OF MORNING

Put down the cross, take up the crown,
Wait not for resurrection's morn,
For every man who lays him down
At night tomorrow is re-born.
Ah, yes, new vistas they will find
Who seek new vistas in the mind,
Who shut their eyes to thoughts of ill,
As men may do, if men but will.

Put down the cross of yesterday,
Take up the morning's crown of gold;
Whatever joys have passed away,
What joys today today may hold!
If yesterday was hard to bear,
Then drop the burden, leave it there,
Whatever day has had of loss,
When night is here, put down the cross.

Take up the crown when morning breaks
Open your windows to the sun,
Remember, when the morning wakes,
That night and yesterday are done.
Each morning new occasion brings
To think new thoughts, to do new things.
Resume the smile, forget the frown,
Put down the cross, take up the crown.

CULTIVATOR SAWS THE SOIL FOR BETTER PLANTING

Applying the principle of sawing to the soil, an Indiana man has devised an implement that plows, disks, harrows and rolls the ground, all in one operation, says Popular Mechanics Magazine. Large revolving blades with sawlike teeth are said to cut into the ground to a depth of ten inches, pulverizing it and, at the same time, destroying weeds and rodents.

NEW PAPER MONEY TO BE AGED TO PROLONG WEAR

The life of paper bank notes is about eight months, but this might be increased to a year, Treasury officials declare, if the paper were aged properly before being circulated, says Popular Mechanics Magazine. The process delays cracking and tearing. Between 1917 and 1920, the calls for currency were so heavy that the Bureau of Printing and Engraving was unable to keep the pace and new money was issued without the usual aging period. The new notes, which are to be about two-thirds the size of the present ones, are to be thoroughly aged before being issued, the Treasury Department reports. They will resemble those in use in the Philippines.

UNCLE WIGGILY

To-day's Bedtime Story

UNCLE WIGGILY AND PAPA KAT

"Something will have to be done about it," mewed Papa Kat one day just as Uncle Wiggily was hopping past the house where the three Kat children lived—Tommie, Joie and Kittie.

"Are you speaking of the weather?" asked the rabbit gentleman.

"No, though something ought to be done about that, too," went on Papa Kat. "But what I was speaking of was my catnip. It's been taken again."

"Do you mean by burglars?" asked Uncle Wiggily, for he could see that Papa Kit was quite excited.

"No, I don't believe any burglars took my catnip," said the father of the Kat children. "Though the Bob Cat would take it if he could find it. But this time one of the family is to blame."

"Is it Tommie, Joie or Kittie?" asked Uncle Wiggily, who was sorry to think that some of his playmates among the animal children had been naughty.

"No, it isn't any of the grown-up Kats," said Papa Kat. "Tommie, Joie and Kittie are off to school and the Lady Mouse Teacher gives them lessons by which they learn not to take catnip that doesn't belong to them."

"Well, then," asked Uncle Wiggily, slow and solemn like, "who took your catnip?"

"It was our newest little one—Pussy Kat," was the answer. "At first I could hardly believe it, but her mother watched and saw Pussy take some of the catnip that I hid away. Something must be done about it! This isn't the first time Pussy has taken my catnip."

"Dear me!" said Uncle Wiggily, thinking hard.

The rabbit knew all about catnip, which is a plant that grows in the fields. Sometimes mothers give it to sick babies. And pussy cats are very fond of catnip. Even lions and tigers, who, after all, are only big cats, will smile for joy and turn somersaults in their circus cages if you give them a bunch of catnip.

Papa Kat often went out to the fields to gather catnip to have in the house in case any of his family were to be taken ill. And often he gave Tommie, Joie or Kittie a little for a treat. Catnip to pussies is as much of a treat as ice-cream is to you.

"But Mother and I have taught the older children never to take catnip unless we give it to them," said Papa Kat. "Only Pussy doesn't know any better. So as soon as I bring catnip home and put it away she smells it out and eats all she can."

"Did you ever try hiding your catnip?" asked Uncle Wiggily.

"Indeed I have," mewed Mr. Kat. "I hid it under the piano and back of the clock, but Pussy found it each time."

"Where did you hide it last?" asked the rabbit.

"I hid it in the pantry, back of the box of mustard," said Mr. Kat. "I thought surely Pussy would keep away from the mustard. Well, she didn't take any of the hot stuff, but she did eat nearly all my catnip. So I don't know what to do. I must have catnip in the house and yet I can't keep it where Pussy can't find it."

"I must help you discover a new hiding place for it," said Uncle Wiggily. "It will be an adventure for me to do that."

"I wish you would," said Papa Kat. "I'll go gather some fresh catnip now and I'll let you hide it."

When Papa Kat came home after pulling off some catnip leaves, Uncle Wiggily was waiting.

"Where's Pussy?" whispered the rabbit gentleman.

"Out on the porch asleep," whispered Papa Kat.

"Then I'll hide the catnip here," said Mr. Longears and he stuffed it in a paper-bag and put the bag in the corner of the room in plain sight.

"Oh, that will never do!" mewed Papa Kat. "Pussy will be sure to see it or smell it there the first thing. Why, even a baby fly could see where you have hidden the catnip."

"Yes, maybe," chuckled Mr. Longears. "We'll see if Pussy can find it. Sometimes when you put things in plain sight they're harder to find than if you hid them inside the piano. Wait until Pussy wakes up and we'll see what happens."

Why We Do What We Do.

WHY WE ARE FASCINATED BY POWER

By Mehran K. Thomson, Ph.D.
(Author, The Springs of Human Action)

Power is fascinating. Each expression of power has its peculiar charm. Every form and manifestation of power excites interest in the human breast.

We are fascinated by power primarily because it indicates success from the biological and evolutionary point of view.

Superior force and power always win over inferior force and power in the same category. This is not equivalent to saying that might makes right or that might always wins. Might in this sense is a power that has to reckon with other forms of power such as moral forces which may more than offset the sheer brute force minus the moral quality that is so essential in building up a fighting morale.

But if we stick to any specific type of power we find that the superior force always wins. This is the basis for survival and supremacy in the struggle for life. Other things being equal the animal that is best adapted under the given conditions wins over the one less favored in that respect.

In this sense being fascinated by power is the same as being fascinated by life and the desire to live.

We all like to be on the winning side, especially when it comes to winning life itself and the opportunity to add to the enjoyment of that life by additional opportunities and capacities.

Power means the self expanded. The desire for life is strong in all of us, but the desire to live the expanded life is stronger still. It is more of the same thing and can't help being correspondingly strong by the very nature of the case. If we love life we are bound to love a fuller expression of that life.

Our enjoyment of power is possible only because consciously and unconsciously we identify ourselves with it and geta thrilling sense of elation and expansion.

We are fascinated by power because the more of it we have the greater our sense of self importance, the more thoroughly we are alive and the more truly do we experience and express the most fundamental urge that is in us.

Why do you do what you do? Write Dr. Thomson, care of this paper, and send stamped envelope for reply.

Tuberculosis.

The number of deaths from tuberculosis per thousand population is steadily decreasing each year. In 1912 the number of deaths per 100,000 was 130, and the number has gradually decreased until the latest censuses have shown a reduction to 75.7 per 100,000. This steady decrease in the number of deaths is probably due to improved sanitary measures that are now being employed throughout the world, and to a better understanding by the general public as to good foods.

The anti-tuberculosis societies have been of much value in spreading information about this disease and in teaching people to avoid becoming overly tired. It is likely that the number of deaths from this disease will be still further reduced as the information about how to build and maintain health becomes more popular.

From my personal experience in diagnosing and treating thousands ofcases of tuberculosis, I have been forced to believe that the most common causes of tuberculosis are: first, an immovable diaphragm and a small chest capacity; second, becoming over tired, which lowers the resistance and permits the toxins to accumulate within the body; third, wrong eating, which permits the body to become seriously deficient in alkaline elements.

Tuberculosis of the lungs originates with foreign material which accumulates in the lungs of the sufferer. I do not believe that the bacillus of tuberculosis is a primary cause of this trouble, since I have seen many advanced cases where it has been impossible to find any trace of this bacillus.

A quick form of tuberculosis known as galloping consumption usually causes death between the first and third months Those cases which recover usually settle into chronic tuberculosis.

This disease may lurk in any portion of the body, but is most frequently found in the lungs, usually beginning in the apex or upper lobe. The onset is quite gradual and there usually is a period of months or even years of a noticeable tendency to become easily tired. This condition, accompanied by a persistent cough and large quantities of mucus should arouse suspicion and one should immediately begin a process of strengthening the body.

Night sweats often occur in the earlier stages of the disease and a patient may feel as tired in the morning as when he retires.

Tuberculosis gives plenty of warning, and one who has a tendency to have this trouble should lose no time in attempting to overcome the condition.

Questions and Answers.

Question: H. A. asks: "Can you give me a little information about St. John's Bread?"

Answer: St. John's Bread is the common name for the fruit of the Carob tree. Although a tree in form, it is a species of legume and the fruit is shaped like a bean. The trees are very beautiful and are being used to some extent along the highways. They are very productive even in arid climates. The fruit imported from Europe is of a poor quality and full of crude fibre. Large plantations are now being tried out in California and other parts of the United States. The fruit contains as high as 52% of sugar. With the process of cultivation, it is likely that this fruit will become valuable. It can be made into a very good substitute for maple syrup.

Question: Mrs. K. J. writes: "On three occasions during the past year I have been awakened from sleep with a numbness creeping over me. Have tried to call for help but could not move my lips, neither could I raise my hand or any part of my body for about a minute. I would appreciate it if you would inform me of the cause, and if there is danger of paralysis. I am thirty years old and weigh 130 pounds."

Answer: The numb attacks you have at night are probably caused from nervousness and would be classed under the name of hysteria. There is no reason for suspecting you are subject to paralysis because of this, but you certainly should have a good diagnosis made and study how to remove the cause of your nervousness.

Question: J. L. asks: "Can a loop in the colon be cured by dieting?"

Answer: A loop in the colon can be corrected through proper manipulative treatment, supplemented in some cases by certain electrical treatments. If these treatments are not taken we cannot expect diet to produce a cure, although one with a kinked or looped colon will certainly be in better health on a well-balanced diet than when eating haphazardly.

FULFORD FAMILY GIVES PLAYGROUND

Brockville Receives Fully-Equipped Ground in West End.

BROCKVILLE, Ont., Sept. 29. — (Canadian Press).—The presentation to the municipality of Brockville of a fully-equipped playground to serve the western section of the town is the latest benefaction of members of the Fulford family to whose generosity the town already owes a number of its most useful institutions. The playground occupies the site of the Fulford homestead, where Mr. and Mrs. Hiram Fulford brought up their family of eleven children, only one of whom, Mrs. Effie Fulford Hitchcock, now survives, and a portion of the original building has been incorporated in one of the shelters erected on the grounds. The latter, presented to the town by Mrs. George T. Fulford, Sr., her daughter, Mrs. Arthur C. Hardy, and her son, George T. Fulford, are to form a memorial to the late Senator Fulford, and will serve still further to perpetuate his name and memory in the town in which he spent the greater part of his life.

In his lifetime Senator Fulford was a most liberal contributor to a great variety of objects, and since his untimely death in 1905, as the result of a motor accident, his widow and the members of her family have carried on his benefactions. The Fulford Athletic Grounds were a gift to the community from Mrs. Fulford while the magnificent Fulford Memorial Home for Aged and Indigent Women, possibly the finest institution of its kind in Canada, was er-

Y.W.C.A. RALLY WELL ATTENDED

Mrs. P. Foster, Field Secretary.

PROGRAM FOLLOWS.

The annual fall rally of the Y.W.C.A. was held last evening with a very large attendance.

All assembled in the "Gym" for the first part of the program. Mrs. H. R. H. Kenner ably filled the position of chairman and introduced the speaker of the evening, Mrs. F. Foster, Field Secretary of the National Y.W.C.A.

Mrs. Foster is a woman of fine personality, and a forceful speaker, who knows the Y.W.C.A. work from the Atlantic to the Pacific. She also knows the work in other lands, and is deeply interest in the cause.

Mrs. Foster, in beginning her talk, said she was glad to be in Peterborough again after an absence of four years. She congratulated the Y.W.-C.A. here on its progress since her last visit. She knew it was progressing by the well-filled house and the number that thronged the gymnasium.

She had been asked to interpret the Y.W.C.A. The viewpoint is different now from what it once was. Thus Y.W.C.A. is a place where the body, mind and spirit are developed, with a program to suit all, a place where healthy, happy, wholesome girls and young women congregate because they desire to come there.

It was started in England in 1855 by Miss Robarts of Barnet, who with a number of other women, believe in the efficacy of prayer. During the Crimean War, the Y.W.C.A. was linked up with hospitals. The Y.W.C.A. must not be considered as only a building or a housing place. We must have a much larger conception. The building is only the shell that encompasses, the gym activities and program, only means to an end.

The Y.W.C.A. is a preventive organization rather than a remedial. Formerly they drew up the program for the Y.W.C.A. that they thought would be good for the girls, but now the program is to fill individual needs.

The Y.W.C.A. is a sharing organization which brings girls together and programs are drawn up to suit the girls. There are fourteen separate departments in Canada, with a membership of 25,000, and the total members all over the world is one and one-half million.

The girls of to-day are very different from the girls of twenty years ago. They are now willing to accept responsibility. They are trained leaders all across the continent, so that girls may have proper games. "When we find other people doing as we do we become neighbors bound together by common needs. We are also bound together by our common department and needs, and only when we accept Christ do we have abundance of life."

Mrs. Kenner moved a vote of thanks to Mrs. Foster, and the assemblage gave her a hearty clap of appreciation.

After singing "O Canada," several of Miss Littlefield's pupils gave an exhibition of aesthetic dancing, which was exceedingly good.

The following is the program:

Trepak Dance: O. Gillespie, M. Dunlop, H. Cole, R. Allan, H. Laing, H. Bradley, G. Johnson, M. Maynard, J. Best.

Song of the Sea Dance: Sand Pipers—B. Belleghem, B. Jory. Sea Gulls—M. Kingsbury, M. Harvey, P. Dawson, J. McLean, N. Scully. Mermaids—Mrs. C. Dixon, Mrs. B. Willis, V. McGinnis, M. Dunlop.

Blue Danube Dance: V. Harvey, H. Hodgens, L. Davidson, J. Allan.

Carol of Spring Dance: Mrs. B. Willis, Mrs. C. Dixon, Miss V. McGinnis.

At the conclusion of the program those who wished to inspect the building and the work of the girls were shown through the building by girl guides. The swimming pool was the next attraction. Here an impromptu program of diving and swimming was put on by Miss Littlefield's pupils. They gave an excellent demonstration of diving, especially the jack-knife diving and the dive from the balcony. Little Berta Belleghem, five years old, is a wonder. She dived in the pond like a mermaid and swam across.

The following is a list of the swimmers: V. Harvey, M. Harvey, T. Bullied, E. Bowler, G. Johnson, M. Kingsbury, B. Belleghem, J. Allan, V. Huffman, M. Mayneord, M. Dunlop, H. Bradley, M. Curry, N. Scully, A. Johnson, H. Cole, G. Comstock, R. Sutton, R. Allan.

Tea was afterwards served in the Green Room which was attractively decorated for the occasion with autumn flowers. The tea table was lovely with a silver basket of red asters and zinnias with silver handle holders and red candles. Mrs. E. Harvey and Miss M. Hamilton poured tea and assistants were members of the Social Committee and Miss E. McKay, Miss Mae Jory, Miss Jessie Deyell, Mesdames H. Foote, Wightman, and Porter. Mrs. R. J. Kidd was general convenor of arrangements.

Many dainty and useful gifts were received by the young couple, showing the high esteem in which they are held by their many friends.

On their return they will reside at Fraserville.

BIGFORD — PRICE.

A very pretty wedding was solemnized at St. James' United Church, Peterborough, on Thursday, September 27th, when Clara, youngest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Price, of Olive Avenue, Peterborough, became the bride of Clifford Bigford, the only son of Mrs. and the late Mr. W. Bigford, of Smith Falls, Ont., the Rev. J. H. Dudgeon of Peterborough officiating.

The church was beautifully decorated with flowers, ferns and autumn leaves.

The bride, who was given away by her father, wore a gown of powder blue crepe romain, ornamented with rhinestones, with gray hat of imported felt, chiffon hose and slippers to match, and wearing the groom's gift of a beautiful amber fox choker, and carried a bouquet of ophelia roses, clustered with gypsophilia.

The bride was attended by Miss Clara Wilford of Peterborough, who wore a very pretty dress of shell pink silk velvet trimmed with rose satin, with chiffon hose and black satin slippers, and carried a bouquet of Madam Butterfly roses.

The bridegroom was supported by Mr. Albert Price, brother of the bride. Mr. Oswald Price and Mr. J. Price, Jr., acted as ushers.

R. J. Devey presided at the organ, accompanying Mrs. Scholey, who during the signing of the register, sang "Promise Me."

A reception and luncheon was held at the home of the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Price. Mrs. Price wore a gown of black satin, and Mrs. W. Bigford, the groom's mother, wore a dress of wine colored crepe de chine.

The groom's gift to the bridesmaid was a beautiful sapphire ring; to the best man, a Russian leather wallet, and to the ushers, beautifully designed gold chains.

The happy couple were the recipients of a splendid display of presents.

Mr. and Mrs. Clifford Bigford left amidst a heavy barrage of confetti and rice, etc., for a motor trip to Montreal and Quebec.

The bride's travelling costume consisted of a period dress of French grey georgette, with hat, hose and shoes to match, with a smartly tailored coat of navy blue, also a corsage of beautiful flowers, the gift of the groom's mother.

On their return they will reside in Peterborough.

JOHN WILLIAMS

A life-time of useful endeavor and service, the benefits of which were many and spread over a wide field, closed on Friday, September 28 with the passing of John Williams who succumbed to a lengthy illness at his home, 311 Boswell avenue. Born at Pendley, England on December 15, 1858, he had come to this country in his youth and during a residence in Peterborough of many years, had reached a high position in the esteem of a wide circle of friends, Particularly did this apply in his active connection with the old Charlotte Street Methodist Church, later, Trinity United, of which he was a member of the Official Board. He possessed a deep sympathy for mission work and his giving in this direction, as well as to the poor in his own community, was most generous. The Peterborough Sons of England Lodge also benefited by his membership therein and the funeral will be under its auspices.

His wife predeceased him some eight years ago, while a sister passed away quite recently. Left to mourn are four daughters, Mrs. J. J. Menzie, Mrs. J. Henderson, and Mrs. A. Brown, all of Peterborough and Mrs. Martha Brown, who has made her home with her father since the death of her husband, Flight Lieut. Percy Brown, who was killed overseas. Two brothers and two sisters in England also survive.

The funeral, under the auspices of the Sons of England, will take place at 3 o'clock on Monday afternoon, October 1 from his late residence, 311 Boswell avenue, to Little Lake cemetery for interment, the Rev. David Wren of Trinity United Church and the Rev. Benjamin Geatrix conducting the services at the home and graveside.

R. F. Downey, J. Kennet, R. J. Kidd, A. Brown and two representatives of the Sons of England Lodge, will be the pallbearers.

ported that the Suburban Area Road Commissioners are buying twenty-five loads for use on the Lakefield road. He also reported that the commission intends to use calcium chloride on the Lakefield and Chemong roads next year to lay the dust.

The Mayor stated that he and Ald. Hamilton had inspected the roads under the commissioner's care and had found them to be in first class shape.

The City Engineer was authorized to advertise for tenders for snow removal. It was decided not to require bonds from the contractors this year. He was also authorized to get prices on pumping equipment for the low level sewers near the Smith Street Bridge and in the south end of East City. With the chairman he was given authority to order the pumps.

The chairmen of the Property Committee and Board of Works, with the Mayor and the Engineer, will go into the plans for a garage to be erected on the city property at the incinerator and report for next month's meeting. They will consider the possibility of heating the garage, which will be particularly for the road maintainers used in snow removal, with steam or hot water from the incinerator furnace. They will also find out the cost of keeping the machinery in a public garage until this work can be completed.

The F. R. Wilford Company, which built the sewage disposal plant, has a large amount of machinery and other supplies in the city's sheds and on the disposal plant lot. Instructions were given the Engineer to notify the company that a rental of $20 a month will be charged from October 1.

The Underwriters' Report.

"They want the city, as usual," was the way Ald. Cotton summed up the recommendations contained in the report of the Fire Underwriters' Association inspection of the fire equipment last spring. The report was placed on file, without any action being taken by the Fire, Water and Light Committee, which also met last night.

Two firemen, considered too old and inactive for fire fighting, but who have been kept on the staff this year to keep up the strength of the brigade in the holiday season, will be discharged October 8, but will be paid until the end of the year. In the meantime the aldermen will try to get them positions more in keeping with their age.

The Finance Committee also met last night, dealing with several accounts for indigent patients and passing the ordinary accounts for payment.

Though not scheduled, the Parks Committee might have been said to have met, Ald. Greene taking advantage of the presence of all the members to lay before them a proposal to draw away several hundred loads of filling from the King George School grounds to James Stevenson Park. The matter was laid over for further discussion with the Board of Education.

Voice of the People

Letters to be printed in the Voice of the People column must be received at The Examiner Office on the day before it is desired to have them published.

To the Editor.

Sir,—As president of the Peterborough Kennel Club I am appealing to the general public for their support and attendance at the coming show and also for the entries of their dogs.

The results of this dog show will determine whether it will be possible for us to create a building fund for the purpose of erecting our own dog show building at the Exhibition Grounds where we can hold an annual show.

We are holding the entries open until Saturday night, September 29, in order that all those owning dogs in Peterborough and district will have an opportunity of entering their dogs.

Unregistered dogs have as good a chance of winning as the registered dogs, so we invite you who are breeders and lovers of canine pets to join with us in making this year's show a real success both from an entry point of view and financially as well.

We are fortunate in having the greatest all-breed judge there is in Mr. Charles G. Hopton. Mr. Hopton has judged some of the finest shows in England, United States, and Canada.

The show will be held in Brock Street Skating Rink, where the dogs will be comfortably housed. The seating arrangements will be such that everybody will be able to watch the judging from their seats in comfort.

The show will be declared open at noon on Thursday, October 4, and closes on Friday evening, October 5, at ten oclock.

Don't miss this opportunity of seeing some of the finest dogs of all breeds in America.—Yours truly,

H. S. ROUTLEY.

IF

If you really knew that somebody cared,
When times are bright and gay,
With head held high and shoulders squared,
You'd smile at the world all day.

You'd tackle each job with added zest,
No effort indeed would be spared.
You'd go out to win, you'd give of your best
If you knew that some body cared.

If you really knew that somebody cared,
When times are dark and bad.
You'd work just as hard tho' your soul be bared,
And smile, tho' your heart be sad.

You'd do your best to come out on top,
And wouldn't you be prepared
To give all you had, to the very last drop,
If you knew that somebody cared?

BURGESS STUDYING CHANNEL COURSE

English Channel Swimmer Charting Fast England to France Course.

LONDON, September 29 (Canadian Press).—There is considerable mystery attached to the English Channel swimming course from England to France being plotted by T. W. Burgess, one of the three men who have swam the Channel from the English side.

It has been proved beyond doubt that the English Channel can be swum within fifteen hours, but only from France to England. During the past three years very fast swims have been put up in that direction. Michel of France claims to have accomplished the performance in 11 hours 6 minutes—although that record has not been, as yet, accepted by the Channel Swimming Association — while Miss Gertrude Ederle of New York the first woman to cross, took 14 hours 30 minutes, her feat being authenticated by the association.

But there is still a very fine record awaiting to be broken, and that is the one of 21 hours 45 minutes, put up by the late Captain Webb, who crossed from Dover to Calais in August, 1875. Although over half a century has elapsed, that record remains unchallenged.

In fact, the swim from England to France has only been accomplished by two other swimmers: Burgess, an Englishman, in 1911, who took 22 hours 35 minutes, and H. Sullivan, an American, 12 years later, in 26 hours 50 minutes.

When will the swim from England to France be attempted again? The Dover Corporation has offered a gold challenge cup for the first swimmer to cross by that route, but the question has often been raised: Can it be done under 20 hours? Conditions are by no means the same as on the journey from Cape Gris Nez to Dover.

Aspirants have started from practically every yard of beach east and west of Dover. All the so-called experts have expressed their opinions as to the course, but it remained to Burgess to work out the course from England as a result of his many attempts and it was Burgess who found the "Ederle" course from France.

Attempts previously had been made from the rocks under Cape Gris Nez Lighthouse. Three years ago when Madame Sion started from that position, she was to have been accompanied by Burgess, but Burgess was missing, and it was several hours afterwards that the people on the tug Alsace, accompanying the Frenchwoman, noticed someone swimming towards the tug from an easterly direction.

A boat was put out and that someone was discovered to be Burgess. All thought that Burgess had overslept. But no, "Bill" had a scheme of testing the tides he wished to work out and he took advantage of the presence of the tug to put his scheme into practice.

Judging his time, he entered the sea from the beach at Cape Gris Nez, at a spot about a mile from the usual starting place. He caught the current he had been working out, and as a result of his deliberations he decided to start the next swimmer from the beach at the Cape.

Soon success was assured, and this has been practically the same course followed by the swimmers who crossed to Dover in good time.

But Burgess has another course, if not two, up his sleeve for the swims from Dover.

Now, what is Burgess's mystery course? To a newspaperman he recently said: "If I gave out the course I should steer from England to France they would say I was mad. I count on 17 hours, perhaps less, and landing at——"

"I have not tested it, so it is nothing but a theory, and I steer the opposite way to what would be expected the first three hours. I do not start from near Dover, but pass southwest of the Ridge and the Varne. I would not like to say more myself, but you can work out something interesting if you use a tide book and work backwards.

SCHOOL FAIRS

Belmont

HAVELOCK, Sept. 27.—The Belmont Rural School Fair was held on Wednesday, September 26, and while the attendance was not as large as last year owing to the unseasonable weather, the exhibits showed great care in preparing them for exhibit, and entries were made in nearly every class.

Six schools took part in the parade, each carrying a banner bearing the name of the school. North School, S.S. No. 1, Belmont, were the first to give their performance, marching to the strains of "Marching Through Georgia," played by two of the pupils on mouth organs. Each pupil wore a red bandeau with the name of the school in white letters. Preneveau School, S.S. No. 2, was second, the girls wearing red bandeaux and the boys red sashes.

Victoria School, S.S. No. 3, was third, carrying flags and wearing red, white and blue sashes.

Rush Point School, S.S. No. 4, was next, with red bandeaux and red ties.

Old Havelock School, S.S. No. 6, was fifth, wearing red paper caps.

Cordova School, S.S. No. 12, was the last, carrying a green and white banner, and wearing high green paper hats with green bandeaux and white lettering.

The prizes were awarded as follows:

First—Old Havelock, S.S. No. 6; second—Cordova, S.S. No. 12; third — Preneveau, S.S. No. 2; fourth—Rush Point, S.S. No. 4.

Three pupils from S.S. 12 were the only entries in the senior competition. The first prize was awarded to Marjorie Clemenger, second to Gertrude Osborne, third to Irene Barrons.

Only two took part in the junior contest, Catherine Hartwick of S.S. No. 6, receiving first and Ada McArthurs, of S.S. No. 4, second.

Great interest was shown by the boys in their live stock judging competition and the prize for the best judging team went to S.S. No. 3. WEAK AND NERVOUS

A Condition Always Due to Thin, Watery Blood.

Thin blood and weak nerves generally are found together. Red blooded people seldom complain of nervousness. The reason is that the blood feeds the nerves and keeps them toned up to do the work nature intended. When the blood is thin and weak it fails in this important function and nervous troubles follow. The following case will interest those who need a tonic for the blood and nerves. Mrs. D. Veno, Union Square, N.S., says:—"With a feeling of gratitude I write to tell you what Dr. Williams' Pink Pills did for me. I had become badly run down, and reached the stage when I could not do my housework. I was not only weak, but my nerves seemed completely shattered. The least noise would startle me and I was subject to nervous headaches. Worse still I could not sleep at night. Perhaps I would get an hour or two sleep, and then lie awake for the rest of the night. I had reached a stage when I actually feared I would lose my mind. Up to the time I decided to take Dr. Williams' Pink Pills, nothing I had taken seemed to do me any good. I got a few boxes of these and soon there was no doubt they were the medicine to help me. As I continued the use of [illegible] as I gradually grew stronger, ate better and could sleep at night, and now I am as well and strong as a woman could wish to be. I hope some other weak, nervous person will be benefitted by my experience".

Dr. Williams' Pink Pills are sold by all medicine dealers or by mail at 50c a box from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

LOUD SPEAKERS EASILY TESTED

Purchaser Should Hear Male Voice Through Horn Before Deciding.

EASILY DISTORTED.

For the prospective buyer the selection of a good radio reproducer is fully as important as a good receiving set. Unless the reproducer is of the highest quality the excellence of the best receiver will be wasted. There are good speakers of various types on the market and the discriminating person will listen to demonstrations before making a decision. There are several things he may keep in mind in judging what he hears.

One is that the voice, especially the male voice, is a better criterion than instrumental music. The average person can more easily tell whether a person is talking naturally than whether orchestral music is being reproduced naturally. The male speaking voice is capable of being transmitted with great naturalness, and if it sounds unnatural as it emerges from the receiving equipment, the prospective buyer may be sure that the receiver or loud speaker, or both, are at fault. He may also be sure that music, too, would be distorted, although such distortion would not be so obvious.

In listening to music it is better, for purposes of judging loud speaker quality, to listen to good standard or classical music. Jazz orchestras put in so many odd effects and strange noises that it is difficult to tell whether some of these are orchestral "effects" or defects in the loud speaker.

If the demonstration is confined to music in the middle of the musical scale, then it can be reproduced fairly accurately by almost any receiver or loud speaker, as good studio reproduction is easy to obtain in the middle register. The listener to a demonstration, therefore, should tune in to programs where the higher and lower ends of the scale are considered in order to give the speaker a real test.

HOW TO CLEAN LACQUER BRUSHES

Lacquer brushes should be wiped out as dry as possible after use, then shaped up and allowed to dry. When ready to use them again, soak them in lacquer thinner. If one brush is to be used in several colors, it must be thoroughly cleaned when colors are changed.

Dip the brush in thinner. Pour some kitchen washing powder in a cup, one-fourth full, and stir up with the lacquer brush until the hairs stand out separately. Work the brush in the powder a few minutes, then wash it in clean water. The powder coagulates the lacquer, which can easily be washed off in fine particles. Dry the brush on a cloth, rinse in a little thinner, and you are ready to dip it into a new color. —Popular Science Monthly.

XXXIX—HOMECOMING

Philip went all over the cottage with her, admiring the clean curtains, and the shining brass, and the bowls of flowers which she had picked and arranged with such care.

"It's all just as it was when she left it," she told him delightedly, staring fixedly at the gold and green dragon on Sally's favorite humpty cushion. "Nothing altered, nothing that she'll miss. I've seen to that."

Sanderson did not answer. There was going to be something Sally would miss, he told himself—or, rather, someone!

Whenever he looked out into the garden or leaned over the low, green-painted gate he thought of Garry Nairn, and was irritated because he thought of him.

Why on earth could he not put the fellow out of his mind, as Sally had seemed to do? What was it to him if Nairn had behaved like a cad and walked away from the woman who loved him, without a word of farewell? Philip had so often cudgelled his brains for an explanation of it all, and had found none.

The whole thing seemed so sudden and pointless. Perhaps had Sanderson been less a man of the world he might have guessed the truth, but the thing which had been a mountain to Garry Nairn would have been too small a molehill in Sanderson's life even to merit notice.

But the whole affair rankled. He wanted to be sure—to understand—Had Sally ever loved Nairn, or had it just been a passing fancy? Had Nairn ever loved her? Who was to blame? What was the answer to the riddle?

While he was at the cottage the vicar rode over on his bicycle. He brought a large bunch of roses from his garden.

"For the little lady," so he told Sanderson. "I thought she was coming home to-day," he explained.

"No, to-morrow," Sanderson answered curtly. Against his will, he was always curt with Garry's father: it seemed impossible to be otherwise.

"You must both be very thankful at the success of the operation, Mr. Sanderson," the vicar said.

"We have to thank the surgeon," Sanderson answered.

He was quite prepared for a sermon on the subject, but he waited in vain. The vicar was a wise man, and he never forced his wares into a market unless he was sure they would be acceptable.

"Well, I won't stay," he said cheerily. "Give little Miss Sally my love, and tell her I will come to tea any day I am invited."

"I'll tell her," Philip said stoically.

They went together to the gate, where the bicycle leaned drunkenly against a post.

"Well, good-night, Mr. Sanderson," the vicar said cheerily. He turned and held out his hand. "You're a fine man, and I'm proud to know you."

Philip Sanderson flushed scarlet. He tried to look angry, but only succeeded in looking distressed. He tried to speak, but could find no words, but Mr. Nairn did not seem to expect a reply: he mounted his machine and rode away down the road without a backward glance. Philip looked after him with scowling brows.

"Damned old fool," he muttered as he went back to the cottage: but the words sounded more like a benediction than a curse.

And the following day Sally came home. It was all, as Mrs. Kiff had said, just the same as it had been before.

She rode in the same luxurious car, only this time, instead of lying flat on her back, she was able to sit up, propped with many cushions, and admire the summer glory of the country as they passed.

She was wearing a new coat and hat. Philip had a number sent to the nursing home from one of the best West End shops for her to choose from. Perhaps some instinct, born of his great love for her, had told him that to a sick woman there is no tonic so healing as the tonic of new clothes. So Sally was resplendent in a blue hat that matched her eyes, and a little fawn coat lined with the same blue.

There was a faint flush on her cheeks and subdued excitement in her eyes, and yet every time he looked at her Philip thought: "She is changed—quite changed. It's not the same Sally I'm bringing home." And his heart ached through all his happiness. He found himself longing for the little spitfire whom he had first known and loved, for the Sally with her hot temper, her coquetry and flow of bad language.

Only that morning, as if guessing his trend of thought, she had asked him playfully:

"Am I more of a lady than I used to be, Philip?"

Any other man would have made some flattering, insincere reply, but Philip answered at once:

"Yes, much more, Sally."

"And do you like me better this way?" she had urged anxiously, and again he had answered truthfully:

"I can't make up my mind yet. I believe I still miss the way you used to fly at me." And then, half jokingly, "Why don't you flay at me still, Sally?"

She did not answer for a moment, and then she said in a tired little voice:

"Somehow because I don't want to."

"Because you like me better?" he had asked awkwardly, with leaping pulses: and Sally had shaken her head.

"No, but it seems too much bother now to get cross or upset about anything."

That explained it so well, Philip thought. Sally had lost her interest in things, lost her great zest for life and for having a good time.

He recalled that little conversation as they drove the last three miles to the cottage, and for the hundredth time he wondered how much the change in her could be accounted for by Garry Nairn, and how much was the natural result of all she had suffered.

As they reached the bend in the road which turned up to the cottage, he saw Sally slowly raise herself and look round with wistful eyes, and suddenly the words she had spoken to him one night in the nursing home months ago came back to his mind:

"I've been dreaming—about Garry! He's gone, hasn't he? Gone away from me, I mean. I saw him in my dream walking up the road towards the cottage, but he didn't go in—he went by."

Was this the part of the road of which she had dreamed—the part where Garry had paused for a moment before he deliberately walked out of her life?

He bent over and touched her hand. "Penny for your thoughts, Sally?"

She roused herself with an effort to smile.

"Not worth a penny, Philip. Nothing at all interesting."

He knew it was not the truth, and he felt as if she had gently raised yet another barrier between them which he could not break down.

And then they were at the cottage, and Mrs. Kiff and Sometimes were at the gate and everyone seemed to be crying and kissing, and all was confusion and excitement till Sanderson picked Sally up in his arms and carried her into the sitting-room, just as he had done months before when he first brought her there.

There were tears on Sally's cheeks, and she looked round her with eyes full of happiness and affection.

"It's just the same, only prettier than I remembered," she said, half sobbing. "Everything's just the same nothing's altered—nothing at all."

But, looking into her eyes, Philip Sanderson told himself that everything was altered, that nothing would ever be quite the same again—ever!

There followed days of almost complete happiness.

The villagers round about grew accustomed to the sight of tall Philip Sanderson carefully guiding the steps of the little girl who everyone had said would never walk again, about the lanes and meadows, with Sometimes frolicking rather clumsily around them (he had never fully recovered from his accident, and if he ever got into disgrace with either his master or Mrs. Kiff he would immediately adopt a pathetic limp which at once restored him to lost favor).

The weather was kind, too, and the sun seemed to shine all day long and the nights were mild and warm.

And every day Sally improved a little and leaned less heavily on Philip's arm, until one never-to-be-forgotten afternoon she walked the whole length of the little garden unaided and without her crutches.

Philip and Mrs. Kiff watched from the porch with bated breath.

"Stop where you are! You're not to touch me!" Sally commanded excitedly. "Don't dare to move a step, Philip, or I'll never speak to you again!"

It was as much as Philip could do to obey. His face was crimson with excitement, and there was a suspicious moisture in his eyes, and when she reached the little green-painted gate and turned to look back at him, flushed and victorious, he could bear it no longer. He was beside her in half a dozen strides, and had picked her up in his arms.

"Thank God, Sally! Thank God!"

"Thank God and Mr. Sanderson, I says!" Mrs. Kiff interjected loudly then she burst into noisy sobbing and fled into the kitchen, from which a moment later issued the strains of her favorite song in a high, shaky treble:

"I shall lo-huv you the sa-hame for ev-er!"

CAMPBELLFORD FALL FAIR

National rules, and before the day was done, the little book had to be referred to and some firm statements made in order to keep things as the judges ruled they should be. According to the book, races cannot be called after sundown. This caused a little friction in the Class C event when an owner refused to start his horse. He claimed that his horse had run all that he would allow it to run that afternoon, and that his rights permitted him to refuse to race after sundown. This was upheld by the judges and arrangements were made to run off the final heat of the race to-day at two o'clock. Later, the owners were able to steal the event to their mutual satisfaction and incident ally avoid the inconvenience and extra expense of keeping their horses and attendants here another day.

Art Blade of Peterborough displayed his usual efficiency as a starter. Equal rights for all and favors to none, was his motto and the drivers knew before very many heats were run that he meant business. Fred Slade, Roseneath; L. Simpson, Brighton, and Chas. Armstrong, Havelock, were the judges that were called upon to crane their necks on several occasions to make sure just which horse was ahead. J. R. Bolten was official timer and D. A. Owen kept the official record. There were also seen in the stand, C. S. Gillespie, veteran horseman, owner of famous harness horses of days gone by. His horses were winners on some of the greatest tracks on the continent; Frank Glenn, H. W. Lapp, T. J. Horkins and Henry Watters. Their tales of former racing classics added to Blade's entertainment kept things interesting during the otherwise dull periods in the judges' stand between heats

Jack Abbe Wins.

The honors in the Class A race went to Peterborough, when Jack Abbe, owned by E. Jones and driven by himself, stepped the mile in 2.19. He won the race in three heats with three firsts. The second money went to Peterborough as well when Jim Todd, owned by Johnston, and driven by Tucker, won two seconds and a fourth. Hal Pointer, owned and driven by S. Craig, Smith Falls, was third with a second, third and fourth. Alfred Elk, another Peterborough horse, owned by E. Jones, and driven by J. Sutherland, was fourth with two thirds and a fourth. This was the first event, which called for some quick and serious thinking on the part of the judges. There was a dispute between two of the drivers in which one accused the other of improper use of his whip. The two men were summoned to the stand, and after some consideration on the matter, the judges decided to make no changes in the record as already set down.

Class B, the second event of the racing program, afforded the crowd more thrills than any other part of the Fair. Crowds jammed the grand stand, and men lined the track almost all the way up the north end of the stretch to the turn to cheer wildly as the horses thundered past for a genuine garrison finish. There were five horses entered, and all ran the full five heats save Della J, who was drawn by her owner after the fourth heat. It was during the running of this event that a veteran of the track was heard to remark that the driving was the finest he had ever seen.

"Those men are five of the best drivers you will find anywhere in Canada," was the reply of another of the officials and the agreement was unanimous.

There seemed little difference in the horses. From the start to the finish they remained in a group and never was there the slightest sign of daylight between them. It is not to be wondered at that the crowd cheered the flying steeds as they flashed past under the wire. McCracken of Peterborough has just cause to be proud of Dick Sunday, his horse which Smith piloted to victory with the sensational record of three firsts, a second and a fourth. It looked like a sure thing for him when he came in first in the first two heats. In the third he fell back to second place, and when he ran fourth, last but one, in the fourth heat, there was a general feeling that he was done for. Then he came through in one of the most sensational driving finishes that could ever be witnessed and led the other home at a merry clip in the final heat. Thunderous cheers greeted his victory. At the moment everyone was a horse lover. Lou Todd, owned by Walsh of Hastings and driven by R. Elmhurst, made a splendid showing with two firsts and three seconds. Eleanor Mae, a Cobourg horse, owned and driven by E. Jones, took third money with a second, two thirds and two fifths. Hal E, owned and driven by Elmhurst of Keene, was fourth with a record of three thirds and two fourths. Della J, owned by F. Lowe, Hastings, did not run the five heats, but was drawn at the end of the fourth. She had a record of two fourth places and two fifths. The time for the mile was 2.17½.

Considerable Argument

The Class C race was the cause of considerable argument and it was expected that the event would have to be finished at a later date. Twilight had set in before the last heat was called and for various reasons, one of the owners refused to start his horse again. Mr. Blade consulted the rule book and assured those that the owner was right. The heat was postponed till two o'clock Saturday afternoon, but a settlement was made and there will be no racing today. The time for the race was 2.24. The horses were, The Limit, owned by F. Lowe of Cobourg and driven by Bowen. His record was three seconds and a fourth in the second heat. Alki Silk, owned by C. Fife of Keene and driven by Elmhurst scored two firsts a second and a fourth. Norma Direct owned and driven by S. Craig of Smith Falls, scored two thirds, a fourth and a fifth. Leo Stewart, owned and driven by Sullivan of Frankford tallied two firsts, a third and a fourth. Barney Kelly another Frankford horse, owned and driven by Garrison got one third and three fifths. At the end of the fourth heat the race was called as demanded by rule 126 of the Canadian National Association.

Harry C Wins

Four horses entered the Class D event but only three finished the three heats necessary to the race. Harry C, owned by B. Blake of Roseneath and driven by Lemuire was drawn after the second heat having won two fourth places. The other three horses made each heat a repetition of the former trial. Red Peter, owned and driven by S. McQuaig of Havelock did the mile in 2.24½, won three firsts and the money. Marguerite Mac, owned and driven by Ross Turley, Frankford, was second in each of the three heats and won second money. Dorothy H, a Stoco horse owned and driven by William Rush, got third money with three third places.

The events in the driving circle were most interesting to a large crowd during the entire afternoon. When the driving and stock judging was finished, a novelty was introduced to this district. The demonstrator of the Chevrolet and Buick automobiles started a Chevrolet coach, set the wheels so that it would travel in a circle, then got out and did the same to a Buick sedan. The idea spread like wildfire to the other exhibitors along the motor row and before long there were five different makes of automobiles demonstrating themselves without the aid of human guidance. Darkness arrived and the demonstrators merely climbed on board their moving vehicles to turn on the lights. At various time passengers were assinsted into the moving vehicles, allowed to ride as long as they desired and then assisted to the ground while the car was still in motion. The cars exhibited along the line were Chevrolet and Buick, Nash, Whippet six and four, Chrysler, Ford and Ruggles trucks. P. C. Denyes, local hardware merchant had a most attractive exhibit of DeForest Crossley radios, and electric washing machines. A. L. Riendeau exhibited the Stewart Warner radios. DeLaval also had an exhibit of milking machines and dairy equipment.

On Thursday and Friday of next week, there will be held at Lakefield a horse-shoe pitching tournament which many Peterborough enthusiasts will enter. The tournament has aroused plenty of interest in the district, and with a lucky break in the weather, should "go over big."

HANDMADE SMOKE SCREEN AIDS MINE SAFETY

To detect air flow and measure its velocity in mine shafts, a litle bulb instrument developed by the bureau of mines ejects a puff of smoke which can be photographed to show the direction of the air currents, says Popular Mechanics Magazine. The unit is serviceable also in the study of other ventilating problems.

CRUISER SALVAGED BOTTOM UP FROM ENGLISH CHANNEL

Scuttled by the Germans during the war, the cruise "Moltke" has been raised from Scapa Flow and towed to port to be broken up and utilized as scrap, says Popular Mechanics Magazine. In salvaging, the big warship was turned completely over so that it was brought in botom up. The broad botom of the hull afforded ample space for workshops.

TURTLES FROZEN FOR SHIPPING ON LONG OCEAN VOYAGE

Turtles to supply the London markets are being sent from Australia, by an elaborate freezing method. About 200 a month are being transported in this manner, says Popular Mechanics Magazine. Turtle catchers along the great barrier reef get about twelve cents a pound for the turtles, while the price of turtle meat in London often is as high as $5 a pound.

Before opening a can of paint turn it upside down for a few days. In that way it will mix thoroughly. Paint brushes that have become hard and dry, may be softened by soaking them to the length of the bristles in hot vinegar.

Add a little starch when doing up cretonnes or slip covers. It will take away that flimsy look and keep the materials clean longer.

THE MIRROR OF THE MODE

By Mary Marshall.

This coat of the new Hunter's green is worn over a simple frock of beige crepe with beige felt hat and gloves.

Considering the color scheme of your autumn or winter street ensemble, you should consider three possibilities.

First, the coat and frock may match in color, with the same or different sort of material used for frock or coat.

Second, you may have a bright-colored frock with a neutral-toned coat.

Third, you may have a bright coat with a neutral-toned frock. And of the three possibilities the last mentioned is quite the newest.

In the late summer displays of frocks for autumn in Paris several of the most prominent dressmakers showed ensembles consisting of coats in the newer, brighter street colors—warm vibrant browns, mellow blues, wine tones, and even greens—worn with rather simple little frocks of beige, gray, sand, putty or some other of the tones that suggest silk or wool before it has been dyed. With such a costume the hat should match the coat and the gloves and other accessories should preferably be of the neutral tone.

Still there are notable examples of the monotone color scheme—all blue, all black, all brown, the coats often having fur trimming of contrasting shade.

An American dressmaker of distinction has much to say in favor of the ensemble consisting of fairly bright frock and all black coat and for the woman who has but one coat for the season this is what she suggests—a black coat with a slight flare, trimmed with black krimmer. Then whether one wears a frock of blue, dark or light, red, green, brown or wine color there is no question of perfect accord. And as this dressmaker points out, there are many more occasions when a woman would like to wear a bright-colored frock than a bright-colored coat.

THE WHATNOT

A Place for Little Bits of Everything of Local Interest

By MARION

THERE came to my desk a few days ago a little poem by Dorothy Aldis. I could not properly print it under the Saturday heading "Little Songs of Love," but here it is. It just matches my thoughts to-day:

"If I had a spoon
As tall as the sky
I'd dish out the clouds
That go slip sliding by.

I'd take them right in
And give them to cook
And see if they tasted
As good as they look."

And if, to-day, I had a kitchen as big as they have in the new collegiate extension, I'd take in there all the wonderful recipes that go slip sliding by my desk, and have them made up, and see if they taste as good as they look!

From all over the district, and from all sections of Peterborough, they have come to me this week in response to the SOS calls of last week-end—and others just in response to the good-will promptings of the senders' hearts. Isn't it great?

There are so many that I've been compelled to enlarge the section this week to get them in. Maybe soon we shall have two Women's Pages a day, and THEN you neighbors will have to work faster than ever to fill them up! There'll be room for a LOT of goodwill, if we have two pages a day and three on Saturday.

• • •

But I know there's lots in The Examiner's territory. Just look at the mail columns to-day. Bobbie takes HOURS away from her delightful baby, and her housework, to write instructions and draw sketches of a baby wrap requested by "Country Woman." Dozens of others dig up their fine recipes for dishes asked by M.T. and others. And still more neighbors come along to pass over hints they think may be interesting and helpful to readers in general.

I do wish all these neighbors would sign their letters, just so that I could have the pleasure of dropping them a little personal note of thanks. And really, you cooks, I don't know why you are not so proud of your recipes that you don't all let your names be used. Of course I won't use them if you don't wish it!

• • •

I don't know when I was as delighted with anything as I am with that letter of Bobbie's—not because it praises our page so much, although that does help with the day's work!—but because of the splendid way in which Bobbie asserts women's rights. That is the sentiment that will GAIN recognition of woman's place.

• • •

Woman IS capable of going beyond surface matters. And exchange of ideas through our page DOES, as Bobbie points out, not only teach us to know each other, but also helps us to find ourselves.

• • •

As I pointed out in the Whatnot a few days ago, I think the district will take a long stride forward in this regard through the Kiwanis Club Fair, which is devoting so good attention to women's interests this year.

Very like our page, the Fair will present subjects of special interest to Peterborough district women; it will provide a meeting place for women where they may talk on subjects that most interest them, and exchange ideas; and it will be a really neighborly place where we may take our babies and our other interests with the idea of getting help and giving help.

In the mail column to-day, too, Topsy gives us something to ponder. There is room for argument in what she writes, of course, which makes it worthwhile, but it suggests another discussion we might have to follow the "Why Do Men Eat Downtown" one of a couple of weeks ago.

Let's have, next week, your opinions on "What can the woman, and what can the man, contribute so that married life will be as happy after five years as it was after five months?" Is the woman, or is the man, more responsible for maintaining the happiness of the home?

• • •

Let's call it the "After Five Years" competition, just for brevity's sake. If any venturesome males desire to compete, we'll let them in. And once again I'll give a box of good stationery to the winner. Maybe I'll think of something original to give, sometime, but you'll like this box—if you win it!

Entries will close on Sunday night, October 7, and the letters will be printed during the following week. The winner will be announced on October 13. Please give a pen-name, as no names will be used on the printed letters, but attach your own name and address so that I can send the prize—if you win it.

• • •

As a special favor, we'll allow Topsy and Bobbie to enter, although I think they must have made a special study of it all. And Jocelyn, too. Jocelyn lives in a city on the lake shore, Topsy in Omemee, and Bobbie on a Peterborough Rural Route, so these contestants are well scattered. Where's the city?

Before I forget to remember to tell you, the help this week is a pattern-diagram of a slip with pleated skirt attached. The sheet is so big that I specially request you to send unattached stamps so that I may use the larger envelopes. And, in spite of the notice I allowed to be printed every day in the coupon, I HAVE some instructions for the pointed slip and the cami-knicker.

And now for some ideas the neighbors sent in. Here's a bit of philosophy from the city: "I have long been amused by the contrast between the grumbles men make when they struggle privately into dress suits and the self-satisfied peacocky air they affect when they finally emerge before the public eye. With a woman it is different. We struggle with our gowns and our slippers and our coiffures, but ALWAYS HAPPILY. We visualise in front of our mirrors the triumph that will soon be ours. Women are better anticipators than men."

• • •

Isn't it the truth? The young lady who sent in this though might have gone on to say that we anticipate everything pleasurable for a longer period and with deeper enjoyment than men and that, by the same token, we also anticipate troubles, and feel impending adversity more acutely than men.

As J. Anthony McDonald writes in one of his dainty lyrics:

"There's a call comes, clear,
To the list'ning ear,
When the day draws nigh,
And the night goes by;
For each highway seems
Like a path of dreams,
Leading far away
Thro' the magic day!

It is to the listening ear that the call of anticipation comes—and it is probably because women are looking and watching and waiting for the heart throbs that they hear the call.

If I seem to run to poetry to-day, it is because I am rejoicing in anticipations come true. I am just so delighted with the desk piled high with mail from the neighbors that my typewriter is running away with me. I'm sure I don't know what the printers will say when I hand them all this copy!

• • •

It's a wonderful feeling! And it begets wonderful irresponsibility!

There was an item in The Examiner the other day, by somebody or other of importance, in which the oracle said: "If marriage could be dissolved as easily as business partnerships half the married couples in this country would be divorced to-morrow."

• • •

I don't believe it. If marriage were on the same basis as a business partnership, there wouldn't be a rush for the divorce courts. There wouldn't be too much work for even the Canadian Senate.

• • •

BUT, I believe there would be a lot of lawsuits for an accounting of the firm's money . . .

AND there would be time-clocks placed in the home, and papa would have to check in and check out.

• • •

Do you like the idea? Just fancy!

It makes me think of a story somebody clipped and sent to me recently. "Bill was discussing the modern flapper. 'Why,' says Bill, 'all they marry a guy for is a free meal ticket or alimony.' To which the answer was, 'Well, what else is there to marry a guy for?'"

• • •

Please don't forget the competition on "After Five Years." You have ideas that will make the contest valuable, or interesting, or amusing—send them in.

WOMEN'S PAGE

WOMEN'S INSTITUTE WEEKLY COLUMN

A goodly thing it is to meet
In Friendship's circle bright,
Where nothing stains the pleasure sweet,
Or dims the radiant light.
No unkind word our lips shall pass,
No envy sour the mind,
But each shall seek the common weal,
The good of all mankind.

WARSAW.

Was it not splendid to see the Institute emblem as well as the ode head the Institute column last Saturday. There is also an Institute anthem composed by Mrs. William Towriss of Athens, who addressed several of the Institutes in this district two years ago. It was written about four years ago but has not yet come into general use.

God bless our Institute,
Give each a mind astute,
Reverent and kind.
As we together meet,
May hearts in union beat,
My thine own concord sweet,
Our spirits bind.

For home and native land,
May all our members stand,
Firm for the right.
An undivided throng,
May we crush out the wrong,
And help the good along
With all our might.

May discord, hate and strife,
Be banished from our life
Forever more.
May error flee away
Like mist before the day,
And own Thy Kingdom's sway,
From shore to shore.

This anthem seems a prayer for the best and greatest good of our homes and of our country, and is equally applicable to any country where Women's Institutes are held, or where the Fatherhood of God is recognized.

CAVAN.

Now that the long evenings have come there will be more time for social evenings and Literary Societies.

The Institutes are commencing to plan their winter's activities. It will be well to plan that the evenings be varied in programe, some literary, some social. A few Institutes chose some well known popular author and study his or her works, others prefer debates, plays and readings for entertainment.

Whatever form of programme chosen, the Institute members are trying to provide social, supervised places of amusement for the young people in their homes. An Institute worker who visited the C.N.E. looking for bright ideas, helpful suggestions and labor saving devices, passes on these notes.

"An innovation which caught my interest was a new oil heater with a visible flame, which gives quite a brilliant light serving for illumination was well as warming the air. Flame was surrounded by a chimney of pyrex glass waranted not to crack. The stove expert did not recomend gasoline stoves as a safe means of heating or cooking. He said they were made because there was a strong demand for them and gasoline was handy to get as a fuel.

Another thing admired there was the showing of diferent utility articles to make a 'gay kitchen." Everything was offered from an electric stove to a dust pan in gay color.

One of the most appealing utensil was a casserole in the British exhibit at the C.N.E. Along with many mates, it had chosen a rich dull blue for its outer dress and inside it was a luscious peachy yellow. For the kitchen cupboard there were many bits of the peasant crockery now so popular. Highly colored and in rather primitive designs it was a homey air that makes it very companionable for every day use. Institute women in every community are planning and working for home and country. Anything that adds to the beauty comfort and efficient carrying on of home appeals to them. One of the nicest things about our modern delight in color and variety is the cheapness of it all. I mean the inexpensiveness. Some things are dearest when they are cheapest, as we all know, but the woman who crav[illegible]d bits of china and kitchen gear, [illegible]l be amazed how much of it can be bought for quite a little song. It is not the full purse but the seeing eye that counts when we start to create comfortable and beautiful homes.

MOUNT PLEASANT

The first meeting of the Mount Pleasant branch of Women's Institute was held at the home of Mrs. (Dr.) Dean on Wednesday, July 4th, 1905, when eleven of the twelve ladies who attended, joined the Women's Institute. These ladies were Mrs. Brown, Mrs. Greigg, Mrs. Albert Rutherford, Mrs. Harry Lowes, Mrs. H. J. McLean, Miss Nettie Rutherford, Mrs. Harry Bland, Miss Ethel Finley, Mrs. Herbert Shield and Mrs. Dr. Dean.

During the year ten more names were added which made the membership for the first year of the Institute twenty-one members. The ten ladies who joined during the year were: Mrs. John Handley, Mrs. Jos. Fee, Mrs. Thos. Best, Mrs. A. E. Best, Miss Annie Hayes, Miss Lena Hayes, Miss Jennie Boyd, Miss Caroline Sutcliffe, Miss Lillian Brown, Mrs. T. Jamieson, nine of whom are still loyal to the Women's Institute.

Mrs. C. H. Shield was President and Mrs. Dr. Dean was Secretary-Treasurer until her removal from the village in September, afterwards Mrs. Harry Lowes was appointed Secretary-Treasurer in Mrs. Dean's place for the balance of the year.

The main objects of the meetings during the first year were the subjects discussed, some of which were very helpful to the housewife. These subjects were arranged for at the previous meeting, and as far as can be learned from the minutes these subjects were openly discussed by all the members. Some of the subjects used were "Canning and Preserving Fruits and Bread Making" "Pickling and How to Make Desserts" "Nursing" "Desserts" and, if time permit, "Doing up Plums" "Making Salads and How to set a Table," "Xmas Dinner and Christmas Cake," "How to Cure Pork for Summer Keeping" "Churning Cream in Winter," "How to Wash and Iron Clothes, Their Care and Repair, labor Saving Appliances" "How to Make Marmalade and Different Kinds of Pie," "Summer Drinks," "The Value of Cereals as Breakfast Foods."

No refreshments were served at the meetings until after the September meeting, 1905, when it was moved by Miss Jennie Boyd and seconded by Miss Lilian Brown that refreshments be served at the meetings and limited to bread and butter or sandwiches and one kind of cake or pie with no display of silverware or table linen, and anyone violating this rule is subject to a fine of 25c to go to the treasury of the Women's Institute.

At the March meeting, 1906, it was decided to order twenty-five Motto Pins, for the members, since which time the members are still noticed wearing pins of the same style with the motto, "For Home and Country" engraved on them.

This constituted the activities of the local branch, in its infancy, during the first year.

MARION'S MAIL

DEAR MARION,

I, too wish to join the ranks of those who so heartily commend 'Our' page of The Examiner. Being a previous devotee of 'The Homemaker's Page,' this new trail which you are blazing, Marion, has, to me, filled a long-felt want. The feminine columns of the average paper do not always do justice to woman's intelligence, for while we may be creatures of detail and find interest in some things of minor import, woman, after all, is quite capable of going beyond surface matters.

It seems to me that a Women's Page in which all may participate points to a true democracy of thought and life. An exchange of ideas and ideals not only teaches us to know each other but also helps us to find ourselves. Moreover, our page is really a mirror showing us what kind of women we are —our tastes, our achievements, our ambitions, desires. You are our leader, Marion, but if the page be not a good one, who then may we blame but ourselves, who contribute to it—show in it the reflection of our true selves!

I really did not start out this letter with any intent of philosophizing, but rather to answer "Country Woman's" query regarding her baby's coat. I, also, live in the country, and am the possessor of a baby boy, so I feel that I should like to offer my friend what experience I have had in the matter.

Last winter, I contemplated making my baby a coat, but unfortunately he had a sleeping bag given to him, instead, and it is so much superior in every way that I am going to tell "Country Woman" about mine, and I hope that she sees this in time to make it rather than a coat.

The material is of heavy, cream chinchilla, lined with white flannelette and bound with pink satin ribbon. It is quite easy to make, as I made several lighter ones to put the baby in while sleeping out of doors, or at night. The width of mine across is 24 inches, and the length from the shoulder to the bottom, 26 inches. Chinchilla, I fancy, comes in 54 inch width, so I take it that you would simply have to buy sufficient length. I am not an artist, but will enclose on a separate sheet a sketch which may help you, and which I trust Marion will forward.

The great advantage is that you may put your baby into his sweaters and pullovers and then he may be slipped so easily into his bag. The hood covers his head nicely (over another bonnet) and you simply dome him in. His hands and feet cannot come out to get cold; you have no difficulty in dressing him; he makes a convenient 'bundle' to hold and cover, and he looks quite as nice as though in a coat. I washed my bag twice last winter, using Lux and selecting a breezy day, and the results were all that could be desired.

If I have written too much, Marion, you have my permission to condense it.

May we have a poem sometimes as part of our page?

BOBBIE."

't would be little short of impertinent, Bobbie, to condense so splendid a letter. I cannot receive too many like this, and I am sure all the neighbors think likewise. Your opening paragraphs, with their splendid diction and wonderful philosophy, make me feel quite jealous—I feel that you, and not I, should be conducting this page.

I, too, have felt that the ordinary "Women's Page" underrates the intelligence of those to whom it is addressed, and I have added to that conviction the belief that Peterborough district women are more interested in Peterborough district women and their doings than in anything else I might put in the columns of this page. I could not, however, express the idea nearly so nicely as you do when you say the ideal page "points to a true democracy of thought and life." I do hope that you will not too long delay your next letter—the neighbors will be eagerly awaiting its advent.

Your sketches are just fine—I have reproduced them, with your instructions, in another column, and I hope that they are useful to many others besides "Country Woman." If she would like to correspond with you, may I give her your address? I'm sorry I have not hers.

About the poem; I have printed several short poems by readers, underthe heading "Songs Of Love" on Saturdays. I thought some of them just wonderful, and I shall be glad to receive others for publication, preferably on topics connected with women's life, work, and interests. There's one to-day by "C.P." who wrote for us a few weeks ago, "Once We Were In Love." Then, don't you remember Judy Shea, who gave us, "Silence," "Rendezvous" and that wonderful little "To a Little Lady," with its prayer.

"God show me the place where your cross is hung,
That I may snatch it away in time—
And keep you forever so young—so young!"

Frankly, Bobbie, I don't wish to print "just anything" in the way of poetry, and I have been choosing the best of those poems submitted with a view to fitting them in with the spirit of the page.

"Dear Mario...

In your issue of Thursday, September 20th, "Topsy" gives her valuable opinion as to why men prefer to eat in restaurants rather than at home. Right here let me say that "Topsy" need not have stated that she was not married. I would have known it from the way she accused married women of being careless and untidy in their appearance, with a house no longer spotless, grumbling, tired, overworked and last but not least that time-worn accusation of "nagging" the poor overworked perfect, ideal and blameless husband who, to the unmarried, always represents perfection in the 'nth degree. Nagging is a word as old as the phrase "Although taken completely by surprise," and the enemies of womankind in general and wives in particular should certainly find a new weapon for their attack. She does not say anything about the wife who has been busily engaged doing her housework all morning, as well as trying to plan how the salary which she will receive is to be divided in the best interests of the home. Topsy complains that the children are probably ill or need clothes (I must be careful not to misquote her). Let me tell Topsy right here that women who have three or four children must consult with someone about their wardrobe and their health, and who should be more interested than their father? As a matter of fact most young husbands of my acquaintance enjoy immensely their luncheon at home and are interested in any little events that have happened during the morning, as well as the progress which Babs or John have made at school and in most houses the noonday meal is quite a jolly affair and I would venture to say that the awful meal hour which Topsy represents is far oftener in imagination than reality. No Topsy, husbands are not always right; remember "far away hills look green," and if you ever attempt to weather the sea of matrimony yourself, be sure you are equipped with tolerance and patience for the gales which you are sure to encounter.

Sincerely.

JOCELYN."

I don't believe, Jocelyn, that Topsy meant half the hard things you attribute to her. It's funny, by the same mail with your letter came one from Topsy, printed next. I suppose you'll object to her saying that nine times out of ten it is the girl's fault if her marriage is a failure? Go to it, you two!

I most certainly agree with you that the natural confidant for a wife is her husband, and no husband should neglect this phase of his duties of married life. If there was more reciprocity between husband and wife—she telling him about their children and the house, and he telling her about his work,—there would be greater understanding and a greater mutual appreciation. I know a house from which the father is absent a lot. When he is at home the children try to make a fuss over him, but he doesn't know how to take it. I really believe he would just love to romp, but he doesn't know how. Poor man!

"Dear Marion,

I received your letter and also the correspondence cards, and thanks a lot. They are sure very lovely.

Well, "Why Do Men Eat Down Town" sure stirred up quite an argument, didn't it? I think myself that nine times out of ten it is a girl's own fault if her marriage is a failure, for if she would be the same when she is married five years as when she was married five months, her husband would still show her how much he loves her. Don't you think so, Marion?

Wishing you every success, I remain,

Sincerely yours,

TOPSY."

Omemee, Ont.

I'm glad you liked the correspondence cards, Topsy, and I hope we may have another competition shortly. Maybe we could start a discussion on your challenge about a girl's responsibility for failure in marriage!

I can't say that I agree with you altogether. I think the nine out of ten ratio too high in the first place, and haven't men any responsibility for the success or failure of marriage, at all?

Some time ago I put forward the idea that people can't be the same five years after as when they were newly married. They change time changes conditions change. If they don't change their ideas in unison—there's where the trouble starts. The secret, I think, is to live so closely together that the changes wrought by time will be so gradual, and they will take them arm in arm so unknowingly, that at the end of five years they will be IN THE SAME RELATIONship of thought and love that they were on the wedding day.

What do you think of this viewpoint, Topsy and Jocelyn? Write again and tell the neighbors and me more of your ideas.

"Dear Marion,

I want to congratulate you for your wonderful work in the Women's Page. I'm sure it is very interesting to one and all.

I am sending along a recipe for peanut cookies, and hope it will be helpful to some of our cook readers.

And now, Marion, I would like if you could tell me what I wish to know. Where is the Kiwanis baby show to be held on October the eighteenth, and what is the baby's entrance fee?

Wishing your page every success, I remain,

Yours sincerely,

JENNY WREN.

Thanks for your congratulations, Jenny Wren. It is getting quite difficult to live up to all the good things said about this page—but the neighbors are helping so much that, paradoxically, I find it easier all the time!

There is no entry fee in the baby competition, which will be held in the Armouries. I understand that a special rest room is being set aside for mothers this year, comfortably furnished. I will endeavour to obtain a list of the points for judging, from Mr. Allen, and print it on our page, with whatever other particulars I can obtain. I do know that Dr. King, who is judge of babies at Toronto Exhibition, will be judge here and will address the mothers on care of their children. It should be worth entering the competition just for the information one will get from the judges and the nurses who are to be helping.

I want to thank you too, for the recipe for peanut cookies, which I'm passing on to our appreciative neighbors. I'll be looking for your next letter. Are you the "Jenny Wren" who wrote our first "Song of Love?" The writing doesn't seem the same.

"Dear Marion,

I am glad to help by passing on the following hint: Save safety razor blades which have been used. I find them very handy when ripping old garments.

MAYFLOWER."

Thomasburg.

Thanks for the hint, Mayflower, and let me add to it that if you have a handyman in the house he could very easily make a handle with a slit in the end into which to slip the blade. I never saw it done, but I say a handyman could do it because I wouldn't be afraid to try it myself—and I'm no handyman!

Please write again soon.

"Dear Marion,

In your column on Monday night we noticed a call for tomato mince meat, so we are sending one we use and find it good.

We enjoy the Women's Page very much, and often find useful suggestions.

Hoping this recipe will suit Mrs. M. T., I remain,

Yours sincerely,

MRS. C. J."

Cavan, Ont.

There must be a lot of good cooks in Cavan, Mrs. C. J., because I think I get more recipes from that district than from any other. You didn't send your name, so I can only thank you this way for a recipe which will be appreciated by many others besides M.T. I'll expect to hear from you soon again.

"Dear Mistress Marion:

Your kind note was received yesterday evening. My husband laughed when I read it. I am not supposed to have a sense of humor. Did not tell him what I was writing last evening. He rarely praises, never finds fault. Does not praise because if he did and failed to do so sometimes I might think he did not like it, and he likes all I do!

There are just some things which have ever interested or amused or annoyed me. I have had to be alone so much always. I have thought much, but there it stops.

Best of luck to you and your page,

Sincerely yours,

MRS. DAVID."

What a fortunate woman you are, Mrs. David! Your husband is eminently sensible, and I surely hope a lot of other husbands read your letter! It may be suggestive to them. It might be a good idea for wives to leave this page lying around prominently for a few days with a circle drawn around your letter, as a delicate hint!

And really, you know, you might do the same thing, just to show your husband that you recognize his good sense and appreciate him!

P.H. I am writing to you personally, and am not printing your letter because I believe you would wish it so.

* * *

E. L. I am looking up the answer to your question regarding oily hair, and will write in a day or two.

A Tip or Two

Apricot Flavor.

If you put a few apricots in with practically any fruit you are preserving now, they give a piquant flavor. Halved fresh apricots make delectable salad when filled with cream cheese.

To prevent cabbage boiling over put in the saucepan as soon as the water boils, a piece of butter or lard the size of a walnut.

When shoes are too tight across the toes they can be made easier by dipping a piece of flannel into very hot water and laying it across the foot where the strain is felt. The foot must be spread to the full extent while the hot flannel is on to enable the leather to expand.

Scorch Stains.

If you scorch an article rub soap on the scorched place and put out in the sun. Next cover with a thin mixture of starch and water and put in the sun. Alternate several times if the spot is stubborn. It will come out eventually.

Paint Remover.

Paint stains on clothing can be removed by treating with equal parts of turpentine and ammonia. Wash it in white soapsuds when the stains are loosened.

Prevent Curdling.

Cream tomato and similar soups can be kept from curdling if the tomato and the milk are of even temperatures when mixed and the tomato is stirred into the milk.

Cold coffee is a liquid that can be easily substituted for other liquids given in the list of materials for spiced cookie or cake recipes. It gives zest and a delicious flavor to the food.

A piece of fried bacon rind will bait a mouse trap better than cheese.

Many recipes call for "stock." This means the broth made from left-over meats and bones. Many housewives keep meat stock on hand most of the time and use it in many dishes. If you do not have stock and want to use one of those recipes, you can substitute beef extract or bouillin cubes. They are seasoned more highly than stock and you must be careful not to season your dish too highly.

Corned Beef Hash.

Add a few chopped apples to corned beef hash, if you like a piquant flavor. Apples are good, too, in lobster salad and in chicken salad.

THE SATURDAY MARKET BASKET

Fruit and vegetables do not seem quite so plentiful this week, at least there is not such a wide variety as there was a few weeks ago.

However, apples, peaches, plums, and pears are still on the market. Apples sell for 25 and 30 cents a peck; peaches, No. 1 at 95 cents and $1 a basket; plums, 4 pounds for 25 cents, while prune plums are 25 cents a quart. Large baskets of plums atre 65 cents. Pears range in price from 45 to 75 cents a basket, according to the size of the basket. Eating pears still remain at 6 for 25 cents.

Bananas vary in price, but are mostly 3 pounds for 25 cents, or 30 cents a dozen. Oranges range in price from 40 to 80 cents a dozen, and lemons from 30 to 50 cents a dozen. Grapefruit are sold at 3 and 4 for 25 cents. California grapes are now selling at 15 cents a pound, and green Malaga grapes are also 15 cents a pound.

Potatoes sell for 15 cents a peck; sweet potatoes, 3 pounds for 25 cents. Carrots and beets are plentiful, selling at 30 and 40 cents a peck. Parsley may be had at 2 bunches for 5 cents. Turnips are 5 cents each; cabbages, 5 and 10 cents a head; and cauliflower 15 and 20 cents a head.

Head lettuce is 10 and 15 cents a head; green and red peppers, 3 for 10 cents; this includes the sweet peppers also. 11-quart baskets of tomatoes are 40 cents. Celery is priced at 15 and 20 cents a bunch.

Melons still continue on the market. Honeydew melons are 30 and 40 cents each; cantaloupes are 15 cents each. Watermelons sell for $1.25 each.

Cucumbers, too, still remain, gherkins selling at $1 a basket, and the larger cucumbers at 35 cents a basket.

SLEEPING BAG FOR BABY

The following instructions and sketches, sent in by "Bobbie" in response to a request by "Country Woman," should be of interest to many readers and I am glad to pass them on. Bobbie's letter of explanation is printed in my mail column to-day.

MARION.

"Cut two pieces, each 26 inches by 13 inches, for the front: one piece, 26 inches by 24 inches, for the back: one piece, 9 inches by 15 inches, for the hood. In this case, 50-inch material would be sufficient. If your material is wider, it would be simple to add the extra width.

"I think you will find that one yard cream chinchilla, 54 inches wide, will make the bag, but better measure for yourself to be sure. You will also require two yards pink satin ribbon, 1½ inches wide, and four domes. If a tailor would rivet in the strong domes they use, so much the better. My bag is ready-made, and has this kind.

"I do hope you can make something out of my sketch. When you get at it I think you'll understand. If you're in doubt, make it out of some other thin material first. Good luck, and I hope your baby gets as much comfort from it as mine did."

Here are instructions Bobbie sends with the sketches: "Run heading just beside ribbon that binds the hood. Run pink satin ribbon through and tie with a bow on top to take up necessary fullness. Leave four inches free at both fronts, and sew the hood to the remaining part, using elastic to gather. The hood is gathered into 12 inches and sewed in centre of top of bag, leaving four inches free both fronts.

Round the corners front and back of top. Sew across bottom. Line with flannelette—my hood is lined with Jap silk."

I wasn't able to have the sketches reproduced just as you drew them, Bobbie, so will add this word of explanation. When the hood is sewn as in No. 1, it forms No. 2, and when the ribbon is run in it forms No. 3.

YANKEES CLINCH THE LEAGUE PENNANT

DEFEAT TIGERS 11-6 FOR STRANGLEHOLD ON PENNANT

Third Time in Succession New Yorkers Have Taken Honors.

ATHLETICS WIN 7 5.

Tied With Philadelphia and Red Sox by Winning Six Flags.

NEW YORK, Sept. 29 (Canadian Press).—The Yankees clinched their sixth American League pennant and their third in succession by defeating the Tigers at Detroit yesterday by 11 to 6 in the third game of the series. The Athletics won from Chicago, 7 to 5, but the Yankees retained a lead of two and one-half games with only two more to be played by each of the contenders.

George William Pipgrass, a leading cog in the Yankees' remnants of a pitching staff, but a failure until this trip west, turned in the flag-winning victory. The Tigers prodded him hard, but he had a good lead from the start. Gibson, Stoner, Smith and Page failed to stop the Yanks.

Babe Ruth hit his fifty-third home run in the eighth inning with Koenig on base. Page was then in the box for Detroit.

Only a landslide now could give the Babe enough homers in his two remaining games for him even to tie his major league record of sixty set last year, but he may possibly get two more to make 1928 his third best season.

The Yankees first won the American League championship in 1921, and proceeded to reel off three in a row. Then after a second-place finish in 1924 and a dip to seventh in 1925, the club regained the top in 1926 for the start of its second run of three.

By winning six flags, the Yanks moved into a tie with the Athletics and the Red Sox, each of whom took six in their palmy days.

The winning campaign of the Yankees' fall naturally into three divisions. Through the first two months they were invincible, winning 39 and losing only eight for a percentage of .830.

Experts were likening them to the famous Cubs, who won 116 games in 1906 and wondered how badly the champs would shatter that mark. Some estimates ran as high as 125 games. They were thankful yesterday to win their 100th.

Then came the awakening. The Yanks stumbled along at a gait of about .550 for the next six weeks, but the Athletics did little better. Even while they were skidding, the champs retained their strange power to defeat the Athletics when and where they willed. A double victory over the Macks at the Ruppert Stadium on July 1 gave Miller Huggins an advantage of thirteen and one-half games.

Next came the closing phase of the Yankee battle—the long war of attrition in which the Yankees fought not so much to win as to keep from losing. The Athletics started on their way up and finally dislodged the champs by half a game on Saturday, September 8. Barring a few days earlier in the last three campaigns, it was the first time the Yankees had been out of the lead in three seasons.

The Mackmen moved confidently into the Yankee Stadium for four battles in three playing days, but found the Yankees still possessed of their knack of winning from Philadelphia when no other team would yield. The Hugmen regained the lead and broke the back of the Athletic drive by taking three out of four to run their season's record against the challengers to sixteen victories and only six defeats.

That finished the Athletics. The Yanks gave them other chances to recoup in the West, but they themselves were faltering.

SEAGRAVE SEEKS NEW WORLD MARK

Secrecy in Construction Being Maintained — Will Make Attempt Next March.

LONDON, Sept. 29 (Canadian Press).—Much care is being taken to prevent leakage of details of the car and motor boat in which Major H. O. D. Segrave, is to attempt to set up new world speed records in America next March.

Details of construction would, of course, be extremely useful to a foreign rival, and in order to maintain secrecy the car is being made in parts in twenty?-eight different British works, and not one knows what the other is doing. When the parts are ready, the car will be assembled in another secret factory.

"Without disclosing any secret which would be detrimental to British prestige, I can say that my original estimate of a speed of 260 miles per hour can now be said to be guaranteed," says the automobile editor of The Daily News.

"There is every chance, in fact, that any new record made between now and March will look insignificant when Major Seagrave lets his new car out on the Daytona sands next year.

"Its designer, Captain J. Irving, one of the finest automobile engineers in Britain, who was mostly responsible for the building of the 1,000 h.p. car on which Segrave was the pioneer of 200 m.p.h., has created a machine which, as far as humanly possible will be free from danger, and the tire company is confident of producing a tire with a satisfactory margin of stress safety.

"The keel of the 1,000 h.p. hydroplane hull was laid down in a secret building yard on the south coast this week. Co-operating with Major Segrave in his motor-boat speed training is J. Dutoit, a clever automobile engineer. Between them they have tuned a 500 h.p. boat to travel at over 75 m.p.h., and when the special 1,000 hp. boat is ready for the test Segrave will be experienced enough to handle her."

NORTHERN TEAM DEMANDS $400

Rays Unable to Meet This Sum — Make Three Offers.

UP TO O.B.A.A.

The Copper Cliff-Raybestos series is at a standstill, Copper Cliff holding out for a big guarantee which the local club is unwilling to give.

The Nickle Belt champions offered to come here if guaranteed $400 to cover expenses of the trip. To meet this guarantee and the other expenses of one game, the contest would have to attract an attendance of 1,000 at an admission fee of 50 cents.

Early in the week the Raybestos club offered a guarantee of $200 and on Thursday, in a long distance phone talk with the O.B.A.A. representative at Copper Cliff, the Rays made these three offers:

A home and home series, each club to pay its own expenses; a series here of two games of nine and seven innings on Saturday, and a third game if necessary on Monday, the Copper Club to receive seventy-five cent of all the receipts from the series, less a guaranteed amount of not more than $50 to cover the expenses of the two or three games; ;a sudden death game in Toronto, the Copper Cliff club to receive 75 per cent of the gate receipts for expenses.

The Copper Cliff club answered these offers with a demand for a guarantee of $300, which the Raybestos refused.

The Raybestos club feels that the O.B.A.A. bungled the opening of the first round, as a result of which the club lost at least $100. The default of the Napanee club caused another loss of $125. The O.B.A.A. refused Saturday games in the series between Niagara Falls and Raybestos, knowing that one of the two clubs faced the heavy financial strain of a series with the Nickle Belt winners.

The Raybestos club take the position that it is now up to the O.B.A.A. to reach a decision on the series and issue an order which the clubs have the option of accepting or declining.

New York Yankees clinch American League pannant for sixth time, and third in succession.

With the Cubs winning from the Giants in New York and the Cardinals defeating the Braves, St. Louis clinched at least a tie for the 1928 National League pennant. Yesterday's results increased the Cardinal lead over the Giants to two games with only two more to be played.

CARDINALS SAFE IN FIRST PLACE

Cannot Finish Worse Than Tied for National League Leadership.

GIANTS BEATEN.

NEW YORK, Sept. 29.— Giant pennant hopes for 1928 were placed in the grave yesterday afternoon, but they won't throw on the dirt until to-day. There is still some slight chance that the corpse may come back to life.

The Cubs mussed up Larry Benton in a disgraceful manner and showed no better manner when Joseph Genewich was introduced from the mound. Old Jack Scott finally dashed to the rescue in the ninth, but the damage already had been done in the shape of a 7 to 5 victory for the Bruins.

Cardinals Win

BOSTON, Sept. 29. —The St. Louis Cardinals finally broke through the splendid defence of pitcher Bobby Smith, of the Braves, to win in 15 innings, 10 to 3, here yesterday afternoon making it certain that the Missourians cannot lose the National League pennant this season, except in the event of a play-off.

As the Giants lost, the Cardinals now lead the second place Manhattanites by two full games. Each contender has but two games to play. The Cards have one here today and one at the Polo Grounds Sunday, while the Giants entertain the Cubs again this afternoon.

McGILL TEAMS PLAY TO-DAY

Entire Squad of Fifty Footballers Will Be Engaged in Workout.

PRACTICE MATCH.

MONTREAL, Que., Sept. 29. — Canadian Press. — McGill senior football team will culminate their first week of heavy drill to-day when a regulation practice game will be played. The entire squad of fifty footballers will be engaged in to-day's workout as the coaches desire as stiff a drill as possible for the senior team inasmuch as both Queen's and Toronto are playing exhibition contests with strange teams and will benefit accordingly.

McGill's first inter-collegiate contests is still two weeks away and next week will see the red team preparing for their game with Balmy Beach, the present Dominion champions, who will give the so far untried 1928 McGill squad its first real test.

The latest recruit to swell the ever-growing ranks of footballers at the stadium is Tesky, the good Sarna player. Tesky reported in yesterday. Tesky played quarter and outside wing for the Sarnia Collegiate Intermediate champions and last year figured prominently on the Sarna O.R.F.U. team.

The addition of Tesky was a welcome one to the squad, short as it was at the beginning of the week on good outside wings. Line trouble too faded into the dim background when reports from Ottawa stated that Don Young steller middle and outside wing of the Senators, had turned in his equipment to the Ottawa club and was coming to McGill. Young is due to arrive to-day and will be ready to get into action at the start of next week. His advent will mean a lot to the Red team's chances this year and there was considerable jubilation at the stadium when reports of his entrance to McGill were confirmed.

THE KICKING HORSE TRAIL.

The Kicking Horse Trail commences at Lake Louise, in Rocky Mountains national park, Alberta, crosses the Great Divide and follows the Kicking Horse River to Field, British Columbia, Yoho Park headquarters. From here access is easy to the beautiful Yoho valley. The road then continues along the Kicking Horse canyon and on to Golden, British Columbia. This motor way, which is the second transmountain highway to be built across the Central Rockies, unlocked the gates of Yoho Park to the outside motor world.

Inside Sportin' Dope—By a Wise Cracker

Mister Sporting Editor:

Well, Mac, right off the reel I want to pay my respects to Mister Art Primeau and his Raybestos fighters. I don't know, this being writ Thurs., whether they're going to meet the boys from the Nickel Belt, but whether they do or they don't the Silver Edgers, as I call them, have sure carried off a nice hunk of baseball glory for theirselfs. They put all and sundry out with the old 1-2 punch, winning every serious without no 3rd game being required, and they made the hostile fans everywhere they played like it. Now it takes a real team to be as consistent as that, and the Rays deserve all kinds of credit for the showing what they made. It's a lean season when some Peterborough ball team don't climb up to dizzy heights, and this year East Peterborough Leaguer s come through like thoroughbreds. My best to them all, and my worst wish is that they go ar. next year and cop the Central Ontario honors.

And speaking of the Central loop, Mac, did you pipe what Mister Hoot Gibson did to them cooky Walkerville Chicks Wed.? You know after reading them western papers, especially the Border Cities Star, you'd think that Belleville had no right to be in the same street with the Chicks, but after Wed., Mac, I've came to the conclusion that even if you cut the stuff them papers print into slices, it would still be boloney. Of course, I get a little credit for the Belleville win, seeing that to help the Nationals out I called Walkerville to cop, and to make sure Belleville comes through, I'm going to name the Chicks as the likely winners of the 3rd game. But if my dope goes wrong, as she usually does, I'll kiss Mister Walter Gerow the next time I see him. The Chicks, of course, judged Belleville by what they seen of them Sat. Well, any time the Nationals get pitching like they got from Messrs. Utronki, Green and A. Weir they're naturally going to get sloughed, and they'd of been beaten just as bad by any of the Central teams going like that. It was a different kind of dessert Walkerville run into when Mister Hoot Gibson started to ride-'em-cowboy out there Wed. He made them chesty Chicks think they was batting against a mixture of Dazzy Vance and old Jack Quinn, and the result was a neat whitewash. I see by the dispatches our own Mister Alex. Kay got into the box-score with a put-out, having chucked 1 of them Walkervillians right outa the game. I suppose Chief of Police Sandy Kidd got credit for a assist on the play.

Well, Mac, that big fish that Mister Tom Curvin caught is still being heard of. Tom has entered it in a newspaper contest, and I understand he is going around complaining that it oughta weighed a lot more'n 6 lbs., seeing it was 21 in. long. As a matter of fact, Mac, that should have been your bass. That's the 1 I had all staked out for you, and, of course, it was thin when Mister Curvin caught it. Didn't I run it ragged around Upper Stoney lake for 2 weeks before it ma naged to stagger down to Young's Pt. and lean weakly up again the dam until Mister Curvin jerked it out? He was just the shell of the fish I started out after for you back in the middle of Aug., and if I'd caught him then, as I woulda done if I'd got any the breaks, I'll bet that bird woulda weighed 9 lbs. That's the luck of the game, Mac. Mister Curvin, mebbe, will get the prize rod, you hadda do without no fish dinner, and I been getting the raspberry, and how, ever since I come back. But wait till next season, Mac. I'll show the cock-eyed world how to get the big 1's, and that's no stewed greenings neither.

Well, Mister Sporting Editor, I expect I'll see you at the Dog Show next week. Meanwhile, they's nothing left on my chest but what remains of a perfectly good set of B.V.D.'s, so I'll ring off now.

Sportfully yours,

A. WISE CRACKER.

COBOURG BEATS BOWMANVILLE

Score of One-Sided Rugby Game at Cobourg is 53-0.

LOSERS DETERMINED.

COBOURG, Sept. 28.—Cobourg Collegiate demonstrated its supremacy over Bowmanville on Wednesday afternoon, in Cobourg, when the visitors were trimmed 53-0, in a rather one-sided rugby encounter. Bowmanville is still new at the game, and consequently, Cobourg had a comfortable margin in experience and playing.

Bowmanville High School sports a determined aggregation of rugbyists, who will make things interesting when they have had one or two season's experience. Devitt and James, did most of the work for the visiting team. For the locals, Hodgetts shone at kicking and bucking. Ravensdale, the fleetfooted flying wing, scored several touches for C. C. I., and once away was difficult to intercept. Leonard was undoubtedly the star in the backfield, and his line plunging was responsible for most of Cobourg's yards. McIntyre, as well as the rest of the team, played good rugby.

From Wednesday's game Cobourg appears to have a much faster, snappier team than the school has so far turned out, and when they meet Oshawa on Saturday, in Cobourg, the game promises to be worth seeing.

PENNY'S WORTH OF ELECTRICITY MILKS TEN COWS

At the average rural rate, a cent's worth of electricity will perform any one of the following tasks, according to data collected by the New York state committee on public-utility information: Shell eight bushels of corn, grind half a bushel, thresh one bushel of barley, separate sixty gallons of milk, cut 300 ponds of ensilage, cut 200 pounds of sausages, churn thirty-three pounds of butter, and provide enough energy to milk ten cows or groom two horses, says Popular Mechanics Magazine.

THEATRES

AT THE CAPITOL.

(Final Standing.)

BARRIES LIMITED WILL PRESENT THEIR FALL FASHION REVUE AT THE CAPITOL THEATRE ON MONDAY EVENING—D. W .GRIFFITH'S "DRUMS OF LOVE" ON THE SCREEN.

Barries Limited, Peterborough's exclusive Fur and Ladies' Wear Store, will present their Fall Fashion Revue at the Capitol Theatre on Monday evening (one night only). Living models will display the newst modes, in furs, afternoon frocks, evening gowns, and coats for fall and winter. One performance only at eight o'clock.

The feature screen attraction for Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday will be D. W. Grifith's "Drums of Love."

Adapted from the historical incident of Francesca da Rimini, Griffith's new independently produced spectacle is heralded by those who have already seen it as his greatest achievement since "The Birth of a Nation."

Mary Philbin, the adorable heroine of "Merry-Go-Round" and "The Phantom of the Opera," makes her debut as a Griffith player, as do Don Alvarado and William Austin. Alvarado has already tasted the sweets of success through appearances with Dolores Del Rio in 'Loves of Carmen' and with Constance Talmadge in "Breakfast at Sunrise." Austin has contributed notable farce characterizations in "It" and "Honeymoon Hate." As for Lionel Barrymore his most recent screen role was enacted in Gloria Swanson's "Sadie Thompson." Tully Marshall, the fifth member of Mr. Grifith's featured cast, was the scout in "The Covered Wagon.'

In "Drums of Love," the great director takes us to a mythical kingdom,—one in which two brothers hold complete sway. Don Cathos, the fighter, is a man of iron will, an ugly, misshapen dwarf of a giant. Leonardo, the younger, is handsome and gentle, the object of all women's eyes. It is only when Cathos receive the beautiful Emanuela for a bride as a token of homage from a neighboring nobleman, and Leonardo fails in love with his brother's wife that complications enter into the plot.

Griffith, the maker of "Broken Blossoms," "Hearts of the World" and 'America,' is said to have made this tale of brotherly love a thing of masterly perfection. He was aided in his eorts by Gerrit J. Lloyd's adaptation, Karl Struss' camera settings, Eugenie Besserer, Charles Hill Mailes, Rosemary Cooper and Joyce Coad head the supporting company of more than a thousand players.

AT THE REGENT.

GENE-STRATTON PORTER'S GREATEST

Harvester Filmed Among Lovely Settings

Gene-Stratton-Porter's promise to the Middle West has been kept. In the later years of her life the famous author agreed that if her greatest novel, "The Harvester" should ever be transferred to the screen, the story would be filmed in the exact locale of the book—her own Limberlost Cabin estate in Indiana.

And so her son-in-law, Leo Meehan who is also recognised as one of the outstanding American directors of motion pictures, travelled more than 2,000 miles from the FBO studios in Hollywood to Rome City, Ind., at the head of a production unit of forty people, intent on making "The Harvester" a screen story which should have an especial appeal to the eye, as well as to the heart. This "sentimental journey" has already taken its place as one of the most unusual pilgrimages in film history.

Leading roles in "The Harvester" are played by Orville Caldwell and Natalie Kingston, while other important members of the cast are Jay Hunt, Will Walling, Lota Todd, Edward Hearn and Fanny Midgley, and Belshazzar, the canine companion of the Harvester which appears prominently throughout the story. The party also include a complete technical staff brought from the studio, as well as two carloads of "properties" and equipment.

The famous Limberlost Cabin and its surrounding estate of 120 acres is situated on the shore of Sylvan Lake in northeastern Indiana, and the company took complete possession of a resort hotel nearby, traveling to the imposing "cabin" each day by motor boat. Five weeks were spent in this location, where all exterior scenes were made, after which the company returned to the studio in Hollywood for the filming of interior.

"The Harvester" opens an engagement at the Regent Theatre on next Monday.

happened to say that he wished he could get a good boy as an apprentice. I asked him in all modesty how I would do, and he told me to come around and see him. So I was apprenticed to the firm for three years, and went to live with Mr. Long in the rooms over what is now our upper store opposite The Examiner office. My wages for the first year were $4.00 a month, $6.00 a month during the second, and $8.00 a month during the third year. And out of that salary I saved enough money to go to business college one winter. Burnell Sawyer, now of Montreal, conducted the business college, somewhere in the block over Bond's drug store. He was in to see me a short time ago, and recalled the old days before he sold out to Pringle, who moved to the Bank of Commerce building.

Learning the Trade.

In learning the trade, one of my duties was to get up at six o'clock in the morning and draw water from the well in Croft's hotel yard where the Sun Life building now stands. We had no waterworks in those days, so I had to draw enough for the day's baking. We burned wood because there was no coal, and we often had as much as forty cords piled on the lot now occupied by Peck, Kerr & McElderry's office and the garage north of it.

Another task assigned to the apprentice was to put up the shutters at night. There was no plate glass, just windows of small panes. The shutters were kept in a box below the window. They were made of matched lumber that fitted together with V joints and were firmly held at the sides and locked securely. This shutter was as wide as the window and nine or ten feet high. I had to o'clock to do the shutter performance.

Why did we need them? You might say they were a safeguard against burglars but as a matter of fact they were to prevent drunks rom falling against and breaking the windows.

After seven years with Long Brothers, Mr. Hooper took a holiday that introduced him to a rather long interval of labor, and then the accumulating material of independence. His rent was originally $250 a year and the taxes $25; to-day the rent is $800 and the taxes $380.

Surviving Contemporaries.

"Of the stores forty years ago that have survived Potvin's was in the same place although it had been up at Dublin Street; Stinson's shoe store was about where The Examiner is and The Examiner was at the southeast corner of Brock and George Streets; R. J. Kingan's father had a hardware store where the Review building and A. H. Stratton is now; and E. H. D. Hall's law offices are in the same place as forty years ago. LeBrun's clothing store was where Grafton's is; the William Lech fur store has not changed its location, and I think E. F. Mason's father was in the grocery business. J. C. Sullivan had started in Ashburnham long before 1888. C. B. Routley was about where Grafton's is now, and Richard Hall was on Simcoe Street and I think Robert Neill was in business in a small way."

Night traffic avoided Charlotte street which was still notorious as "Hell Street" because of its saloons. And liquor flowed from numerous taps on George street between Charlotte and Simcoe streets. Hotels, liquor shops and saloons almost monopolized the block.

"Traffic turned west at Simcoe street," Mr. Hooper told the Examiner. "Women and men, too, were afraid to go down and around by Charlotte street. If any one passed the store after 9 o'clock at night, I'd feel like running out to see if there had been a murder.

Two of the popular cakes forty years ago were gingerbread and "choke dog" or Victoria pie. Choke dog was made of broken pieces of cake, bran, molasses, and raisins and currants, and of gingerbread —we made tubs of it. A boy with a cent or penny wasn't happy until he had bought a choke dog or gingerbread, just as you see children today with cones. We had excellent ice cream and Long's set up the first soda fountain while I was working there. They made their own soda water."

Casting Bread on the Water

When I opened my store I thought chiefly of setting lunches and creamed oysters which were a prime favorite, meat pies and other baked products. Then I took up candy making. I knew a little about it, but a stranger taught me a lot.

One day I walked across the street to the market, whistling as usual I guess, and a tramp on the opposite side stopped me.

"Hello boss, how's chances for a quarter to get a meal?" he asked.

He looked the part of a typical hobo, unshaved and dirty. I told him to wait and I'd take him over to the shop and give him his dinner. When he was in the store he said he was a candy-maker from Chicago.

"You look it," was all I said.

"Say, if you take care of me until my foot gets better I'll make you candy" he offered. So I fixed up a place upstairs and I found him to be one of the best candymakers I ever met. Liquor had the best of him and he came up here to get into the woods and away from it. A log rolled on his foot and laid him up. He'd get drunk whenever he had the money, and one day he told me he wanted to go to Rochester. He was afraid he might give his formulas away to some other store while he was drunk. That was poor Len Fisk."

At Fairs and Picnics

Young Hooper was not content to wait for trade to come to him. He went out after it. He bought the refreshment concession on the excersion boats to Rice ake during the summer and then he made a wide circuit of the fall fairs all the way up to Uxbridge, Beaverton, Minden and also to Picton, Cobourg, Warkworth and a score of others.

An amusing incident occurred at Beaverton the first time I went there. I drove in to town with a team and a wagon load of stuff in the morning, and I was told the directors were holding a little session in the town hall. Up there I met an old fellow and I told him I wanted space where I could give an exhibition of taffy pulling, candy making.

He seemed rather mystified and said " We never had anything like that on the grounds. It might be all right. How much do you want to put on this exhibition."

Of course I had expected that I would have to pay for booth space, but without batting an eyelid I told him ten dollars would suit me."

"I guess we can give you that much" said the director."

After dinner I asked them where I could set up and they told me to go ahead wherever I liked. So I set up my booth right at the entrance to their show building and fixed the hook on which I fulled the taffy on the outside of the main door. I just about blocked the passage and I pulled taffy all afternoon and evening until my hands were swollen and I couldn't close them. And several of the directors told me it was one of the best attractions they had ever engaged.

For six years I had a monopoly of the refreshment concession at the Bobcaygeon fair, and all I paid for it was two dollars. I'd go up there with three teams and each wagon would be loaded, and I'd sell everything. Keene always had a good fair, and on that night I would drive on to Hastings. It used to take us until two or three in the morning. There we would go on to Warkworth after loading up with stuff that would be sent down on the morning train. We would be all night driving home from Warkworth and then I'd turn in to the day's baking. Some of the refreshment men would drink and gamble at night, and the next day they would be broke.

I used to sell oceans of lemonade. We used the well known circus prescription, but we omitted the pink coloring. A dozen of lemons would make a barrel of it, or as many barrels as we needed and it always had the natural citric flavor Circus lemonade, and the people liked it so well on a hot day they kept coming back for more.

His First Catering

I broke into catering with the 57th battalion when they went to Toronto for three days the time the Duke and Duchess of York, now our King and Queen, came to Canada. There were 15,000 troops in camp at the exhibition grounds. The 57th had 300 men, and I was told they were the best fed regiment in the camp and Max Dennistoun, the paymaster, gave me a $100 bonus. I did the cooking myself; nine hundred meals a day. Of course I had helpers to peel potatoes and set tables. Morley Lyle, Jack Jordan, Jim Johnston now of the Nash garage were some of the young fellows who helped me. Vince Eastwood was Quarter-master of the regiment. After those three days we returned to Peterborough on a Saturday morning at ten o'clock, and I went up to the shop to bake for the day's trade. The regiment took me on trips to Ottawa, Brantford, Perth, St. Catherines and other cities as their caterer.

When the big bicycle meet was here Charlie Legros and I didn't close our stores for three days. I had plenty of hard work and long hours in the first ten years, but I always managed a bit of a holiday or rest, such as fishing, once in a while."

Bought Long Stores

After he had been in business fifteen years Mr. Hooper bought Long Brothers' business. They had two stores, one where the Greatrex drug store is now and the other was in the Upper Hooper store opposite the Examiner office.

"I was talking to Harry Long one day and he told me he was sick and tired of the business and wanted to get rid of it. I made him an offer and he accepted it. Later A. W. Cressman gave me one thousand dollars to turn over the lower store to John Nugent. The Nugent drug store was on the west side of George street and Mr. Cressman wanted it for his own business."

Mr. Hooper also acquired the Mann bakery and retail store at the corner of George and Dublin street, and with the diligent assistance of his sons, Percy and Fred carries on in the three stores the business which he started on October 1st. 1888. From the eminence of forty years' experiences he subscribes to this plain philosophy: "You have got to work if you want to get along, and you've got to do it yourself."

"If you say anything about me" he remarked to the Examiner in closing the review it sought, "I wish you would emphasize the loyal service of Miss Gillespie who was with me for thirty-five years."

Now these new features increase CHRYSLER
Style and Engineering Leadership!

IT IS NOT to be wondered at that the new Chryslers—"75" and "65" are everywhere being received with cordiality unusual even to Chrysler .... ¶Chrysler, in one stroke, less than five years ago captured the style, performance and value leadership of the industry .... ¶That superiority has been strengthened by each succeeding step until the newest Chryslers represent the highest expression to date of Chrysler's remarkable engineering and manufacturing genius .... ¶Consider, for example, in the new Chrysler "75 and "65" these new elements in performance and in the style that today re-styles all motor cars:

New slender-profile chromium-plated radiator, harmonizing with cowl moulding;
New "air-wing" fenders;
New bowl-type headlamps;
New "arched-window" silhouette (with hood panels harmonizing in design);
New sweeping rear-deck lines in coupe and roadster;
Counterweighted 7-bearing crankshaft;
New Chrysler-designed gasoline tank shield;
Power, speed, pick-up that out-Chrysler even Chrysler
New "Silver-Dome" high-compression engine using any gasoline;
New light-action internal-expanding hydraulic 4-wheel brakes with squeakless moulded brake lining;
New, longer chassis;
Rubber shock insulators in place of metal shackles;
New-type shock absorbers;
Duplex channel frame on "75";
Six-ply full-balloon tires on "75";
New thermostatically-controlled integral radiator shutters on "75."

And all these are added to numberless developments which Chrysler owners have enjoyed for years and years and which have contributed to Chrysler satisfaction and long life .... ¶The public acceptance of these remarkable developments pioneered and perfected by Chrysler—never more clearly shown than in the acclaim of the new "75" and "65"—proves that the style and performance dominance of the automobile industry belongs clearly to Chrysler.

New Chrysler "75" Prices—Royal Sedan, $2250.00; 2-passenger Coupe (with rumble seat), $2250.00; Roadster (with rumble seat), $2255.00; Town Sedan, $2420.00.

New Chrysler "65" Prices—Business Coupe, $1490.00; Roadster (with rumble seat), $1485.00; 2-door Sedan, $1515.00; Touring Car, $1525.00; 4-door Sedan, $1620.00; Coupe (with rumble seat), $1620.00.

All prices for delivery in Peterboro, and include 2 bumpers, spare tire and cover and license.

INQUEST OPENS AT OWEN SOUND

Investigation of Circumstances Surrounding Death of Sailors From Manasoo

OWEN SOUND, Ont., September 29 (Canadian Press). — A large crowd attended the inquest here last night into the death of Dougal McLean, who was drowned when the steamer Manasoo foundered in Georgian Bay on September 15. McLean's body was the only one recovered of the sixteen men who met their deaths in the disaster. Coroner Dr. A. B. Rutherford presided and Crown Attorney T. H. Dyre conducted the examination of the witnesses. Mr. Dyre drew the attention of the jury to the serious nature of the inquiry, and pointed out that it pertained not only to the death of McLean, but involved an investigation of all the circumstances of the wreck.

John McLean, father of the dead youth, a farmer of Arran Township, said that as far as he knew his son had been on the Manasoo on the day of the wreck. His son could not swim. Mr. McLean said he had seen the body and identified it as his son.

Arthur Middleboro, purser on the ill fated ship was the first of the five survivors of the crew to be called. At West Bay the boat had taken on 12 head of cattle and placed them in the forward part of the ship. Arriving at Manitowaning 104 more cattle were taken on and stowed on the main deck. The witness could not say exactly how the cattle were distributed, but stated they were not tied and were on both sides of the ship. Apart from the cattle there was very little freight on board.

SUNDAY SCHOOL WORK DISCUSSED

Madoc and Elgevir Association Holds Annual Meeting.

MADOC, Sept. 29 (Examiner Correspondence).—The annual Sunday school convention for the Townships of Madoc and Elzevir was held on Wednesday afternoon and evening, in Trinity United Church, Madoc.

The attendance was smaller than usual on account of the extra busy season.

Rev. G. W. Rivers, pastor of the church, presided at the opening exercises and extended a cordial greeting to all the visiting delegates, bidding them welcome on behalf of Madoc friends. George West, president of the Sunday School Association, responded, thanking all for the welcome, and explaining the many reasons of absence sent in.

Mrs. James Keene of Madoc was appointed as secretary, pro tem.

Roll call and appointing of representatives to the nominating committee was followed by the reports of departments by the superintendents of departments.

Rev. Mr. Norton was then called on to conduct a round table conference and the Standard Sunday School Chart was filled in and explained, and many questions regarding the different departments of the Sunday school work were asked and answered.

Tea was served in the basement by the members of the Ladies' Aid, affording all an opportunity for better acquaintance and social intercourse.

The evening devotional exercises were taken charge of by Rev. Mr. Parker of Queensboro, after which the report of the nominating committee was received:

Group 2 — Queensboro, Hazzards, and Pineview.

Group 3—Cooper, Eldorado and Union.

Executive to meet representatives of these schools on dates chosen.

The treasurer's report was given by Mr. Rollins:

Rev. Mr. Norton gave a most able and interesting address on the Feeding of the Five Thousand, from the text: "They need not depart; give ye them to eat.—Matt. 14:16; urging Sunday School workers to bring all their talents to the Master, where they can be blessed and used by Him.

A hearty vote of thanks to Mr. Norton for his excellent address and the assistance he has given during the day, was moved by Revs. Rivers and Parker and tendered by Mr. West.

They Have Given Great Satisfaction

"I have used Dodd's Kidney Pills for my children on several occasions," writes Mr. M. Munroe, Canoe Lake, N.S. "I am glad to say they have given me great satisfaction in the case of involuntary urination. I shall continue using them and would not be without them in the house." Kidney Trouble is very common among all classes of people, both young and old. A lot of very valuable time is usually wasted by using unsuitable treatments. Dodd's Kidney Pills Help all Kidney Troubles.

Australian Conditions Affect Price of Wheat

CHICAGO, Sept. 29.—(Canadian Press). — Influenced by adverse weather for the Australian wheat crop and by unfavorable Labor conditions at Australia ports the wheat prices here averaged higher early today. Meanwhile, the corn market went downward owing largely to liquidating sales of September delivery. Opening unchanged to ¾c advance, hardened little more and then underwent a setback September dropping 3 cents from early top figures. Oats were steady.

Nickel and Oil Strong Market Reveals Firmer Tone

TORONTO, Sept. 29.—(Canadian Press)—There was a distinctly firmer tone to the market on the Toronto Stock Exchange today reflecting a stronger trend on the Wall Street Exchange while gains were moderate they were scattered over a wide range of stocks with Nickel and Oil issues chiefly in demand. International Nickel was traded in to extent of almost two thousand shares and gained a point at 124¼ while Mond Nickel was up a quarter at 31¾. Imperial Oil and British American each gained slight fractions while International Petroleum was unchanged. Two point advance was made by Bell Telephone at 164 and Carlings was up 1½ at 30.

Canada Dredge at 52, Canada Dredge at 150 Canada Bread at 150 and B. C. Packers at 18 were each higher by a point. City Dairy down one at 64 was only stock to record a loss of more than a fraction.

Big Demand for Abana Malartic Is Active

TORONTO, Sept. 29 (Canadian Press). — Practically all the stocks traded in on the Standard Mining Exchange shared in a stronger tone which developed. The volume of trading was greater with the total being swelled by a great demand for Abana which broke through 4.00 and closed strongly at 4.08 for a gain of eight points. Malartic was another very active stock selling up to 1.71 for a gain of six points. Noranda turned upward for the first time in several days and on the sales of more than 5,000 shares gained 50 cents at 47.25. St. Anthony gained three at 67, Dome was up ten at 9.00, Sherritt-Gordon 25 at 6.70, Treadwell 50 at 14.50, and Towagmac 15 at 3.40.

Lake Shore suffered the greatest loss, being off 25 cent sat 22.25. Elsewhere price changes were insignificant.

Mining Briefs

A Special Service to The Examiner

A despatch from Rouyn states that the Newbec management do not expect to intersect the ore in the next drill hole before the middle of next month. The new plant is now being installed and drilling of the second hole is being arranged.

Mr. J. C. McGregor, geologist, is now said to have completed his report on the Favorable Lake property of Mr. Connell and associates. It is now rumored that he will again resume connections with the Amulet property in his old capacity. A further report received from Rouyn states that the vein on the 150-foot level of the property is now shown to be 108 feet wide, and of an average grade of $32 per tone.

Boston Creek advices are to the effect that Barry-Hollinger continues in ore of good grade at the 1,250-foot level and that this ore also has been encountered at the 1,100-foot horizon.

It is reported from Kirkland Lake that the new ore recently encountered at the Tough Oakes-Burnside is holding up well. Mill feed is said to be coming from pillars of old stopes.

Malrobie will commence station cutting this week, it is understood. Shaft sinking at this property has made good progress and lateral work will commence soon.

Work is being continued on the 125 and 500-foot levels of the Kirkland Hunton, and drifting is proceeding on the vein at the 500-foot level. This ore is said to show low values. Approximately 200 feet of drifting has been done on this. On the 125-foot level the raise which was going up to the surface has been stopped and drifting is proceeding. Approximately 100 feet of this work has been completed, but only low values were obtained. E. W. Todd is making a geological survey of the property at present.

A location of the site for the new shaft at the Macassa Mines property, which adjoins the Kirkland Lake Gold to the west, has now been chosen, but no decision has yet been reached regarding the commencement of sinking. It is anticipated that this will be announced in a couple of weeks. The diamond drilling program, which was completed about three weeks ago, is understood to have added encouragment to the project, although definite results have not yet been announced. Five holes were put down during this campaign and in all about 3,000 feet of drilling was done.

Hilltop's shaft has now reached a total depth of 640 feet, which means that at least 360 feet more sinking must be done before the objective of 1,000 feet is reached. The last station was at 390 feet, and it is probable that the next will be at 1,000 feet. First lateral work will be at this level. A vein was encountered during sinking operations at 620 feet, but this went out again at 630 feet. At the point where out it showed about eight inches, but was of a high grade with some free gold showing. The company's hopes are that the narrow vein found at upper levels will widen considerably at the 1,000-foot horizon. Work is proceeding under J. V. Ronaldson, manager.

Reports from Vancouver are to the effect that the adit at the Kootenay Florence is nearing its objective and that reports of development are expected daily.

Naval Negotiations Will Not Be Broken off, Claim Officials.

PARIS, Sept. 29 (Canadian Press) —Rejection by the United States of the Franco-British accord as the basis for the limitation of armaments will not end the negotiations, in the opinion of the French official circles. The replies of Japan and Italy will be awaited and then the whole matter will be turned over to the experts again for study as to the possibility of finding a way to conciliate conflicting views.

IN MEMORIAM

In memory of our mother, who passed away at Kelwood, Man., September 28, 1924.

The sands of time run out, set is life's sun;
Reached is the journey's end; the great goal won.
Folded her hands upon her gentle breast.
Her toil is finished; Mother is at rest.
We miss her every hour, yet would not mourn
As void of hope, though joy of life is shown.
But we may tread the straight and narrow road
Which led our dear one to that blest abode.

Daughters—Mrs. P. E. Elliott, Mrs. A. E. Deck.

IN MEMORIAM

McILMOYLE—In loving memory of Walter Victor McIlmoyle, who was killed in action, September 29, 1918.

Retaining Health and Beauty

The woman who does not wish to be loved and admired doesn't exist. And why shouldn't she wish to be attractive? Yet, long before middle life many women show the effects of shattered health. Cosmetics, "permanents" and stylish clothes without a basis of real health will not preserve the desired charms.

THE SPINAL COLUMN

is the place where science now finds the cause of many ailments. A vertebra out of alignment interferes with the transmission of nerve force. This may be manifest in the tissues where impinged nerves end as in the arm, knee or stomach but the real cause is at the spine. Remove the cause and nature restores health. Many women who were discouraged because of poor health have become strong and well again by taking Chiropractic spinal adjustment.

LET US HELP YOU RETAIN YOUR HEALTH.

Lodge Says Men To Live For 100 Years

LEEDS, England, Oct. 1. — A century from now people will live to be 100 years old and will be useful until they die, Sir Oliver Lodge said in an address here Wednesday.

Sir Oliver, lecturing on "Life After Death," said suicide was unforgivable.

"People think they can go out of existence, but they cannot," he said. "I am convinced that human existence is not limited to the material body."

MANY INSTALLATIONS.

One Plumbing Permit a Day Average For September—69 Tests Made.

Indicative of progress in his department is the September report of H. Metherall, plumbing inspector, who, to The Examiner this morning, stated that during the past thirty days, an average of one plumbing permit daily was issued by him, total number providing for the installation of 16 water closets, 14 baths, 19 basins, 15 sinks, 1 laundry tub, 2 combination trays, and 4 floor drains.

Thirty-two water tests and thirty-seven smoke tests had been made and nine lay-outs inspected, while miscellaneous inspections had totaled thirty-six. Fifty-four certificates of completion were issued.

The fact that during the past month, no less than twelve old houses were connected with the sewer system, proved that good work is going on along this line. This brings the total of houses connected to the sewer system to seventy-two so far this year.

Man Who Broke Into Station Was Drunk—Fined To-day.

NO MONEY STOLEN.

The reported robber who entered the Canadian National Station on Saturday night and stole $900 appeared in the Police Court this morning, charged with being intoxicated and was fined $10 and costs. The story circulated around the city last night, and this morning that the C.N.R. station had been broken into and $900 taken proved to be false on investigation by The Examiner this morning. It is true that a man got into the station last night but he was in no condition to take anything as he was drunk and he appeared on that charge this morning.

Another local man pleaded guilty to being intoxicated in a public place yesterday afternoon and was fined $15 and costs as he committed his offence on the Sabbath.

KNOX CHURCH IS RE-OPENED FOR WORSHIP

Rev. J. A. Wilson, Formerly of St. Paul's, Preaches at Two Services.

HELPFUL SERMONS.

Building Has Been Beautifully Redecorated — Large Congregations Attend.

Returning after a period of twenty-five years, when he then preached the first sermon in what was called the Knox Church Mission, Rev. J. A. Wilson, B.A., of Paris, yesterday conducted the re-opening and re-dedicatory services of Knox United Church in this city. During the summer the church has been most beautifully decorated and the congregation has spent almost $5,000 in making the building more lovely to worship in.

At the morning sederunt of worship the body of the church was filled to capacity, and to add a special touch to the noteworthy occasion in the history of the church, Rev. William Macdonald, B.D., the minister, conducted a baptismal service, when three infants were baptized. Rev. Mr. Wilson took his text from the twelfth chapter of Romans and the first verse, "I beseech you therefore, brethren, by the mercies of God, that ye present your bodies a living sacrifice, holy and acceptable unto God, which is your reasonable service."

In his opening remarks he told of coming to Peterborough in the spring of 1902, a graduate just out of college, as assistant minister to St. Paul's Presbyterian Church. During his two years and eight months' stay in this city, which was then a town, the Knox Mission was started under St. Paul's Church and it fell to the lot of Mr. Wilson to look after the spiritual welfare of the new church. "It was my privilege to preach the first sermon in the mission, and as I look down on the faces of the congregation this morning I see there have been many changes. Many whom I got to love have gone, those who were then boys and girls have grown up and are taking their place in the church and community. Perhaps you have forgotten me; but I trust you have not forgotten the Saviour to which this church was dedicated. I left Peterborough in December, 1904, and was inducted in St. Andrew's Church, Hamilton, where I ministered for 20 years, and am now in Paris."

Referring then to his text, the speaker said that the verse was a great verse from a great chapter from a great Book. "The Epistle of Paul to the Romans is divided by Bible students into two sections; the first, which is composed of the first eleven chapters, is what is known as the doctrinal section and the last five chapters are known as the more practical section. This verse coming at the beginning of the twelfth chapter is the connecting link between the two sections. Some people of to-day fail to follow the doctrines of the Bible. They say, let us hear of morality, the Ten Commandments and the Sermon on the Mount, but do not bother us with delving into doctrinal truths. So their lives become incompassionated and not firmly rooted in the truth and they so often fall by the wayside. I liken these to plants without roots or lamps without oil.

"Others are great on the Divine truths and often are not so particular about putting into practice that which they study. I liken these to the leaves which a botanist takes and puts in a book, which maintain their form and outline but their fragrance and beauty is gone and they are mere shells of their former beauty.

"I ask you therefore not to forget the words of the text and put together the doctrinal and the practical, for you cannot get along without the two.

Twenty-seven patients subscribed for a total of 31,700 units of the insulin—also a substantial increase over the corresponding month of 1927, when only 18,700 units were given out.

Chooses Pulpit To Sleep Off Souse

WINDSOR, Oct. 1.—A short snooze, snatched Friday afternoon in the pulpit of All Saints' Church, Saturday cost Leo J. Phelan, 32, who gave his address as the Park County Club, Pontiac, $16.50 in Windsor Police Court on a drunk charge.

Evidently feeling intoxication stealing over him, Phelan entered the church. The pulpit looked like a safe retreat while he slept off the jag, so he reeled into it, curled up, and passed out.

Some time later he was seen there, and a policeman was called. He interrupted the slumber of the Pontiac visitor, and brought him to the station. Phelan posted bail of $16.50 to appear in court Saturday, and was released. He failed to appear, and the bail was estreated.

NOVA SCOTIA VOTES TO-DAY

General Election Follows One of Shortest Campaigns in History.

88 CANDIDATES; 43 SEATS.

HALIFAX, N.S. (Canadian Press). —Following one of the shortest election campaign in the history of the province, the electors of Nova Scotia were casting their ballots to-day for the sixteenth Legislature since Confederation, and the 37th since the introduction of Parliamentary Government in Nova Scotia in 1758. Generally fine weather favored the polling.

Both Premier E. N. Rhodes and the Hon. William Chisholm, Liberal party leader, expressed confidence last night in the outcome. Eighty-eight candidates are contesting nineteen constituencies and forty-three seats.

In the last general election in 1925 the Consevative party was swept into power after a Liberal reign of 43 years. Three Liberals were returned against forty Conservatives.

CAR ACCIDENTS ARE NUMEROUS OVER WEEK END

One Girl Is In Hospital and One Automobile Completely Smashed.

AT INTERSECTIONS.

Most of Crashes Occur at Street Crossings—Four at Stop Streets.

Six automobile accidents is the week end toll for Peterborough and district, as far as could be obtained to-day. In all the accidents no one was seriously injured, although one little girl is in the hospital suffering from bruises and cuts. In another one of the cars was demolished to junk, while another car was found to be on fire and the work is thought to be that of a fire bug.

Early Sunday morning Della Gravelle, aged 14, was struck by a car driven by Harry Corbin and received minor injuries. The child, along with several other children, was playing on the roadway. Corbin approached in his car and seeing the children playing attempted to pass them. In missing one he struck the little girl. She was taken to St. Joseph's Hospital, where she is under medical treatment.

Stops On Hill.

A car stalled on the centre of the road without gasoline and with no tail light buraing caused an accident on the provincial highway last night about 8.30 just north of Springville. Carmeno Paterno of Cameron street, North Monaghan, was coming in the Provincial Highway last night when his car ran out of gasoline on the Springville hill. While he was away to get some fuel a car driven by E. W. H. Hackburn, of Dundas, collided with the rear end of his car. The car from Dundas was badly damaged about the radiator and front fenders, while Paterno's car was driven in at the back.

A car driven by Malcolmn Sproats, Gilmour street, and carrying three other occupants, went over the curb at the corner of Water and Smith streets yesterday afternoon and broke off one of P. J. Harrison's gasoline pumps. At the time of the accident, Robert Layfield was driving east on Smith street. On reaching the intersection he stopped. In proceeding he got half way across the street when he noticed Sproats coming south on Water street. Sproats turned to the left to miss hitting Layfield's car and his jar jumped the curb and snapped the gasoline pump off.

Car Wrecked.

On Saturday night about 10.45 at the corner of Stewart and Hunter streets two cars collided with the result that one is a complete wreck and the other is broken about the front. S. E. Gibbs, of Murray street, was proceeding east on Hunter street and Kenneth Willams was coming north on Stewart street. At the intersection the two cars collided, with the result that Gibbs' car was turned over and is a complete wreck and the car driven by Willams is broken about the front.

The car of Bert Graham was struck at the corner of Water and Dublin street early Saturday evening by another car which got away. Graham's car, although not seriously damaged, was forced up on the lawn of Harry Harrison's residence at the corner.

Early Friday evening a car driven by G. E. Livingstone of Water street, collided with a car driven by John Hinds, River Road, at the corner of George and McDonnel streets. Livingstone had been driving east on McDonnel street. At the corner he started to turn north when the car driven north on George by Hinds came on the scene and a collision followed.

Grade Crossings Kill 22.

NEW YORK, Oct. 1.— (Canadian Press.)—Nineteen persons were killed and four critically injured yesterday in six grade crossing accidents in three Eastern States. One such accident at Regina, Sask., cost three lives.

BRITISH CABINET DISCUSSES REPLY

LONDON, Oct. 1 (Canadian Press). —The British Cabinet is understood to have discussed at its meeting today the situation arising from American rejection of the proposals in the Anglo-French naval compromise. Premier Baldwin left later for Balmoral, where he will be minister in attendance on the King.

British Critics Laud The Talking Pictures

LONDON, September 29. — British critics generally agree that the silence of the film drama has been permanently broken by the new art of the "talkies," which were seen in the first full-length theatre program in England on Thursday night. Everything from announcements of future attractions to the full-length film of Al Jolson in The Jazz Singer, and God Save the King, at the conclusion of the program, was reproduced by the sound films without a musician in the theatre. Short films, such as the New York Symphony, a solo by the tenor, Martinelli, and entertaining by Eddie Peabody with his banjo, seemed to please the audience almost as much as the feature film. Critics to-day commented freely on the synchronization and the mechanical perfection, but said that the reproduction tone was not yet perfect, while some seemed to think that Americans ought to cultivate Oxford accents.

SEPTEMBER BUILDING PERMITS ARE FAR AHEAD OF 1927 TOTAL; TOTAL COST QUARTER MILLION

Forty-eight Permits Issued During Month—C.G.E. Takes Out Four.

Peterborough Canoe Extending Plant—Thirteen Garages Authorized.

Buildings in Peterborough took a decided step forward during the last month in comparison to the same month one year ago. During September 48 permits were granted by city engineer Parsons and these involved an estimated cost of $256,105. Four permits were taken out by the Canadian General Electric Company for three new buildings and one addition to their plant. The new Punch Press building being erected by the Ferguson Company of Toronto will cost about $200,000, a permit has been taken out for a garage building 226 feet by 50 feet which will cost $4,000; and a new gate house and Employment office to be erected at a cost of $3,000. This will be 57 feet by 20 feet one story high, and will consist of three rooms. The fourth permit was for a $1,000 extension to the private garage.

Another large permit during the month was granted to T. E. Ephgrave who has been granted the contract to build the addition to the Peterborough Canoe Company at an estimated cost of $6,000.

Permits were taken out for five new dwellings, some of them going up in the best parts of the city.

Thirteen permits were issued for private garages and thirty-one were issued for miscellaneous building and repairing.

During September 1927 there were twenty-six permits issued, nine for garages, three for dwellings and fourteen for miscellaneous with a total of $16,830. The grand total for the year then being $567,950. The total for the nine months of 1928 is $539,732.

WORKMAN HURT AT C.P.C. PLANT

Frank Lafave Badly Cut About Head—Arm Broken.

PLATE GIVES WAY.

Frank Lafaye, of 219 Bethune Street, a workman in the plant of the Canadian Packing Company, was severely injured early this afternoon when the metal plate between a railway car and the shipping dock gave way. He fell to the ground and the plate came down on top of him. He suffered a scalp wound which tore out a triangular piece of flesh about four inches long on his forehead; one arm was broken in three places, and he other is thought to be broken. Dr. Howson was called and had the injured man removed to St. Joseph's Hospital. A car was being loaded at the time of the accident.

Wants Tear Gas To Subdue Bank Robbers

WINDSOR, Oct. 1.—Any bad men who might happen to barricade themselves in a house in Windsor and attempt to hold off police officers may, in future, have to reckon with tear-gas bombs. Chief M. S. Wigle recommended to the Police Commission that the Department have four or five of these bombs on hand for emergencies.

It is not yet known definitely where tear-gas bombs are obtainable in Canada, but the Commission authorized the Chief to find out and report back his findings. The Commission thought it might not be a bad idea to have some such bombs at the disposal of the police.

The bombs, Chief Wigle states, can be purchased for $8 each.

The Chief recommended them not only for gaining entrance to places where desperadoes may be at bay, but for use in dispersing crowds, should there be any illegal gatherings in the city that cannot be handled in any other way.

The part played by tear-gas bombs in the capture of Jaworski, American gangster, in Cleveland, the Chief pointed out, shows how valuable they can be to police in trying situations. While he did not assume that any similar situations may arise in Windsor, he thought it might be well to be prepared for the worst.

The waterside workers of Adelaide, however, decided to call off the strike and are freely applying for licenses to enable their enrollment by shipowners.

British Laborites Gather for Conference

PREPARED TO MAKE DETERMINED BID FOR POWER NEXT ELECTION

Will Improve National Organization and Finances for Big Campaign.

MEET AT BIRMINGHAM

Discuss Proposal for Reform of British Banking and Currency.

BIRMINGHAM, Eng., Oct. 1 (Associated Press).—Labor party delegates from all over the country are assembled here for the second of the great annual party conferences the Conservatives have just met at Great Yarmouth, and the Liberals convene there October 10.

The British Labor Party is preparing for a determined bid for power in the general election next year. Its leader, Ramsay MacDonald, is home from Canada completely recovered in health and ready to plunge into the work of the final session of the present Parliament.

Here, at Birmingham, the Labor Congress will devote itself to improving its national organization and finances for the big campaign to come.

Scores of resolutions will come before the meetings for action, one of them particularly having attracted widespread attention. It is a far-reaching proposal for the reform of British banking and currency, and includes the taking over of the Bank of England by a public corporation which would include representatives of the Government treasury, the Board of Trade, national industry, Labor and co-operative movement.

By this reform Laborites would delegate control of the Bank of England to "Essential factors of the community." Extension of municipal and co-operative banks also is proposed.

Y.P.U. RESUMES WEEKLY MEETINGS

Omemee United Church Young People Enthusiastic As Season Begins.

(Examiner Correspondence).

OMEMEE, Oct. 1.—It was a group of enthusiastic workers who attended the opening meeting of the Young People's Union which was held on Monday evening in the Sunday School room of Trinity Church. The meetings were dispensed with during the summer months, and everyone seemed glad that they have commenced, and all were optimistic as to their success and the benefits derived thereby throughout the coming year.

Arthur Stinson, the president, was in charge. The meeting opened by the singing of a rousing hymn, followed by prayer by Rev. Mr. Blanchard. The scriptural lesson was read by Miss Christina Connell. Rev. Mr. Blanchard then favored the gathering with a pleasing solo, "Nearer, Still Nearer."

The annual play given under the auspices of the Union was discussed, but left over until the next meeting.

Miss Ross was appointed the editor of the League paper, "The Broadcaster," with Misses Christina Connell and Ruth Jones and Messrs. Gordon Bradley and Gordon Marshall as her assistants.

The topic was ably taken by Mr. Blanchard, whose subject was 'Work.' Each letter of this word was a subject in itself, and the speaker did justice to them. "W" for Will, "O" for Opportunity, "R" for Ready, and "K" for Knowledge, were the divisions made.

Ladies' Aid Meets.

The Ladies' Aid of Trinity Church met on Thursday afternoon in the Sunday School room. There were fifteen ladies present. Mrs. W. Henderson, the president, presided. After the opening hymn, the scriptural lesson was read from Psalm 51, by Mrs. J. Bushnell, followed by the Lord's Prayer in unison. Reports were heard from the treasurer and secretary and all correspondence read.

The church blackboard was discussed and a committee of Mrs. E. Bradburn and Mrs. Overholt were appointed to look after the re-lettering of same.

By a majority vote, the annual fowl supper was decided for Thanksgiving Day, with special services on the Sunday previous by Rev. Mr. Blanchard. A committee of Mrs. F. G. Sandy, Mrs. W. Henderson and Miss L. Parsons was appointed to secure talent for the program following the supper. Other necessary arrangements were made, such as the appointment of the ladies to have charge of tables and the tea-room, the ushers, etc.

Mrs. E. Bradburn closed the meeting with prayer.

After the singing of "O for a Thousand Tongues to Sing," Mrs. Fred. Platt read Psalm 111 and Mrs. Clare led in prayer.

The main item of business was the discussion concerning a fowl supper, to be held in connection with the anniversary services on October 21 and 22.

It was decided to buy a step-ladder for the parsonage.

Rev. D. R. Clare closed with prayer.

Mesdames L. Evans, F. Huycke, S. Brenton, Oscar Laver, B. Isaac and N. Gummer were hostesses at the social hour. There were twenty ladies present.

Old Time Fiddlers Contest Draws Crowd At Cmpbellford Exhibition

CAMPBELLFORD, Oct. 1 (Examiner Staff Correspondence).—There was just a little hesitation on the part of the Fair directors when Fred McMullan proposed that one of the attractions in front of the grandstand Friday afternoon be an old-time fiddlers' contest and an open clog-dancing event. But the crowds that swarmed around the platform built specially for the purpose proved that the venture had been a success. Even the judges' stand was invaded for the purpose of seeing all that was going on. Solo dancers and dancers in pairs, took their turn on the platform, while the fiddler stood off in one corner and wore the resin off his bow. Some of the best fiddlers that ever "kittled thairm" took the stand and entertained the crowd with the jigs and reels that were played many years ago.

Fred McMullan played the sweetest tunes and played them the best. This is the opinion of the judges, who gave him the first prize. Thomas O'Rourke was a close second, and there was little to judge between them. Fred Richardson of Dartford was awarded the best opinion for dancing, and he took the first prize, with John McQuigg of Havelock in second place. Both were exceptionally good dancers.

Apparently there were two women equally well dressed. The lady directors of the fair were hard put to it to decide whether Miss Elsie Smith or Miss Carter was the better dressed. Then they gave up and asked the ladies if they would be willing to divide the prize money evenly. Fortunately the contestants were agreeable and a difficult situation was solved.

HARVEST FESTIVAL SERVICES ARE HELD IN CHRIST CHURCH

Campbellford Edifice Beautifully Decorated for Annual Observance.

SPECIAL SERMONS.

Rev. Dr. Boyle, of Cobourg, Preaches in the Evening, Rector in Morning.

CAMPBELLFORD, Oct. 1 (Examiner Staff Correspondence).—Christ Church was beautifully decorated yesterday on the occasion of the annual harvest festival. The entire interior of the building was resplendent with autumn leaves and flowers while produce of the vineyard, of the orchard and of the field were tastefully arranged in the nave of the church. But all the flowers did not signify the joy of thanksgiving. On the altar were flowers placed there in memory of the late Arthur L. Colville. In the font were flowers in memory of the late Robert Linton and the late Frank Linton.

For the occasion, the choir of the church was enlarged by specially invited singers. Under the direction of William Pearson A.L.C.M., the music was considered excellent. Mr. Pearson began his duties as organist of Christ Church with the services yesterday. In the morning there was an anthem by the choir, "Great Is The Lord," Caleb Simper, and in the evening there was also an anthem "His Works of Love," Caleb Simper. Coupled with the announcements of the various activities of the church for the coming week were words of appreciation and gratitude to those who had so beautifully decorated the interior of the church and also to those who had donated the decorations. The rector also expressed the appreciation of the congregation to J. R. Wilkinson, for a new concrete walk which had been laid at his expense, as a gift to the church.

The Rev. Dr. T. Stannage Boyle, Cobourg, was the preacher at the evening service. Dr. Boyle chose as his text, Luke 16, verse 2, "Give an account of thy stewardship." There were, he said, a number of different ways of looking at human beings. The medical man saw his fellows from one angle, the philosopher had quite a different view. There was also the view as a Christian would see it. To him, every man appeared as a person capable of being able to distinguish between right and wrong. Some men were inclined to distinguish between right and wring. Some men were inclined to distinguish less rigidly than others. This point he illustrated by the parable of the dishonest steward who, knowing that he was about to be reprimanded and called to account to his master, resorted to a clever ruse of forgiving parts of debts as a means of gaining the good-will of those under his jurisdiction. But the owner to who he was accountable outdid him by admitting that he had done a wise thing and complimenting him for his keen business methods.

But men were not entirely judged by their numbers of evil deeds. Their good deeds also were to be considered. This belief, Dr. Boyle illustrated by what he termed a modern story. It was of a man who approached the judgment gates and when his record of bad deeds was investigated, it was found that he had committed none that were not entirely obliterated by the blood of Christ. He was about to enter the place of eternal happiness when he was detained while his record of good deeds was looked into. Here too he had a blank page. His life had accounted for nothing.

Man's immortal soul was not his personal property, said the speaker. It was sent from God and to God it would have to be returned. When the time came for its return, there would have to be an accounting. God had kept his promise, that so long as earth remains, seed time and harvest shall not fail. Therefore it was right and proper that one Sunday each year should be set aside for praise and thanksgiving to God for His goodness and bounty during the past seasons. It was also fitting that the flowers and fruit should be brought into the church as a material recognition of His goodness.

At the morning service, the Rev. N. Clarke Wallace occupied the pulpit. His text was the first verse of the nineteenth Psalm: "The heavens declare the glory of God; and the firmament sheweth his handiwork." With this as a basis for his oration, the rector expressed the opinion that the harvest festival was not a shallow demonstration, but a very sincere expression of thanks to God for His goodness. It was not a new ordinance in the church, but dated back as far as civilization itself. In those days, particularly the days when Greece was a power, everything in nature was recognized as the product or demonstration of some divine

HAVELOCK W.I. PLANS SERVICE

Will Try to Get More Industries to Locate in the Village.

PAPERS READ.

(Examiner Correspondence).

HAVELOCK, Oct. 1.—Many suggestions were given at the regular meeting of the Havelock Women's Institute in the Town Hall on Thursday afternoon as to how the organization could serve their community, and one especially good was given by Mrs. Morrison, who advised the spending of some of th Institute funds in advertising vacant lots in town as building sites for industrial concerns, thus providing employment at home for our young people who at present go elsewhere for it. The people of the surrounding country would also benefit as a ready market for farm produce would always be at hand.

Mrs. A. Anderson gave a paper on "Institute Activities," which was much appreciated by all. She classified the activities of the Institute under the following headings:

Education—The chief purpose of the Institute is to make towards greater efficiency in the multiplicity of duties which face women of responsibility and the members are generally utilizing to good advantage, the literature available from various sources. In the regular meetings the members have an opportunity to pass on to each other the information gained in the school of practical experience.

Home Economics—The Institute is taking a keen interest in the housing, feeding and clothing of the family. In housing, sanitary requirements and labor-saving equipment are stressed. Relative and absolute values in clothing, food and house equipment are being studied.

Health—The Institute has always taken a keen interest in the care of the sick and preventive measures and a deeper interest is now being taken in health, education and regular medical examination.

Agriculture—Many of the members of the Women's Institutes live on the land, and are interested in all efforts put forth for the betterment of agriculture. At many meetings the study of poultry raising, beekeeping, dairying and small fruit raising are regular features.

Immigration—The Institutes are deeply interested in the Canadianization and the education of the newcomer, and are taking a neighborly interest in the families, and many a new-comer has been assisted to "get on his feet." The Institute co-operate with both the Provincial and Dominion Governments in helping families and individuals to get successfully and happily established locally. The Children's Aid Societies are assisted in securing good homes for children and are keeping a watchful eye on children of school age to see that they get a fair chance for education.

Relief—In many of the Institutes there is a relief committee which inquirs into cases of the needy in their district. Liberal support—money, fruit, clothing, supplies—is given to charitable and public institutions, such as local hospitals, homes for the aged, children shelters, institutes for the blind, Red Cross, etc.

Miss Minnie Pollock [illegible] friends in Colborne.

GLORIOUS good health—the greatest blessing known to mankind—is brought within the reach of all by the recent reduction in the prices of "Ovaltine."

Health depends upon nourishment. "Ovaltine" supplies those health-giving food essentials which are often missing from our daily dietary. Then, too, "Ovaltine" supplies concentrated nourishment. One cup of "Ovaltine" supplies more nourishment than 12 cups of beef tea or 3 eggs.

"Ovaltine" is a perfectly balanced food. It contains all the fats, proteins, carbohydrates and mineral salts which are essential to health in scientifically correct proportions. The necessary vitamins are likewise present—also in correct ratio.

This delicious beverage makes every meal complete in nutritive value. It is not only easily and completely assimilated—even when the digestion is impaired—but it assists the digestion of several times its weight of ordinary food.

Consider the constituents from which "Ovaltine" is made. Ripe barley malt, creamy milk from England's richest pastures, eggs, and a cocoa flavouring. Milk is Nature's food par excellence. Eggs provide the only reliable source for supplying lecithin (organic phosphorus)—the essential requirement for building up brain and nerves.

In every part of the civilised world and in countless thousands of homes "Ovaltine" is relied upon as the natural means for obtaining good health. The reduced prices bring "Ovaltine" within the purchasing powers of every home and will enable it to be used regularly by everyone. It is the most economical as well as the most perfect form of concentrated nourishment in the world.

KEEPING THEM AT HOME.

The suggestion made by a well-known Nova Scotian that a head tax of $500 be levied on every person moving from Canada into the United States would seem to be the acme of foolishness.

Interference with personal liberty is almost a religion with some people.

Our best plan to keep Canadians at home is not to be found in any such ridiculous method as this half-baked proposal from the Maritimes.

It rather lies in seeing to it that opportunities for making a living and conditions generally are better here than in any other spot on the map.

Those who leave now do so because they expect to better their position.

If we can't convince them that the land of greatest opportunity is this Canada of ours, then it is nonsense to talk about head taxes to hold them.

TRAINING COOKS.

When it comes to new methods of attracting and holding tourist business the Quebec Government manages to keep ahead of the provincial parade.

Where else in Canada would the powers-that-be have conceived the idea of a provincial school of cooking to be open for those employed in hotels and others who are cont emplating employment in such establishments?

The courses are to be free and will be conducted by experts at the Provincial Household Service School in Montreal, the first class to be held in April.

Quebec's Minister of Roads, who is responsible for the Government cooking school idea, has evidently been studying the tourist industry to some purpose.

He has seen the favorable impression made upon a tourist by the beautiful scenery surrounding a summer hotel entirely ruined by a tough steak or a leathery pie, and he proposes to remedy that condition.

As the Ottawa Journal puts it, "a great many public men elsewhere would be afraid of ridicule if they started to establish cooking schools. Quebec sees good money in it, in the promotion of visiting tourist business, and so goes ahead. And why not? It can't cost much."

MANY CHILDREN PROTECTED.

In the schools of Peterborough alone some 2,000 pupils have been immunized against diphtheria, and this number does not include children who have been innoculated by the family doctor.

This is a very notable advance in public health work, and does much to ensure Peterborough against an epidemic of diphtheria.

There are, however, many children who have not yet been immunized, and it is hoped that the parents of such children will take advantage of the opportunity provided this week when free innoculation is being offered.

In spite of the large number of children treated, there have been no reports of any serious disorder following the innoculation, nor has there been a case in which one of these children so treated contracted diphtheria.

In a word, the innoculation is effective and harmless, according to the history of the treatment here and elsewhere.

Every child in Peterborough should be safeguarded against Diphtheria, and can be—if the parents embrace the opportunity that is now before them.

"PRIDE GOES," ETC.

There is unusual satisfaction, at least down in this end of the Province, at the capture of the Ontario senior baseball championship by the Belleville Nationals.

One explanation of this is, of course, geographic; Eastern Ontario is glad to be known as the home of the provincial championships.

But more potent than that reason is the fact that the Walkerville team were so flamboyantly boastful about their superiority that there was a general hope that these swaggerers would be taught a lesson.

An American humorist once said that he admired the rooster for two things—the way he crowed and the spurs he had to back up that crow.

Evidently the Walkerville Chicks had the crow but lacked the spurs, and it should be possible for youthful athletes who contrast all the boasting that emanated from the border country recently with the performance at the team responsible for such boasting to obtain a useful lesson.

The real sportsman knows how to win gracefully and to accept defeat without complaint.

The other type are lucky to have any friends even when they win, and are sure to find the world against them when they are defeated.

Thus the toppling of the proud Walkerville team is causing chuckles wherever baseball fans meet throughout Ontario.

NEVER WAS BETTER IN THE WEST.

Mr. D. G. McKenzie's view of the Western situation should be pleasing to every Canadian. When the West is prosperous the East is prosperous. There are some Easterners who have still to learn this truth, but their number becomes smaller each year.

Mr. McKenzie is a member of the Advisory Board on Tariff and Taxation. He was born in the West and is the son of a man who was a pioneer in various farmers' movements. His opinion, therefore, is one of value. "In the whole history of the West," he says, "I do not think that prosperity has ever reached a higher or more promising point. It is not alone the record crop, but the unparalleled activity which it is bearing on its back."

As proof of his statement, Mr. McKenzie cites the unusual demand for new agricultural machinery, the best possible evidence of good times. When conditions are bad, farmers get along with what they have, as best they can. But they are buying machinery in large quantities this year, so large, indeed, that the dealers have been hard pressed to meet the demand.

Another evidence of prosperity noted by Mr. McKenzie is the extensive amount of farm building now in progress. It is almost unprecedented, he says. Good farm houses and other structures are going up almost everywhere. The sale of portable granaries has been heavy. The building of elevators goes on at a rapid rate. In Manitoba, Saskatchewan and Alberta, 615 new elevators have been erected this year, and in Mr. McKenzie's opinion there will be a continuing demand for these structures.—St. Catharines Standard.

AN ENEMY OF SMITH.

In the picturesque presidential contest in the United States—picturesque because of Governor Smith's personality and the bigoted style of some of the assaults made upon him—one of the curiosities is W. R. Hearst's opposition. This opposition is serious enough. Hearst owns a number of the widely-circulated daily newspapers of the United States. And these are, or have been, supporters of the Democratic party in politics. When Hearst attacks Smith, therefore, which means that all his newspapers attack Smith, the Democratic candidate for President is hit below the belt, so to speak.

Whence, why and wherefore?

The story goes back to 1920, and the New York Democratic State Convention at Syracuse. Hearst wanted to be United States senator from New York State. His ambition was to be President, and he undoubtedly figured to become senator first, and use that as a stepping stone to the Democratic nomination for the presidency. And as Hearst and his newspapers were undoubtedly a power—more so then than now—the Tammany chief of that day, Charles F. Murphy, promised Hearst the Democratic nomination for senator.

The thing seemed settled. Tammany was supposed to rule the Democratic roost in New York State.

Just one person prevented the execution of this genial plan to inflict Mr. Hearst upon the United States Senate, and that person was Mr. Alfred E. Smith, who was running for governor. When informed that Hearst had been picked by Tammany as his running mate, Mr. Smith responded with a firm and emphatic "No." Murphy threatened, pleaded and promised, to no avail. Mr. Smith would not have Mr. Hearst. He did not like Mr. Hearst, he did not trust Mr. Hearst, and, if Mr. Hearst was going to be the candidate for senator, he, Mr. Al. Smith, positively would not be the candidate for governor. Further, said Mr. Smith, if Mr. Murphy persisted in his intention, he would throw all his power against Mr. Hearst, and if necessary against Tammany also, both on the floor of the convention and from the public platform.

It was an audacious thing to do. It amounted to repudiation of Tammany, without the aid of which no Democrat may hopefully aspire to office in New York, by a man for whom the rewards of long public service were just approaching. It might have meant the end of Mr. Smith's career. But he knew his personal popularity, and believed it should weigh heavier in the balance than Hearst's enmity or friendship. It did. Murphy capitulated and Hearst was dropped.

Since that, Smith has been no favorite of Hearst. Hearst does not forget. Hearst calls himself a Democrat; Smith is a Democrat. Hearst is against Prohibition; Smith is against Prohibition. Hearst is against high tariff; Smith is against high tariff. The two do not differ on any other public grounds. By all odds and on all counts, W. R. Hearst, if he had any decent public principle, would be doing all in his power with his newspapers to be promoting the candidature for President of Alfred E. Smith. Instead he is doing all he can to defeat him. The fact can be accepted as an illustration of the characters of both men. One feels inclined to love Governor Smith for the enemies he makes.—Ottawa Journal.

EDITORIAL NOTES AND COMMENT.

Walkerville may not consent to be taken in with Windsor, but the home of the Chicks had nothing to say about being taken in by Belleville.

Now that the big league baseball season is over, Messrs. Smith and Hoover will only have the World's Series as opposition in holding the attention of the American people.

It is to be hoped the candidate named to oppose Miss Agnes MacPhail in Southeast Grey is not also in favor of filling in the Trent Waterway to make a motor highway.

At least there is this to be said of Governor Al. Smith's addresses as heard over the radio. They are never dull.

GOD'S MINUTE.

Peace be to the brethren, and love with faith, from God the Father and the Lord Jesus Christ. Grace be with all them that love our Lord Jesus Christ in sincerity. Amen.—Ephes., 6:23-24.

Dear Father, at the beginning of another day we come before Thee, after the quiet rest of the night, to thank Thee that Thou has spared our lives to see this day, for all the days are Thine; the cattle on a thousand hills are Thine; the water in the brook is Thine and the fish in the sea are Thine; so why should we concern ourselves about the temporal things of this life, knowing and believing that Thou art able and willing to take care of us, and provide for our every need. So we come to Thee with great boldness, trusting in Thee for all that is necessary to sustain us. We most humbly beseech Thee to pour out Thy Holy Spirit upon us, and to guide us in all that we may do or think or say, that we may be kept from harm and sin, and be made pure and good within.

Help us to praise and adore and magnify Thy Holy Name, for all Thy goodness and love for us this day of our lives on earth, for Jesus' sake. Amen.

A Thought

WANTED A MAN

A man for hard work and rapid promotion—a man who can find things to be done without the help of a manager and three assistants.

A man who gets to work on time in the morning and does not imperil the lives of others in an attempt to be first off the job at night.

A man who is neat in appearance and does not sulk for an hour's overtime in emergencies.

A man who listens carefully when he is spoken to and asks only enough questions to insure the acurate carrying out of instructions.

A man wh moves quickly and makes as little noise as possible about it.

A man who moves quickly and makes the eye and tells the truth every time.

A man who does not pity himself for having to work.

A man who is cheerful, courteous to everyone and determined to 'make good."

This man is wanted everywhere. Age or lack of experience does not count. There isn't any limit, except his own ability, to the number or size of the jobs he can get. He is wanted in every business.

This arrangement is quite satisfactory to the cheesemakers, as it saves them a second trip to get their cheese back to the factory after the fair, and those in charge except this order of things will insure a greater number of cheese being exhibited at Stirling Fair.

Dance Held

The Arlie Marks Stock Company played to capacity houses both nights of the fair, and the entertainments furnished proved satisfactory to those present.

A dance was held in the Community Hall on Wednesday night by Tommy Mason's orchestra from Belleville. A large number greeted them.

CATTLE, GRAIN AND PRODUCE

CHICAGO GRAIN

CHICAGO, Ills., Oct. 1 (Canadian Press).—Spectacular trading in September delivery of corn culminated yesterday with surrender by leaders who were reputed to own the bulk of the country's visible supply. The Waterloo was signalized by a big tumble in prices, 11½c a bushel as compared with Friday's finish. Oncoming of a large crop of new corn apparently made discretion the better part of valor and despite expectance to the contrary, no end-of-the-month corner in corn was attempted.

Corn closed excited as to September contracts but otherwise only slightly affected, September finishing at a net loss of 7½c to 11½c, with other months off a shade to ¾c. Wheat closed unsettled ½c to 2c net lower; oats unchanged to ¾c off, and provisions unchanged to a rise of 30c.

All eyes in the gral ntrade turned yesterday to the corn pit here where a battle royal was looked for between powerful speculative forces. One one side were a group of dealers who in July as a consequence of previous operations had acquired ownership of some millions of bushels of corn here the largest accumulation anywhere in the United States and who were apparently hoping to realize large profits. Against this group were another hardy set who held opposite views of corn values based on the effect of indications of a bountiful supply of new corn soon to be available.

For weeks past, the outcome has been in doubt with every evidence of a nip and tuck struggle going on in the corn market here. The doubt as to who would win continued until the very last hour of the last day in which September contracts could be settled.

Then, offerings suddenly began to expand, and the market collapsed. More than half of the day's corn losses came in the final thirty minutes of trading.

A wild finish was witnessed with simultaneous trades as much as 3½c apart in different sections of the corn pit. Closing prices for September corn were in some cases 32c a bushel under the season's top level, and 21c down as compared with less than a fortnight ago. The victory went to the traders who had put their faith in Mother Nature, and had relied on the psychological effect of a big crop nearly at hand as against the results of present almost empty bins everywhere except in Chicago.

Wheat and oats were responsive at the last to weakness of the corn market. Earlier, adverse weather for wheat in Australia, together with unfavorable labor condition at Australian seaports had a temporary bullish effect, hedging sales of wheat, however, from the Northwest and lack of export demand except for low grade Canadian wheat contributed to late downturns in wheat values.

Provisions were firmer influenced by upturns in the price of hogs.

STERLING EXCHANGE

MONTREAL, Que., Oct. 1 (Canadian Press).—Sterling exchange rates were quoted Saturday as follows:

Demand $4.84⅝ to ¾.
Cables, $4.85 1-16 to ⅛.

MONTREAL GRAIN AND PRODUCE

MONTREAL, Que., Oct. 1 (Canadian Press).—The demand from foreign buyers for Canadian grains here Saturday showed some improvement and a fair amount of business was done in No. 3 Northern and the lower grades of wheat. A firm feeling prevailed in the local cash grain market with a moderate amount of business passing for shipment to outside points.

The inquiry for Spring and Winter wheat grades of flour continued good and values were firm.

The trade in all lines of mill feed continued active and values were unchanged. The market for standard grades of rolled oats was active and firm.

A feature of the egg situation was the stronger feeling that developed for fresh grades and values were marked up three cents per dozen. This was attributed to the good demand and the light receipts. The receipts Saturday were 460 cases.

Little business was done in butter but prices were unchanged. The receipts were 3,884 packages.

Owing to the continued indifferent demand from English importers for cheese, the undertone to the market was weaker and prices were shaded a fraction. The receipts were 13,361 boxes.

QUAKE-PROOF BUILDINGS MARK NEW CONSTRUCTION STYLES

Japanese engineers are developing new styles in architecture through which they hope to withstand earthquakes, says Popular Mechanics Magazine. By their efforts to erect structures that an inner-truss system of bracing, and will be proof against earthquakes, other innovations, a steel building has been made to withstand shocks twice as great as the last most serious tremor there, when the "vibrating width" was placed at four and one-half inches. It is said that this new building can stand vibrations having an amplitude of ten inches.

FARMER'S WIFE GETS STRENGTH TO DO HER WORK

By taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

St. John, New Brunswick.—"I was all run-down from a pain in my back and my left leg bothered me so sometimes that I was unable to do my work. I saw your ad in the newspapers and decided to give your medicine a trial. I have taken over seven bottles of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and am now relieved of this suffering. I am a farmer's wife and have three children. I tell all my friends of your Vegetable Compound and I am sure that when it helps me it will help them. I am willing to answer letters from women asking about the Vegetable Compound. All thanks to Lydia E. Pinkham!"—Mrs. Arthur N. Dennison, 183 Wentworth St., St. John, New Brunswick.

ATTEMPTED LAW BREAKING CHARGED TO GOVE[illegible]

Attorney [illegible] written at the request o[illegible] Church Officials, as I am the eldest living descendant of [illegible] settlers.
BY MATILDA MEHARRY WICKENS.

Early in the nineteenth century, pioneers who came to this part of Canada first settled along the water fronts, but following the call to something new, something beyond new arrivals pressed on farther into the forest, carrying the torch of civilization and gradually opened up Central Ontario.

Of such were three families from Cavan County, Ireland, who went six miles farther north than others had gone, the first pioneers of Fair Mount. These were Robert Morrow and his wife Letitia Meharry, with their four daughters and son William," Rev. Moses Blackstock, his wife Jane Morrow, with two small daughters (one of whom was my mother), and Hugh Meharry, with his wife, Mary Jackson, two daughters, and an eight-year-old son Robert, who was to be my father.

Nine long weeks and three days in a small sailing vessel they had been in crossing the Atlantic to Quebec. From Quebec six weeks more were spent on river and lake in the old Durham boats before Port Hope was reached. When in river or canal these boats were often towed from the shore by man-power, and if the rope broke and anyone was left standing the amount of his pulling ability was the subject of much derision.

Rev. M. Blackstock went on to York—now Toronto—to complete arrangements for securing the farms which had been negotiated for before leaving the Old Country. Each man and grown up son received 100 acres. Then, leaving the women and children in Port Hope for the winter, they walked the 22 miles, largely through the bush to what is now the 12th Concession of Cavan Township in Durham County to claim their land. The Blackstock farm lay to the west—east across a road allowance, came the Morrow's 200 acres for father and son, then intervened 200 acres of Clergy Reserve; beyond that was the Meharry 100 acres. This Clergy Reserve land had been obtained from the Government largely due to the power of the "Fighting Bishop," Rev. Dr. [illegible]nahan, and comprised 1-7 of all [illegible]nd in Upper Canada which was [illegible] for the use and purposes of [illegible] Church. After days of labor, sleeping at night by the side of logs, the small houses were built and patches of land cleared for cultivation, logs were made into squared timber, boards were sawn in a saw-pit at a hollow place just back of this church where used to grow an old cherry tree. Before snow melted in the spring the families were brought north on sleds hauled by oxen and housekeeping began in earnest by these three families—the first pioneers of Fair Mount, for that was the name given to the new community by my greatgrandfather, Robert Morrow. In the Blackstock house services were held each Sunday, and years ago, when my mother was past her fourscore years, she said to me one day: "It is lonely to be the last member of the old church, tho' my tent cords are being gently loosened"—she was referring not to this present church, but to the church in her father's home where all the settlers of that part met, including the McIndoos, who came in 1820, the Eyres in 1822, the Dundass families in 1823, and others. Her father was the minister, her grandfather the class leader, her mother a Sabbath school assistant. It was even then a union of churches, her grandfather had been choir leader in an Anglican church, and Hugh Meharry a Presbyterian elder in the Old Land. The first Morrow promised the land for this church, his son and grandsons gave it. On the corner across the way, land was given on the Blackstock farm for a school. When children needed a school, excellent teachers came from Old Country colleges, their descendants being among our leading men in church and state to-day. Later, we had Canadian teachers who had been trained in schools supported by the funds from the sale of old Clergy Reserve lands.

The First Minister.

Rev. Moses Blackstock was the first minister of any denomination in the three northern Townships of Durham County, one of the first in others east and west and in Peterborough as soon as it began, assisting at the dedication of the first Wesleyan Church, going to Rice Lake to preach, by interpretation to the Indians, and to other encampments. He was one of the saddle-bag ministers of whom Rev. Dr. Graham spoke in his sermon on Confederation anniversary in Metropolitan Church Toronto. "They went everywhere preaching the salvation of a risen Saviour." His sermon also applies to the noble men and women of Fair Mount.

"The highest praise must be given to those pioneers who blazed the way for the Dominion's present greatness, they broke the stillness of the primeval forest with the ringing axe and wrested a field of grain from the fastnesses of timber land, and the splendid women who ground the wheat between two rough stones, spun the wool for the cloth to make the family clothing, grew the flax and put it through all its processes into household linen, helped the men to clear land, plant the seed and reap the grain. When sickness came to a family, doctors were few and far away and trained nurses unknown; those who were well, in turn nursed the sick until relief or the great change came. Our mothers and grandmothers did all this.

I copy from Rev. Peter Jones, a converted Indian who was often at the Blackstock house, or, as he said, "Friend Moses'" house, to hold a service, of some days after he'd taught the Indians to build a snow chapel. He wrote: "We dug the snow away and formed an encampment in a circle, poles were stuck in the ground, which we covered with bark and hemlock boughs, and kept a great fire in the centre. Here we instructed the Indians in the Lord's Prayer and some of the commandments and hymns and many could soon repeat them." Mother said the snow chapel was very pretty at night; it was in her father's door yard. The Indians were encamped in the Howden wood, near at hand. In fact, they were never far away.

When the Blackstock house was too small for the congregation, services were held in the school-house. The circuit minister came alternate Sundays for some time after this church was built. I can only remember Revs. Young, Morton, Demerest, and everyone's friend, Dr. John Sanderson, who always came to fill a vacancy and was loved by all, up to a ripe old age. This church was built in 1858. My grandfather went to the United States in '56, but there he continued his church work for some years, even to his last evening, when he assisted at the services, then in a couple of hours he was called to come up higher"—his wife had [illegible] years previously.

Bu[illegible] the Church.

In looking [illegible] the little log school-house [illegible] see the men at work and [illegible] of the trowels fitting [illegible] door frames or windo[illegible] gons coming with necessa[illegible] like olden times "everyone [illegible] ad it in his heart to do [illegible] big day when the churc[illegible] pleted. Rev. Richard W[illegible] his brother James were our [illegible] Rev. Lanten of Peterborough [illegible] ed the dedicatory sermon [illegible] morning. Rev. John Bredin, a[illegible] friend of the older members in afternoon, and Rev. R. Whiting [illegible] night. On Monday evening there was a tea, and as usual, I suppose, the general good time. After the Whitings we had Rev. Stobbs, Slater, Cosford, Clarke, Coleman, Barker, Cleworth, Buchanan, etc. In those early days hymn books were not numerous, the minister read two lines, John Sanderson led in singing, two more lines were read and the verse thus completed—not an easy matter for a leader.

The first trustees of the church were William Morrow, William Eyres, Sr., and Captain Dundass. William Morrow was also Recording Stewart for the circuit (Millbrook), Robert Meharry steward for Fair Mount Church. Class-leaders following the first one, R. Morrow, were William Eyres, Sr. and Jr., and John Sanderson. William Morrow, Jr., was S.S. superintendent for many years. In his case, as in others, when one moved away or laid down the burden, another brother took it up and faithfully carried it. Thomas Morrow was leader of the singing, assisted by others he helped to train.

Mr. Thomas McIndoo is the only descendant of the original pioneers remaining on his father's farm, or his grandfather's, and nobly following in the path his father cleared to the church. His grandmother was my father's sister, Elizabeth Meharry. His mother many of you knew and loved.

The first seats in this church had been in the British Methodist Church in Peterborough until its union with the Wesleyan. The Eyres and Dundasses and others had also been B. M.'s. These unions all enriched Fair Mount and also many who had at first attended the Anglican Church on the Middle Line. Many of the pioneers of two or three generations are sleeping in that old 9th Cemetery—Morrows, Blackstocks, Meharry's, Dundasses, and others. Some are in the old "Gardiner's Cemetery" (the beginning of Millbrook Church) and more at the Middle Line, the Anglican.

MAURICE D. KLEIN ARCHITECT TORONTO

THE DUTCH COLONIAL HOME
Maurice D. Klein, Architect.

The first impression one gets of this home is that it is good in design, of careful layout and clever detail. It would suit the elderly couple or the newly-weds.

Knowing that the color scheme is an important item of this design it was decided the brick sills and base must be of a deep dull red cull brick with gray white joints. The stucco is gray white and one can readily visualize the happy appearance of home with a roof of blue green shingles and shutters of the same color, only slightly darker. The entrance, dormers and clapboarding were carried out in an ivory white tone.

The layout is on the centre hall plan with living room admirably proportioned on one side and dining room and kitchen on the other.

The living room has lights on either side and has a Colonial designed fireplace and French doors leading out onto the garden terrace.

The dining room has lights on both sides and is large enough for the average family.

The kitchen with all modern conveniences completes the first floor plan. A unique part of this floor is the exposed beams and sheathed ceiling finished in a simple whitewash.

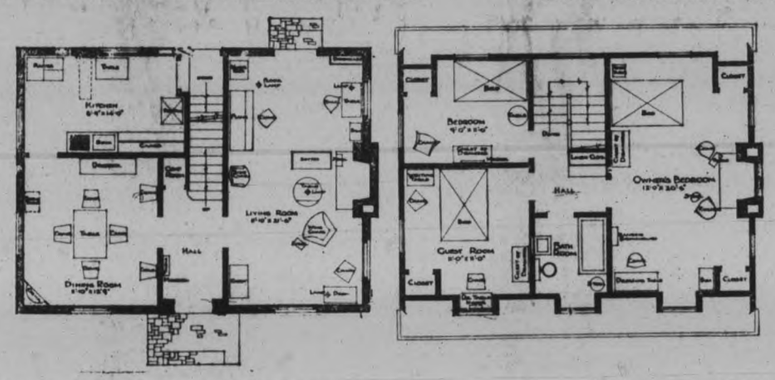
Characteristic "L" hinges and thumb-latch hardware is used throughout.

Upstairs is an exceptionally large master bedroom with fireplace and two large clothes closets. The other two bed-rooms are of good size, lighted on two sides and having convenient access to the bathroom. A built-in linen closet completes this floor.

A glance at the plans will give the reader an idea of the furniture arrangement.

The overall dimensions of the house are 23 ft. by 31 ft. and the contents about 19,251 cubic feet. Exclusive of lot it would cost approximately $6,300.

Readers desiring further information regarding a house of this design should communicate with Home Building Information Service, 345 Adelaide St. West, Toronto, Ont., who will see that it is supplied. When writing please mention Design No. 142. Copyright 1928.



WIRING SYSTEM STATISTICS FOR HOME BUILDERS

The comfort and satisfaction derived from a home is measured by convenience. In a modern home convenience is, to a great extent, a matter of electrical service, the effectiveness of this service depends on the completeness of the wiring system. Complete wiring is neither complicated nor expensive.

A complete wiring system should provide adequate outlets, conveniently controlled, using the best materials throughout and include the following essential elements:

First—A safety entrance switch.

Second—A safety distribution panel (where the fuses are).

Third—A bell ringing transformer.

Fourth—Metal boxes for light, switch and convenience outlets.

Fifth—A tumbler switch at every doorway.

Sixth—At least one standard outlet in each room.

Seventh—A minimum of one convenience outlet to every 15 ft. of baseboard.

The completely wired home opens its doors to the whole range of home machinery. Here the vacuum cleaner takes over the hard labor of sweeping and furniture cleaning. Here the electric washing machine and electric ironer lift the drudgery of the laundry from the housewife's shoulders. Here a tiny motor performs the hard tasks of the kitchen.

In your home you can realize complete electrical satisfaction only if you are able to make convenient use of electrical appliances—only as you can change the arrangement of the lamps as you desire—only as you can make electricity servant who follows or procedes you from room to room, ready at every point to light your way and lighten your labor.

Complete wiring is the road to a hundred comforts. Electric heating devices, percolators, urns, toasters, grills and the like are available on the porch or in the sun parlor in summer, in the dining room and living room at all times, and, when occasion requires, in the bedrooms and sickroom. Electric fans supply cooling breezes and keep the air live and fresh in any part of the house; electric heaters make cozy the cold corners in fall and winter, while electric curling irons, heating pads, and flatirons can be used at any convenient point.—Copyright 1926. BOYS RESCUED ON CLEAR LAKE

Hugh Matthews Rows Out in Skiff When Sailboat Upsets.

PERILOUS VOYAGE.

(Examiner Correspondence).

LAKEFIELD, Oct. 1.—Hugh Matthews had a narrow escape last Saturday, while assisting in the rescue of three American boys whose sail-boat upset in Clear Lake. Mr. Matthews was near Bryson's Landing at the time, and was engaged in conversation with Mr. Pratt, who has a cottage near there, when they saw the overturned boat and hastened to the rescue with a skiff. They were able to get the three young men into the boat, which was so heavily loaded that water was shipped every minute. The boys were ordered by Mr. Pratt to use their efforts in baling the boat with their caps, and after a struggle with the high wind, the craft made the shore. The trip was full of thrills as the rescuers felt that it was only a kind providence which saved them from being swamped. Beyond inevitable colds, following the chilly experience, there were no ill effects.

FRENCH TAKE FOOD SERIOUSLY

English Writer Tells of Enjoyment of Eating in France.

COOKING WELL DONE.

London, Eng., Oct. 1 (C.P.)—The editor of the Women's Department in "Overseas," in Paris, has made some interesting notes about things. She said: "It is most entertaining for a time to move amongst people who seem to have stepped out of a fashion-paper, or off the stage, who wear the latest colors in frocks, the latest thing in hats, the latest fashion in jewellery. I watched the young of many nations dancing under the chestnut trees in the sunshine at the Chateau de Madrid, a famous restaurant close to the Bois de Cologne. Many of the girls were exceedingly pretty, and they all wore chiffon or crepe-de-chine frocks with tight little hats to match and had solitaire diamond rings on their fingers. When the dancing was over they slid away in noiseless cars, with fur-trimmed coats, matching their frocks, flung around them. The men were much less attractive, in fact, they were not attractive at all. No man in the world can compare to an Englishman of the best type.

"Again, it is pleasant in France to be quite sure whether you are travelling by train or by car, to know that wherever you go or wherever you happen to be you may be quite certain of getting well-cooked food. I shall never understand why English people, as a whole, who are so energetic in so many ways, cannot take the trouble to learn to cook properly. If they did, English food would be the best in the world. As it is, I enjoy omelettes and mushrooms, green peas and carrots, salads and cream cheese, wild strawberries and cream, and almost everything in Paris infinitely more than I do in London. And frogs' legs are to be recommended as an occasional dainty. I know a little restaurant in Paris where I can sit at my ease and watch rows of chickens being roasted on a spit, where, when they are ready, they are cut into four with a pair of small shears and a moment afterwards garnished with watercress, are placed at precisely the right moment in front of Messieurs les Clients to be eaten and enjoyed. Food is a serious matter in France and cannot be treated with levity. But all the time I am conscious of a feeling that after all there are other things far more important than either frocks or food, and that insistence on a high standard of physical comfort and fashionable clothes can become intolerably boring.

"I return glad that I am British and I can live in my own country among my own folk, where more vital matters than the menu of my next meal or the color of my next dress fills the foreground of my life."

ATTEMPTED LAW BREAKING CHARGED TO GOVERNMENT

Attorney-General of British Columbia Takes Issue on Liquor Imports.

METHODS OF EXPORT.

Alleged Proposal Made to Accept Shipment for Spokane

VANCOUVER, Oct. 1.—Attorney-General R. H. Pooley suddenly landed on the liquor ring of British Columbia Saturday with the most staggering blow it has received in recent years.

First he rejected applications for the right to establish new distilleries in British Columbia, and to import liquor for blending purposes. Then he flatly turned down the request of the Federal Government for his consent to the importation and export of liquor to the United States by private British Columbia export houses. And on top of that he vigorously charged the Federal Government with an attempt to break its own liquor law, with his consent, by allowing a liquor export company to import a carload of whiskey into Vancouver for export to Spokane via the mountain bootleg trails of the interior. In this case, Mr. Pooley's consent to the movement of the liquor, now in Vancouver, was refused along with his refusal on all other proposals to evade the spirit of the Federal liquor law.

Unless the Federal Government acts without the consent of the British Columbia Attorney-General, as it has done in the past, Mr. Pooley's drastic move will blast the plans of liquor concerns which have been preparing to bring large quantities of liquor into this province for export to the United States, despite the fact that Parliament at its last session prohibited any importation except by the Provincial Government or by licensed distillers.

Quietus on Distilleries

In the same way Mr. Pooley put the quietus on schemes of interests which were planning to establish big distilling companies in this province and use the provisions of the present Federal law to import enormous quantities of liquor, ostensibly for blending purposes. These distilling companies, of course, would have engaged in the export business on a large scale. They can not be established now unless the Federal Government breaks its former rule in securing the consent of the provincial AttorneyGeneral before permitting the establishment of any distillery.

Responsibility for proposing the storage and movement of liquor in British Columbia in contravention to the spirit of the present Federal law was placed by Mr. Pooley squarely up to the Federal Government itself, through its Department of Customs and Excise. All requests for his consent to the storage and movement of liquor by exporters came from the Federal Department, he declared.

Mr. Pooley's sensational announcement was made after he had taken the necessary steps in his department to implement his liquor policy.

"There have been many applications to this department," he said, "for the consent of the Attorney-General for the storage of liquor, in what are known as class three customs warehouses. These liquors have been imported by liquor export warehouses. Without doubt the purpose is to export the liquor to the United States and in some cases to sell locally.

"This province has been very active in insisting on the passing of the Federal Act prohibiting the importation of liquor into the province, other than by the Government and by distilleries for blending purposes. This Act came into force on June 11 of this year.

Federal Jurisdiction.

"The Federal authorities, of course, have jurisdiction in this matter, but in all cases they have been in the habit of applying to the Attorney-General for consent for the movement and storage of liquor. They have been inundating this department with requests for consent to various liquor shipments by export warehouses.

"As far as this department is concerned, we have decided that no consents will be given, with the exception of one or two cases where it can be definitely proved that these liquor orders were placed long in advance of the coming into force of the Federal Act. And in these cases we shall require the fullest proof that these orders certainly do not exceed in quantity the orders that were placed last year covering a similar period.

"In other words, we do not propose to countenance rush orders placed in anticipation of the passing of the present Act, and we have so advised the Federal Department of Customs and Excise.

Shipments From Ontario

"In one case, a car of Gooderham and Worts whisky was shipped into this Province from Ontario with the knowledge of the Federal authorities. Each case in the carload was directed and consigned to a man in Spokane, Washington, and was to be shipped to Spokane via Vancouver. The Federal Customs Department has asked whether the Attorney-General of British Columbia is willing to give his consent to the storage of liquor in a class three bonded warehouse, from which it is proposed, it has been customary to ship it in 10 to 20 case lots to a place near the international border, to be taken over the line to the United States by automobile.

"As this shipment to Spokane via Vancouver does not come within the exceptions provided by the Federal statute, and as the Act only contemplates shipment through the Province by rail or water, the Federal authorities must know that this is not in accordance with the terms of the Act, and, so far as this Province is concerned, we shall not be a party to any transaction of this kind." The liquor is in Vancouver now."

Mr. Pooley added his statement that several applications for the right to establish distilleries in British Columbia and to enjoy the distiller's right of liquor importation had been received by his department.

"It is not the policy of this department to consent to the granting of any new distillery licenses at this time," was Mr. Pooley's blunt announcement.

DO MUCH TIMBER TESTING.

A large part of the work carried on by the Forest Products Laboratories, Department of the Interior, Canada, consists in making tests of the suitability of various Canadian woods for different industrial purposes. Certain of these tests are conduct ed in connection with projects being carried on at the laboratories, while others are special tests made at the request of industrial firms. At the Vancouver laboratory during 1927 10,728 of the former tests and 776 of the latter were carried out. The results of such tests are carefully filed for reference, and are freely available for the information of manufacturers and others interested.

HERE'S TO YOUR HEALTH

BY DR. FRANK McCOY

Subject: "The Fast Way to Health"

© 1926 McCOY HEALTH SERVICE - LOS ANGELES - CAL.

THE SUPER RACE

The study of man and the ways in which he is affected by his environment is one of the most fascinating of all sciences. Biologists are united in the belief that the last fifty years have brought about some remarkable changes in human beings. The average life span has been increased fully eighteen years over that of a century ago, and it is estimated that the average American is three and a half inches taller than the average of fifty years ago. It is not unusual today to see many people who are over six feet tall, and many hotels have had to install larger beds and longer bathtubs to supply the new requirements.

The increase in the length of life is partly due to the better care of infants and children. Infant mortality of fifty years ago was enormous, and today it has become a negligible factor. The better understanding of the effects of food on health has undoubtedly contributed to increased health and physical development, particularly in North America.

Many of the diseases of malnutrition and wrong feeding are becoming obsolete. The deaths from tuberculosis are decreasing year by year. Spinal curvature is now almost unknown. Deaths from rickets and scurvy are inexcusable. Deaths from acute febrile diseases can be avoided in almost every instance if the proper dietetic measures are employed.

People are being taught the value of regular lives and the benefits of the out-of-doors. It is almost impossible for us to realize what a wonderful world we will have in a hundred years from today if progress continues at the same rate that the people who are now fifty years of age have seen in their own lifetimes. Many scientific men now believe that the average age of one hundred years is not impossible. Any of the vital organs of our body are strong enough to live far beyond this great age.

At one time the average length of life was as low as thirty-eight years. Now we have reached the average age of fifty-eight, and yet our knowledge of the care of the human body is being increased day by day. What a glorious future the race can look forward to. The young folks of today should consider themselves very fortunate.

Of course, there are some factors which may mar this accelerated progress. For instance, after the Napoleonic war it is estimated the average height of the French nation was reduced at least three inches, and after the recent world war the average height of the German youth was one and a half inches less than that at the beginning of the war. If nations can preserve their sanity and avoid these catastrophies they will certainly profit in a remarkable measure. Wars between civilized people are almost inexcusable.

Questions and Answers.

Question: M.D. asks: "Is there any possible cure for bowlegs? I am a girl of eighteen, in high school, and have given up gym work and swimming on account of my bowlegs."

Answer: Bowlegs may be straightened to some extent if you are only eighteen years old. Rigid dieting is necessary, for you must supply the blood with plenty of bone-building elements. Next in importance is to take all kinds of physical culture exercises to strengthen the entire body. Spinal treatments are also helpful in increasing the circulation of blood to the different parts of the body.

Question: I. U. asks: "What do you consider as really the most important food element?"

Answer: Protein is the most important substance used in the building of the body. An ample amount in the daily fare is of the utmost importance in order to effect repairs in the cell structure and muscles, and to bring about the necessary changes in the cells themselves. These cells cannot be replaced or built up with any other substance any more than the worn out parts of an engine can be replaced with gasoline.

Question: Robert D. writes: "In your menus I notice the mention of "chayote." What kind of an aniaml is this? I have asked a number of people, but no one seems to know."

Answer: The chayote is the fruit of a climbing vine of the cucumber family. It is grown in Mexico and in some of the warmer parts of the United States. The fruit is pale green with a single large seed in the center, which need not be removed for cooking. It resembles the squash in flavor.

EUCHRE PARTY HELD

Campbellford Catholic Women's League Social Success.

CAMPBELLFORD, Oct. 1 (Examiner Staff Correspondence)—The second euchre held this season under the auspices of the Catholic Women's League was a decided success. There were nineteen tables of players at the party held in the club rooms on Friday, and those present report a most enjoyable evening. After the playing ceased, a very delightful lunch was served by a committee of the ladies. The prize winners received their awards from the hands of the Rev. Father Phelan, himself a winner.. Father Phelan's good fortune was not with the cards. He held the lucky number that brought him a half dozen Plymouth Rock pullets which were donated by Mrs. Maude O'Sullivan. Mrs. James Kerr won the lady's games prize, and the lone hands prize for ladies went to Mrs. Thomas Dewey. John Storie won the gentleman's prize for games and the lone hand honors went to Peter Hicks.

FLAVOR IS ADDED TO MEAT BEFORE KILLING.

Housewives will be able to purchase meat already seasoned if a process developed in Frances proves successful, says Popular Mechanic Magazine. Various kinds of flavoring are injected by means of hypodermic needle into the blooo of the animal, experiments having been tried on 200 different subjects, including poultry, sheep and pigs. At the same time, coloring matter may be introduced to make the meat an even hue.

LAUGHS GALORE WAIT HERE.

There's a barrel of fun in "Fur On the Farm," coming to Kiwanis Club Produced in Canada Exhibition next month. This is only one of several attractions booked.

LYRICS OF LIFE

MEASURES NOT MEN

Let's vote for men not measures, truth not laws,
Concern ourselves not with effect but cause.
The leader is the army, judge the court,
And matter more than rules of every sort.
Platforms and precepts and ideals and creeds,
What are they all unless expressed in deeds?
The greatest nation or the smallest clan,
The thing that really matters is the man.

In men the land must always put its trust;
No law is just unless the judge is just.
I'd rather trust my fortunes to the wise
Than written wisdom that some knave applies.
A golden scepter is a tawdry thing,
However wise the law, if fool the king.
Men matter most, and so I say again,
Let's vote for measures less, and more for men.

Why We Do What We Do.

WHY WE PRIZE CLEANLINESS

By Mehran K. Thomson, Ph.D.
(Author, The Springs of Human Action)

The back of a boy's ear is pretty good evidence that cleanliness is an acquired trait. It is not inborn. There is no instinct to chase dirt or to run away from it such as the instinct to run away from danger.

The infant has no sense of shame or guilt or uneasiness in spreading jam all over his face. Nor does he see the logic of the incessant washing of his hands and face at the slightest provocation. If anything, it seems that children have the opposite tendency. Ask any mother of small children.

Cleanliness is a social virtue that is instilled by training through rewards and punishments and a great many repetitions of the ordeal of soap and water. The savage is not without some sense of cleanliness, but the extremes of the virtue exist only among highly cultivated peoples. Soap and civilization grew up together.

Human beings have acquired cleanliness as a social necessity through a long period of training. Today we take cleanliness for granted as though it were a human prerogative.

The fact is that while human beings have to acquire cleanliness through social pressure, the animals possess it by instinct. Here is one instance where animals surpass man. With the notable exception of the pig, who may have been corrupted by his contact with human beings, the lower forms of animals are scrupulously clean. The birds take their Saturday evening bath rather more regularly than the conventional man. The same is true of cats and other animals who keep clean with the [illegible] and [illegible] involved. The sense of well-being and comfortability with others which cleanliness alone makes possible. We value cleanliness for itself, for the aesthetic pleasure it affords, and as a means of bolstering morale, preserving health and avoiding offense to others.

Why do you do what you do? Write Dr. Thomson, care of this paper and send stamped envelope for reply.

Orange Lodge at Campbellford Honors Member Leaving Town.

(Examiner Staff Correspondence)

CAMPBELLFORD, Oct. 1.—Having learned that one of their number was to be removed to a distant city, several of the officers and members of L.O.L. 526 met on Saturday for thep urpose of presenting Lieutenant Pearo of the Salvation Army with a slight remembrance of his associations here. Lieut. Pearo has been in Campbellford only a few months, but has made many staunch friends during that time. As evidence of this, he will carry with him when he leaves town, a fine umbrella, the gift of his brethren of the lodge. The address was read by J. I. Adams, W.M., and the presentation was made by S. Nenlson, secretary. Taken completely by surprise, Lieut. Pearo was deeply impressed and replied briefly but feelingly.

How well you look!

"I have only Kruschen to thank."

This is the sixth enthusiastic testimonial from the same man:—

"I am writing you again to express my sincere gratitude for the continued success I have maintained through my daily dose of Kruschen. Only last week a man met me (who saw me a few months ago when I was crippled with rheumatism). His first remark was how well I looked. I replied, 'Yes, I have only Kruschen Salts to thank.' He said he was feeling 'off colour' and would start the Kruschen habit next day. I always recommend Kruschen Salts."—Jas. F. Wesley.

The Democracy of Commerce

EVERY one who opens and builds a savings account in a Canadian bank not only works towards his financial independence, but enters an all-embracing union of commercial enterprise. The individual deposit, whether it be one dollar or a million dollars, immediately becomes a vitalizing force in the conduct and development of Canadian business, since every dollar thus deposited, less a safe reserve, is used to finance the agriculture, trade and industry of the Dominion.

The Canadian Bank of Commerce, the safe depository of several hundred thousand people, has used the funds entrusted to its care by making loans in all parts of Canada to a total of $290,000,000 classified as follows:

Governments and Municipalities	$31,000,000
Public Utilities, Insurance Companies, Trust Companies, Automobile Finance Companies, etc.	22,000,000
Agriculture and Food Products	69,000,000
Farmers and Ranchers — 34,000,000
Grain, Flour, Meat, etc. — 35,000,000
Manufacturers:
Agricultural Implements, Mining, Iron and Steel, Automobiles, Textiles, Wearing Apparel, etc.	47,000,000
General Stores and Sundry Wholesalers and Retailers	13,000,000
Lumbering Industry, including Pulp and Paper	18,000,000
Contractors, Builders, etc.	10,000,000
Call Loans, Loans on Securities to Security Houses, Underwriters, etc.	43,000,000
Sundry Dealers and Traders and Individual Customers of the Bank throughout the Dominion	37,000,000

The people who, by saving, provide these funds; those who borrow; and the Bank that assists in this nation-wide co-operative scheme of safety and productive effort constitute one of the great democracies in Canadian commercial and social life. Hard-working, thrifty and enterprising people, irrespective of class, creed, position or financial circumstances, are thus brought together for a common purpose—the upbuilding and progress of the Dominion.

The Canadian Bank of Commerce welcomes savings bank accounts, and will give the utmost in service and consideration to all savings bank customers, whether their accounts be large or small.

THE MIRROR OF THE MODE

By Mary Marshall.

A new model short fur coat showing slightly flaring lines. This is of gray kidskin.

With skirts that hang in uneven points at the side or sag to the heels at the back, the question of coat lengths is somewhat puzzling and much as we may like the effect of the straight line coat and dislike the idea of having any flare whatever in the new fur coat we must remember that many of the new frocks have definite flares and that the flared contour is likely to become increasingly usual.

So to suit the demands of the uneven hem line in evening gowns many women have evening wraps of the cape sort or coats that make no attempt to extend to the hem of the skirt. And to make matters easy for the day-time frock with a flare there are not only flared fur coats, but shorter coats of the sort that furriers call jaquettes.

The short fur coat never stays out of fashion for long at a time because it has so much in its favor. In the first place it requires less fur, so that for the same price you may have decidedly better quality skins if you choose the shorter garment. Then it provides warmth where one needs it most and is easier to wear when walking. A third advantage which is important to the many is that the short fur coat even in the heavier furs is less expesnive than the coat that comes to the edge of the skirt—good thing to remember if you have the trick of taking on extra weight below the waistline.

Incidentally if you have a fur coat on hand that shows signs of wear you may find it possible to have it made over satisfactorily into one of these new short coats.

Some of the newest of these jackets are of kidskin; krimmer and other of the goat-lamb tribe, frequently in tones of gray or beige. There are charming ensembles consisting of short caracul jackets to be worn with colored cloth frocks to match the cloth lining of the jacket.

CARE OF STERLING.

The proper care of sterling silver is really an easy matter. Remember that it is solid it will not wear off therefore, use it as much as possible—no better method of cleaning has ever been found.

Flat wear tarnishes less if it is kept in a rack in a dining-room drawer which is well brushed out from time to time.

Wash sterling with a cloth in hot soapy water, rinse thoroughly in clear hot water, and wipe dry with an absorbent dish towel while the pieces are still warm. Constant use and washing will effectually prevent tarnish.

Sterling properly handled seldom needs polishing. Once a month or on a special occasion a quick rubbing with a reliable polishing liquid restores the brilliancy and lustre.

Never clean flat silver by boiling with aluminum or soap solution except under definite directions from your jeweler.

THE WHATNOT

A Place for Little Bits of Everything of Local Interest

By MARION

DID you ever hear of the Ten Home Commandments? In some homes which we enter we might be led to think that there is such a thing in effect. These commandments for wives by which they may achieve domestic happiness are laid down by a Boston matron who is also a college professor.

1. Thou shalt not set thy husband to work, taking the squeak out of a door or mending the electric flatiron, the instant he steps into the house.
2. Thou shalt not serve for dinner the desserts he despises; they can be prepared for lunch when he isn't at home.
3. Thou shalt not "pick up after him" all the time, but neither shalt thou berate him of "leaving things around." The nicest men will do it and domestic disorder with peace is better than tidiness enforced by nagging.
4. Thou shalt not fuss about the burnt matches or the cigar ash he drops. Women who are captious over such details learn why men leave home and go to the club.
5. Thou shalt not give him new curtains or a piano lamp for a Christmas present, but rather something which is for him and not chiefly for "the home."
6. Thou shalt not greet him with a mightly tale of woe about the iniquities of children or servants. Master thine own small problems and emergencies—as he does his.
7. Thou shalt not entertain, or make engagements to go out in the evening when he admits he is too tired. After a day in an office, all many persons want is "silence and little enough of that!" This thou too knowest, if thou art a wife with a job outside the home.
8. Thou shalt make thy children understand that their father's domestic comfort comes first.
9. Thou shalt not fail to praise thy husband for his good works in the home—the small repairs, the running of the furnace, the cooking of the Sunday night supper. Praise is fair and gracious—and awfully good policy besides.
10. Even if thy body be surrounded by the four walls of home thou shalt not allow thy mind and soul to become house bound for such is not the way of comradeship with any man.

I wonder how many of you attended the Fashion Parade? One can learn so much more by seeing and hearing at the same time, than by trying to picture the coming fashions by reading. The distinctive dress is the dress with something unusual about it. And, of course, the greatest mark of distinction is simplicity—which we hear so often. The more expensive dresses are of plain, simple lines, while the cheaper ones are more fussy. Many women will choose the dress with many plaits and frills and ruffles and laces and bows. Cheap work and cheap goods can be hidden by fanciness and that is one reason why the plainer dresses are the more expensive and the more distinctive.

The plump person should wear dark dresses and straight lines. The overtall needs the bow neck line and the short skirt. The too slender demands fluffy, puffy things.

• • •

Did you hear that the general rule for the choosing of your costume is—Be conservative? If in doubt what to wear, choose the simpler outfit. It is far better to be under-dressed than over-dressed. In this practical and business-like age, people do not blossom forth in gaiety duds as much as they used to, and the simpler dress is almost always in goodtaste.

• • •

And, too, one must be very sure of wearing the right combinations of things together. The sports dress demands street shoes, and the small hat. Do not wear chiffon hose and satin slippers with a business costume. The hose should match the frock rather than the shoes, since leather is more staple and cannot change in color to match every gown. The big hat goes with the afternoon frock, not with the suit or sport costume.

To be well dressed, your costume must:
Suit you in color,
Suit you in design,
Be in harmony throughout,
Be appropriate to the occasion.

Garters today are as ornamental as useful. Nearly everyone wears the round leg garters to supplement the supporter from the girdle. These garters usually are double, consisting of two bands of flowered or embroidered elastic. Each is very narrow and they are worn half an inch apart.

The help for this week is double-barrelled. I have printed two on the same sheet, one telling how to make a baby jacket; the other giving instructions for French drawers for little girls. The helps are complete with sketches and diagrams.

ENTERTAINING GUESTS

A Series Giving Hints on Arranging Parties.

By LAURA.

PAPER WEDDING

As the second anniversary is the Papper Wedding, an evening spent in Bridge or other card games would be quite in order. Even though you decided to spend the evening this way, don't think that it need be the usual dry evening you sometimes have. For invitations, visiting cards with the date and the word "Bridge" above the name would be quite correct, and would excite more curiosity than a telephone invitation which is customary in Peterborough. Cards, of course, are paper, but osity of your guests and to set them just to whet the curi-guessing, enclose a pinch of confetti or a bright color in the envelope or paste it on the corner of the card. Confetti is also paper and is certainly significant of weddings.

Cover each card table with several thicknesses of heavy tissue paper instead of cloth, having each table of a different shade—and just the size to cover the top, and may be held in place with thumb tacks. Small paper boxes filled with candies might adorn each table—the color of the box corresponding with the shade of the table. If possible have the backs of the playing cards matching in color with the table also. Very unique place cards may be made from a narrow bit of card the same shade as the table, with bright shades of confetti scattered upon it and the player's name written in gold ink.

Prizes might be popular novels, tied in tissue paper to correspond with the table and confetti scattered on it as the place cards. Of course some glue would have to be put very gently on these to make the confetti stick.

If supper is served in the dining room set the table with a gay paper tablecloth with carnival designs, little piles of paper napkins to match, and a centerpiece of a bride's shower bouquet composed of flowers of all colors, instead of the usual bridal white. Streamers of narrowfl varicolored ribbons may be stretched from the bouquet across the table, where a little boutonniere is tied on the end of the ribbons intended for the men and a single, larger flower and a spray of fern made a corsage for the women. By pulling the ribbons, there may appear from the center bouquet little dol-like envelopes for each of the guests which may contain a little rhyme prophecying the future of each guest. If these ribbons are placed properly to arrive at a certain place card, more fun can be made by giving that certain person a fortune which is likely from real life to happen.

In the place of honor on the table, beside the bridal bouquet is placed the bride's cake, which may be iced in curiously streaked and dabbled confetti-like patched or colored icing. The two dates—the original wedding, and this the second anniversary—are written on the cake in white icing, with the initials of the couple in whose honor the anniversary is being celebrated.

Little paper boxes may contain sweets on the table as well having the salads and sandwiches served from paper covered containers.

GALVANIC CLEANING.

An economical and direct method of removing tarnish from sterling silver of bright finish which has lain unused for a long time is contained in the galvanic system, which may be employed in the following way:

Make a solution containing one teaspoon of soda and one of salt for each quart of boiling water. Pour this solution in an aluminum pan and allow the sterling to remain thoroughly immersed for a few moments. The chemical action which takes place removes all of the tarnish.

Take the sterling out of the solution, wash it in warm water and soapsuds, rinse in clear water, and rub with a chamois or polishing cloth.

This method cannot be used if the sterling has a gray or oxidized finish.

Sterling pieces too large to be submersed in the pan, can be done piecemeal, i.e., one part and then another.

LITTLE SONGS OF LOVE

THE MESA WIND BLOWS SOFT.

The mesa wind blows soft tonight,
The western stars bend low,
Soft-shadowed in the firelight
Old dreams, old visions go.

The mesa wind's a soft caress,
Cool fingers in my hair;
Soft whispers out of loneliness
That breathe a lonely prayer. . . .

O, mesa wind, go far to her
With kisses carried high,
And tell her mountain grasses stir
And 'wait her passing by;

Go tell her that the mesa trail
Lies yellow in the sun,
And clouds, like dreams, ride white and frail—
Lost longings, one by one.

Dietitic Dissertations

(Specially Written for The Examiner.)

VIII.—ROUGHAGE AND BALANCE.

In our diet, besides the food principles heretofore dealt with, we also need roughage, food voluminous and voluble, undigested and insoluble. This is necessary to stimulate the movements of the digestive tract and keep the organs in good condition. Vegetable foods are our source of this. We get roughage in leaf and stalk vegetables, in the bran covering of cereals, and in the fibrous framework and skin of fruits.

Modern methods of preparation are apt to refine away this very necessary part of the diet, but, if we would be as physically perfect as the Himalayans mentioned in our last article, we must see that this is not done.

Balance.

Not only is it important that our food contains some of each food principle, but, in making out menus, we must see that each is there in proper proportion. The following are factors to be considered in balance:

(1) The psychical factor is important. Appetite is a reflex of palatability, it serves to stimulate the flow of the digestive juices. Habits, tastes and customs must be considered. Careful preparation and serving should be stressed.

(2) We must have evergy-yieldiag food enough to supply the basal requirement plus that needed for the body processes and muscular activity. This varies greatly with the individual. One may use from twenty-five to seventy-five grams of fat daily, or ten to fifteen per cent. of the food requirement with three and a half or four times as much food value from carbohydrates.

(3) Ten to twelve per cent. of our calories should come from protein—sixty to one hundred and twenty grams daily.

(4) We must have mineral matter enough to keep the body, especially the bones, built up, to keep the fluids in a satisfactorily neutral state and to regulate the processes. We should have daily: phosphorus, three grams; calcium, one gram; iron, fifteen thousandths gram.

(5) We must have water to supply liquid, tissues, muscles, etc., and to regulate processes and temperature—at least four glasses daily.

(6) We must have vitamines to maintain health, to act as activators and, in some cases, to promote growth; also, we must have bulk to stimulate peristalsis. The ordinary diet provides these. Here is a well-balanced dish:

Carrot Souffle.

1 c. medium white sauce.
1 c. boiled mashed carrots.
Salt, paprika.
1 lb. minced onion.
2 Eggs.

1. Add carrot, onion, and seasoning to white sauce.
2. Add beaten egg yolks.
3. Fold in stiffly beaten whites.
4. Turn into buttered baking dish and bake in pan of hot water in moderate oven 30 minutes.
5. Serve at once from dish in which it was baked.

Mama-Granny

The World's Highest Paid Short Story Writer

By FANNIE HURST

Author of "Humoresque," "A President Is Born"

© McClure Newspaper Syndicate.

Mama-Granny, by hard work, has paid back two of the three-thousand dollars she took from his patrimony!

MRS. GRANEY, or "Mama-Granny" as she was known to the children of the town her small farm skirted, belonged to that vast army of women who plan "that trip to Europe after the children have grown up."

Mrs. Graney's had grown up a source of pride and comfort to her. Robert was a mining engineer with an excellent position in Pueblo, where she had once visited him, and enjoyed a fine room-and-bath adjoining his, in the town's best hotel where he was able to live the year around.

Berenice had remained on the farm and at twenty had married a young fellow with a nest egg of five thousand dollars who had bought half her acres from Mrs. Graney and settled down on home soil to establish himself in the environment that Berenice and her mother had known all their lives.

It was a happier arrangement than even Mrs. Graney, in her ambitious plans for Berenice, had dreamed. Edgar was not only a desirable husband for Berenice, but he was a scientific farmer with a degree from a state agricultural college.

He removed chores from Mrs. Graney's shoulders that she had not fully realized were burdening them until the relief came. For eighteen years, three mornings a week six months out of the year, Mrs. Graney had risen at four, rain or shine, and driven her market products to the six miles distant town of Meola, selling her fresh wares in the open market and then driving home, in her rattling wagon along rutted roads. Eighteen years of established trade had ended prosperously for her and by the time Edgar married Berenice, Mrs. Graney not only owned her half of the farm, but her savings amounted to something over seven thousand dollars.

It was the year after Berenice's first child was born, that her daughter and son-in-law began to conspire to urge Mama-Granny to "take that trip to Europe."

"You can afford it Mama-Granny. You've earned it. You deserve it. Edgar and I both feel the time has come for you to give up driving to market. It's not dignified any more Mama-Granny. Edgar sends the vegetables in by truck. It's quicker and cheaper. It's about time you got that trip to Europe."

There had never been a time since her girlhood, and throughout the long years of her early widowhood and the subsequent ones of the struggle to rear and educate her two children, what the ambition had not dwelt within the heart of Mrs. Graney. A life-long friend of hers on an adjoining farm had taken the trip in a touring party after the death of her husband. The postcards she had sent were stacked in Mrs. Graney's dresser drawer and frequently gazed at through an old-fashioned stereopticon on the parlor table. Thrift however, was too deeply ingrained in Mrs. Graney to be lightly surmounted. There was a grandchild now. A tow-haired, bouncing youngster with his grandmother's blue eyes and his father's erect, well-set head.

Seventy-two hundred dollars, plus interest, plus a growing share in the farm were to be his heritage. A trip to Europe would somehow be not quite fair to little Eddie's heritage.

"Nonsense, Mamma-Graney! You owe it to yourself to stop feeling a sense of responsibility to every one in the world but yourself. Little Eddie will be well taken care of, don't you worry about that. It's about time you were thinking of yourself a bit."

Well, in a way it was. At sixty-two, Mrs. Graney easily looked her age. Weather had beaten and hardened her face. The long hours of the market place, stooping over bags and baskets had bent her back. There was the story of toil in the nice blue eyes of little Eddie's Grandmother.

Then as if to aid and abet her conspiring children a rheumatic affliction began to swell the joints of Mrs. Graney's ankles and fingers and in the course of a professional visit to the farmhouse, the old family doctor ordered suspension of the market trips and half jokingly suggested a "cure" for the swollen joints at a European watering place.

It was then, for the first time in her life, Berenice took matters in her own hands and arranged a "tour' to Europe for her mother. One personally conducted by an experienced courier and which allowed a three week's stop-over at a French spa whose waters were said to be healing ones for Mrs. Graney's kind of affliction.

Two months later, just as spring was breaking in light spreckles along the bushes and trees of the farm, Mrs. Graney, outfitted, complete as to itinerary, and with every detail of her needs thought out in advance by Berenice and Edgar, set out on the first lap of a four month's trip to Europe.

If ever suppressed desires came to the surface of a person released from routine, they did so in the case of Mrs. Graney. For the first time in her life she was free to consider Mrs. Graney first, foremost and always. She was catered to by a charming and experienced courier whose chief concern was her well-being. She breakfasted in bed, on steamers, in hotels or on a private little terrace outside her window. She bought clothes and trinkets in Paris. She looked upon the tomb of Napoleon. She beheld the ex-palaces of the Kaiser and went to pay her respects to the Pope in black lace mitts and a mantilla. She drank Amer Picon on the Boulevards, rode in a gondola and had post-card photographs of herself taken on Mont Blanc. Something tired and withered in Mrs. Graney opened up like one of those paper Japanese flowers in water.

She became greedy to live to their fullest, the years that were left to her. She remembered the philosophy of Berenice and Edgar. After all, it was true, little Eddie would be cared for by two strong and willing young parents. Mrs. Graney not only consumed her letter of credit, but was obliged to cable home from Turin for more.

She bought cameo earrings in Naples, a thread-lace gown in Madrid, a high silver comb to match her gray hair in Nurnberg and at the Casino, in the French watering place where she took her "cure" with success, lost seventy-five dollars at a low-limit baccaret table "just for the experience."

Mrs. Graney's philosophy of life underwent a change. The middle-aged women she met while travelling abroad; many of them like herself who were finished with the responsibilities of rearing their children and keeping up the home, inspired her to a resolution to enjoy what was left of her life. At the conclusion of the four months she had planned to remain abroad, Mrs. Graney arranged to extend the services of the courier and remain abroad a few months longer. At the end of six months Mrs. Graney's letter of credit had been exhausted three times. Her son wrote jocularly. Berenice's letters, while cheerful and full of agreement with her plans after awhile developed a slight tinge of something which if unwritten and between the lines, did not fail to reach the sensitive eye and heart of her mother.

Little Eddie was forgetting how to say "Mama-Granny." Better send a good new photograph of herself or little Eddie would be forgetting how Mama-Granny looks. Folks about the countryside were beginning to think Mama-Granny wasn't ever coming home. Never mind, though, when Mama-Granny did come home, Edgar and Berenice had new plans for her. The front room was to be done over and a porch built on for her. No more market! When Mama-Granny did feel like coming home, Berenice and Edgar would see to it that it was a homecoming worthwhile.

At the end of two years, with her bank account depleted to the extent of three thousand dollars, Mrs. Graney, rejuvenated, healthy, alert, happier than she could remember having been, did succumb to the prickings of nostalgia that were beginning to manifest themselves and engaged passage home on one of the gigantic ocean-liners.

It was as Berenice had promised. Her comecoming was one to remember. The homely old front room with its high walnut bedstead and narrow windows had been re-done in chintzes and pale birch. There was a sun-porch with a chaise longue and a reading stand with a rose colored thermos bottle and rose shaded lamp, for all the world like the expensive hotel rooms in which Mrs. Graney had learned to relax.

Her son-in-law, full of pride in her rejuvenation, was constantly teasing and jocular to her about it. Her grandson, in whom, fears to the contrary notwithstanding, the memory of his grandmother had been kept fair and green, was a delight that surpassed every other aspect of her return. He was big, blue-eyed eager, and full of affectionate ways that clutched at her heart.

Three thousand dollars had been dug into the patrimony of this fair child by the selfish desires of his Mama-Granny. She could scarcely meet the sweet friendliness in those blue eyes. His arms about her neck hurt and reproached her. This sweet-beautiful, her grandchild, had been cheated by his grandmother. After a while Mrs. Graney could not take him into her arms without secret tears of shame and repetence finding their way into the bright tangle of his curls.

Mama-Granny had cheated her child's child. His inheritance would be three thousand dollars less because she had gamed it away at European baccaret tables and wasted it on Parisian fribbles. Thus she began to brood upon her doings and lose perspective.

It was obvious, after a while, to both Berenice and Edgar that neither the chintz bed room, the idle hours nor the relaxation of home were the tonic for Mrs. Graney that they had hoped. Was it possible that she was hankering after the continental life!

It was not possible. It took a few months of adjustment, but after a while Mrs. Graney's old mare, "Bone" was back in harness, and three times a week, with the sunrise, her market-cart could be seen and heard trundling its way toward Meola.

The smart European air has worn off, Mrs. Graney's hands are calloused again and sometimes, from standing long hours in the market place, her back aches and her joints swell. But little Eddie is large enough now to accompany her, on fair mornings. He romps among the vegetables and helps cram greens into the peck and quart measures.

Mama-Granny, by hard work, has paid back two of the three thousand dollars she took from his patrimony!

XL—A PROMISE

Sally and Phillip Sanderson were back in the little sitting-room then, and Sally was crying for sheer joy and excitement.

"I walked all alone, didn't I? Nobody helped me, not a step!"

"You did indeed, my dear."

"And to-morrow I shall be able to walk farther still, shan't I? Oh, Philip, I know you think I'm silly, but if you'd been on your back as long as I have you'd be silly, too—"

"I don't think you're silly. I'm as proud and excited as you are. I'm as proud as if it had been myself."

"And some day I shall be able to run, shan't I?" she went on, unheeding his words. "Run downhill like other girls, and perhaps dance, and then——" She broke off.

"And then—what?" Sanderson asked slowly. 'And then I suppose you'll want to leave me—eh?" His voice was harsh with pain.

Sally sat very still, her slender hands, which had grown so white and what she loved to call "refined-looking" during the past weeks, tearing at her handkerchief. For some moments she did not speak. Her blue eyes were fixed on the little garden outside, where the setting sun was making long shadows across the tiny lawn and flower borders, and though she looked at the roses, she saw only a broad-shouldered man with crinkling red hair and a boyish smile who came no more, and for a moment her face looked old and pinched with the pain of memory; then with a mighty effort she forced the thought of Garry Nairn from her and turned to Philip.

"I shall never leave you—never—unless you want me to," she said earnestly.

"Sally!"

He was down on his knees beside her, a clumsy giant in the tiny room, his arms around her, his face hidden against her shoulder.

"Don't leave me, Sally. You're everything in my world. Stay with me, my dear. Let me look after you always. I love you so."

She raised one hand and touched his hair—the dark hair that had lately turned so much more grey.

"Poor Philip!" she whispered, and then again, with a little sigh, "Poor Philip!" Then suddenly she laughed with a ring of her old elfish chuckle. "Won't there be a scandal, now I can walk, if I go on living here with you?"

Philip looked up.

"As my wife, Sally?" he said.

"Your wife!" She drew away from him with a little shiver, and then, quick to read the mortification in his eyes, she took his hand between both hers and squeezed it hard.

"Do you still really want to marry me?"

"You know I do."

"I shall be horrid to you sometimes."

He smiled grimly.

"Worse than you have ever been?"

She sighed.

"I used to be awful, didn't I?"

"Pretty fierce."

She laughed a little, and then grew grave again.

"I shall never be quite like that any more, I think. You see——"

She knit her brows as if in perplexity at herself.

"I've changed so much, Philip."

"Have you, my dear?"

Sally nodded.

"Yes, in my inside, I mean. I don't get wildly excited about things any more, and I don't hate people tremendously, or love people tremendously." She made rather a pathetic little gesture with her slim hands. "It's almost as if—as if pain and—all I've gone through have knocked it out of me—the power to feel anything very much, I mean."

Sanderson raised her hand awkwardly to his lips.

"Do you love me at all, Sally?" he asked humbly.

She seemed to consider that point, then she said evasively:

"If I don't love you, then there is no one in all the world that I love."

Sanderson said nothing, and she went on:

"If I don't love you I ought to be strangled. Look what you've done for me—why, just everything!"

"People don't always love those who do the most for them, Sally."

"Don't they?" But Sally knew that well enough. Often when she lay awake at night thinking of Garry Nairn, and trying hard not to think of him, she wondered why he meant so much to her. What had he done for her except smile at her and take her hand in his firm clasp? What had he done for her except make her love him, and then at the first hint of trouble turned away and left her.

His letter had explained so little. In halting words he had just said that he found he did not care well enough; that he thought it more honest to tell her; that he despised himself—"oh, more than you can ever despise me!"

There had been four pages of it, and when Sally had read them she had gleaned nothing except that she had lost him.

She only knew that her dream was at an end, that no matter how well and strong she grew, it would mean nothing to him; that he would never race her downhill—never be interested in what happened to her at all.

"What are you thinking about, Sally?" Philip Sanderson asked jealously, and she turned to him and put her arms round his neck as she answered, with a wild little note in her voice:

"Be kind to me, Philip. I've only got you in all the world. Be kind to me always, Philip dear."

"Sally, you know I love you. You know I'd give my life for you!"

"You're an angel, Philip."

He shook his head.

"A black angel, my dear."

"A dear angel," said Sally tenderly, and meant it.

"And you will marry me, when?" he asked presently.

Sally answered hurriedly that she must wait till she was quite well and strong.

"You've always had me as an invalid and a trouble," she said. "I shan't marry you till I can walk to the registrar's office just like any ordinary bride." She tried to speak brightly, but her voice was rather constrained.

Philip clasped and unclasped his big hand about hers.

"Sally—I wondered—there's a little church in the village, you know. I hate registry offices. Gloomy—nothing happy about them—and old Nairn's little church——"

"No!" said Sally sharply.

That little church was so full of memories of Garry she felt that she could never walk up its aisle to marry Philip Sanderson, no matter how strong and well she grew.

"What does it matter where we are married?" Sally insisted. "Isn't one place as good as another? You always used to say you hated churches and parsons."

"Perhaps I've changed." Philip put her gently from him and rose to his feet, his head nearly touching the sloping ceiling. Instinct told him what was the cause of her objection to the little church, and it was as if someone had wiped the happiness from his heart.

Sally looked at him silently for a moment, then she held out her hand.

"Come here, Philip."

"Well?"

"Come here, and don't scowl."

"I am here."

"You're not near enough. I want to touch you."

He moved a little closer, and she clasped her hand around his wrist.

"Have the Guards retired, Philip?" she asked laughingly.

Then Philip laughed, too. He drew himself stiffly to attention and saluted.

"The Guards never retire," he said solemnly.

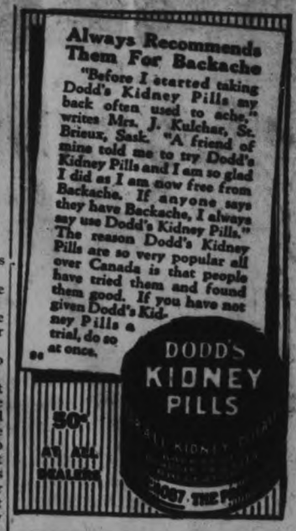
Always Recommends Them For Backache

"Before I started taking Dodd's Kidney Pills my back often used to ache," writes Mrs. J. Kulchar, St. Brieux, Sask. "A friend of mine told me to try Dodd's Kidney Pills and I am so glad I did as I am now free from Backache. If anyone says they have Backache, I always say use Dodd's Kidney Pills." The reason Dodd's Kidney Pills are so very popular all over Canada is that people have tried them and found them good. If you have not given Dodd's Kidney Pills a trial, do so at once.



I jump at this as much as I like?"

"Yes," said Uncle Wiggily with a laugh, "chew and claw the feather ball all you please. You can't harm it." So Pussy did and in a few days of rest Mama Kat's tail grew some new fur and was as good as before. And Pussy could practise catching mice with the feather ball. So everything was fine.

HOROSCOPE

The Stars Incline, But Do Not Compel

TUESDAY, OCTOBER 2, 1928.

(Copyright, McClure Newspaper Syndicate.)

Although a strongly benefic aspect dominates to-day, according to astrology, there are minor adverse influences.

This is pre-eminently a planetary government under which to use all forms of publicity. It is especially auspicious for newspaper advertising.

Writers and editors should benefit from this sway, but there is a likelihood of libel while this configuration prevails.

The rule encourages unkindly gossip, especially concerning persons in the public eye.

Again the seers warn men and women to guard their speech, for the direction of the stars is sinister and is supposed to make persons quick to believe the worst concerning their fellow-beings.

This is not a favorable day for seeking new positions and those in search of employment will be wise to postpone important plans for searching coveted places.

The remainder of the autumn may be more or less disturbing to many business plans, for there are indications that just before a great period of activity quiet will reign in many commercial lines.

The Earth, forming its major conjunction with Uranus, now is supposed to bring about intense desire for liberty and even license.

Craving for excitement and novelty will continue, especially among young persons who should be safeguarded against many current customs and temptations.

Under this planetary government, women may be exceedingly restless and discontented. Many will desire change and will seek to remove from their places of abode, it is foretold.

Comfort and prosperity for wage-earners of all classes are prognosticated. Farmers are to benefit in 1929.

Persons whose birthdate it is may have rather a trying year in which there is a tendency to work at cross-purposes. These subjects of Virgo are usually methodical and orderly, so they suffer from any sort of upheaval, but they are able to overcome many obstacles.

Children born on this day probably will have many talents and on that account will present difficulties to those who rear and educate them. They should be taught patience and adaptability. Virgo children are capable of amazing development.

UNCLE WIGGILY AND MAMA KAT

(Copyright, 1928, McClure Syndicate.)

Once upon a time as Uncle Wiggily hopped past the cute little house where Tommie, Joie and Kittie Kat lived, the rabbit gentleman saw Mama Kat sitting out on the front porch.

"Good morning, Mama Kat," greeted Uncle Wiggily. "And how are you this fine September morning?"

"Not so well," mewed Mama Kat.

"What is the matter?" asked Mr. Longears as he kindly twinkled his pink nose thinking that might cheer up Mama Kat.

"Oh, Pussy Kat teases me so that I don't get much rest and I am getting quite thin," mewed Mama Cat. Uncle Wiggily, looking at her, could see that she was not as plump and sleek looking as she had been.

"Pussy Kat! Pussy Kat!" exclaimed the rabbit gentleman, thoughtful like. "I don't seem to remember—"

"She is my newest little kitten," went on Mama Kat, "and though she is a dear and a darling and all that, still she is so lively and full of fun that she never gives me a moment's peace. She always wants to be playing."

"Yes, I suppose so," agreed Uncle Wiggily. "But you know, Mama Kat, that pussy cats and puppy dogs must play and even when they are very little they must pretend to catch mice or gnaw bones so they will be able to do those things really when they grow up."

"I know all that, thank you," mewed Mama Kat. "But if only Pussy would play with something else than my tail I could stand it."

"Your tail!" cried Uncle Wiggily in surprise.

"Yes, my tail!" yowled Mama Kat. "Look at it!"

With that she brought her tail out from where it was curled under her and Uncle Wiggily saw where all the fur was rubbed off so that instead of being fuzzy and wuzzy it was bare like a lead pencil.

"What did that?" asked the bunny gentleman.

"Oh Pussy did that, chasing after and playing with my tail," said Mama Kat.

"Why doesn't Pussy play with her own tail?" Uncle Wiggily wanted to know.

"That's what I tell her," said the cat mother. "But she seems to like mine. When I am lying down to rest Pussy will jump over me and grab my tail, pretending that it is a mouse. And when I twitch my tail out of her way she leaps after it, catches it in her mouth or claws and pulls out a lot of fur. Of course Pussy doesn't intend to hurt me, but she is so playful and full of tail chasing fun that it's me worried until I'm quite thin."

"It's too bad," said Uncle Wiggily.

"Here comes Pussy now," whispered Mama Kat. "I'll pretend to be asleep and you can see what she does. Hide behind a porch pillar."

While Uncle Wiggily was hiding, up crept little Pussy. As soon as the baby cat saw her mother asleep, as she thought, Pussy began to crouch down and creep and she switched her own tail to and fro and then all of a sudden, she made a jump and landed right on her mother's tail!

Mama Kat tried to switch her tail out of the way but wasn't quick enough and Pussy caught hold of it and pulled out a little more fur.

"There! You see!" said Mama Kat to Uncle Wiggily.

"Oh, Mama!" mewed Pussy. "I thought your tail was a little mouse!"

"You should let your mother have a little rest, Pussy," said the rabbit gentleman.

"But I love to jump at things that move and twitch," said Pussy.

"Yes, I suppose you do," said Uncle Wiggily. "Well, that is natural and right. But your mother must have some rest. Wait a minute and I t... I can fix things for you," said ... bunny.

Away he hopped until he found ... loose chicken feathers. These he ... into a little ball and tied them by a string so the feather ball swung in the wind from the porch railing. As soon as the feather ball began to sway back and forth, like Mama Kat's tail, Pussy made a jump for it and caught the ball in her claws and teeth.

"Oh, what fun!" mewed Pussy. "May

Haboco Stores Will Be Found In Wide District

New Name is Coined from Initials of Harry Boyle Company.

CHARTER GRANTED

Limited Company Formed to Conduct Grocery Business in Many Cities.

On August 13, 1928, the Ontario Government granted Supplementary Letters Patent to the H. J Boyle Co., Limited, giving them the power to operate a chain of stores throughout the Province of Ontario. This company will own and operate the HABOCO Stores, of which there are now seven actually distributing. The word HABOCO is derived from Harry Boyle Company, the first two letters of each word being used. The policy and management of the stores will be the same as previous, Mr. Harry Boyle being president and general manager.

He is well supported by a local board of directors composed of men who have been successful in Peterborough in various lines of business and whose judgment and business acumen tend to strengthen the administration of a chain such as 'Haboco' plans to operate throughout Ontario.

Mr. Francis Mather, who over sixteen years was with Barries Limited, George Street, has severed his connection with that company and is now secretary-treasurer of the H. J. Boyle Company, Limited. Mr. Mather is in full charge of stock records, store returns, costs and distribution, and his vast business experience both here and in the Old Country, will be a decided asset to the compay.

Mr. I. P. McNabb, branch manager of the Dominion Life Assurance Co., and Lieutenant Governor of the Central Ontario Division of Kiwanis International, is vice-president, and H. J. McCannan, real estate broker. Maurice B. Pringle, in charge of fruit and vegetable division of Haboco Stores. Jack Dewart, grain broker, and Harry Huffman, local alderman and contractor, are all directors.

The H. J. Boyle Co., Limited, has issued 300 shares of seven per cent preferred stock of a par value of $100 each and approximately 650 shares of common stock. With this independent capital, the expansion program is being carried out, and it is interesting to note that in most cases the shareholders of the company are people who have known and dealt in the Boyle Stores since their organization.

The remarkable showing of chain stores throughout the continent of North America has proven conclusively that the principle of chain operation is fundamentally sound.

Idea is Based on Sound Principle

Chain stores are looked upon as something new in the world of merchandising. But they are about the oldest thing in Canada, one will conclude, if it is recalled that the Hudson's Bay Company was incorporated on May 2nd, 1670, 258 years ago, and established a chain of trading posts soon after.

That chain of trading posts is still in existence, and to-day its store are located in strategic positions out Western Canada.

The Dominion Stores, who are now operating over 500 stores, sold over $19,280,000 in 1927, and sales volume for 1928 will be approximately $23,- throughout Canada.

Loblaw Groceterias, incorpoated about nine years ago with a small capital and was then operating only four stores. To-day they are operating 65 groceterias in Ontario.

The gross sales of the F. W. Woolworth Company for the year 1927 in United States and Canada were approximately $272,000,000.00 with no sale over 15 cents in Canada and a maximum of 10 cents per sale in the United States.

These figures are absolute proof of the success of chain store operation and on these and many other statistics the Boyle Company has laid their expansion program. Its policy contrasts with the policies of these companies in the location and capital expenditure per store.

Mr. Boyle has proven that the store supplying foodstuffs to the householder can serve the wants of the people better if stores are located in the various populated sections of a city where the housewife lives, and not in one central store on the main street, where rents are high and the purchaser must travel some distance to shop. Therefore the Boyle Stores have not been so large or so elaborate but have been smaller, more compact and more advantageously situated than those of some of the chain groceries. These stores stock the same merchandise, at chain prices, and combine these desirable features with an individual intimate personal service which is usually lacking in larger chains.

In any Boyle store of the past and in any Haboco store of the future, the housewife knows that each purchase bears a money-back guarantee, and that she is paring down her expenditures for groceries to the core. She knows that the staples, necessary in every pantry, evey day, may be had at Boyle's with confidence and with that pleasant personal contact which has been an essential feature of the company's success. The staples, novelties, delicacies, and fruits of five continents are to be found on the shelves, and there are always well trained efficient salesmen and salesladies to serve, suggest and satisfy your every wish.

It will continue to be the policy of the company to advertise weekly, their prices on staples and specials, and as in the past, any savings which are acquired by the company through dropping markets, etc., are promptly passed on to the customer and announced through this paper weekly.

Suggestion boxes are being placed in each store where the criticisms and suggestions of patrons are invited. Many constructive ideas and much of the efficiency of chain stores has been developed from the casual observations and suggestions of patrons, and every new idea, every constructive criticism is another step towards complete efficiency.

The Haboco Stores are designed to please you and the merchandise is selected and imported from the four corners of the earth and all is made available for you, at your command, at prices which will make our slogan "More for Less" known all over Ontario.

PERFECTLY SAFE

Agent: "Don't you want your store fixtures insured against theft?"

Druggist Owner: "Yes, all except the clock. Everybody watches that."

HARRY J. BOYLE

President and Manager of the H. J. Boyle Company, Limited, operating Haboco Stores.

Harry J. Boyle was born in Almonte, Ont., on May 28th, in 1895. In Almonte, which is a thriving town in the Ottawa Valley on the main line of the C.P.R., Mr. Boyle received his early education and business experience.

In his early youth he showed his aggressiveness by turning his spare moments into spending money. He was employed as errand boy and later as clerk in O'Riley's Grocery, and it was in that modest store, by serving the textile workers from the Almonte Mills, and making up the weekly order of groceries of those people of the rural district surrounding Almonte, that he got his first knowledge of the grocery business. For some time prior to 1915 he was employed by The Almonte Gazette, and in September, 1915, he enlisted with the Royal Highlanders of Montreal and served overseas until March, 1917, when he was invalided home, having lost his left leg in active service. Shortly after his period of convalescence in Davisville Hospital, Toronto, he was sent to the United States as a speaker on the "War Chest" drives. Shortly after his discharge from the Canadian Forces he went on a lecture tour with the Chatauqua in Montana, Minnesota, Washington, North Dakota and South Dakota, Iowa and giving a graphic description of the life of the expeditionary forces in France.

Since his commencement of business in Peterborough he has won the respect and admiration of all with whom he came in contact. He has been particularly active in the Kiwanis Club and has acted as treasurer of that body for the past year. He was also secretary of the Men's Association of George Street United Church for a year.

His keen business judgment and dogged determination have been the chief factors of his success and with continued earnest effort the plans which have been formulated will place him at the head of a large chain of Haboco Stores throughout this province.

GROCER MUST KNOW DETAILS OF FOOD SUPPLY

Mere Handling of Foodstuffs Not Sufficient for Progress.

KNOWLEDGE NECESSARY.

Goods Come From All Parts of the World to Modern Provision Dealer.

What is a grocer? There may be doubts on the subject, considering the activities of the ham and beef shops, confectioners, cafes, and the like after the sun sinks in the west—and who knows but that one of these days the trade may be called upon to give a definition for legislative purposes. A correspondent to an English contemporary submits a reply to the question, follows:—

"'Spicer' was, I believe, the first term applied to what is now called a grocer. That was many centuries ago; then came the 'pepperer,' and, as time rolled on, the word 'grossier' (a man dealing in large quantities), and thus 'grocer.'

"Now, to my mind, a grocer is one who has obtained a thorough knowledge of buying, handling, and selling foodstuffs, one who knows the origin and component parts of the goods he stocks. Usually combined in the term 'grocer' or attached thereto is 'provision merchant,' and this much include a knowledge of further articles of all descriptions. The whole world to-day provides the goods which are sold by a grocer, and they come from all quarters of the globe.

"The knowledge is required, and can be obtained only by diligent study and work. If you want to obtain the uttermost possible you must give the uttermost possible. Only by so doing can the grocer be lifted up to a professional status. He is a man who must have scientific knowledge just as much as a chemist, for is not his trade a pure food trade? This knowledge is absolutely necessary for the qualified grocer because the goods he deals with are required by the public morning, noon and night.

"To sum up: a grocer must be fully proficient in all details of his trade, ever remembering that it is one of service to an exacting public. I trust the day is not far distant when, to get a footing or standing in the grocery trade, it will be necessary to pass a series of examinations in the knowledge requisite to, shall I say, the profession of a retail grocer."—The Storekeeper, Sydney, Australia.

New Ways Handling Food

Dairy Supplies Are Carefully Graded and Packed for Haboco Stores.

EVERYTHING CLEAN.

Perishable Goods Kept in Iced Show Cases — Cans Goods a Boon.

When one walks into a modern chain grocery store, where efficiency is supreme, and constant and intensive study has been made of the handling of goods, and draws a comparison between what he sees and what would have met his gaze a few decades ago, the contrast is astounding. Eggs, which once we labelled "Strictly Fresh" from mere guesswork, and were displayed in boxes or baskets on the counters, are now graded individually, according to government standards and put up in compact cartons which are kept according to improved methods. Butter which once was almost entirely of dairy origin and displayed in crocks or pails is now put up in pound bricks, wrapped in specially-fabricated paper and kept at a low temperature until sold. In Haboco Stores the choice 3B Brand (Boyle's Better Butter) is packed and wrapped daily for Haboco Stores and is guaranteed to be of the finest quality and strictly fresh.

Canned goods, which a few decades ago were merely an emergency supply of fruits, preserves or vegetables for the customer, which could be quickly and conveniently prepared, are now almost a necessity in every kitchen Every fruit, vegetable, pickle, and almost every species of sea food are now available in all Haboco Stores. The public have realized that the scientific methods of preparation, the absolute cleanliness of packing and the uniformity of quality in canned goods, makes it possible and advisable that they should be used. This, in our estimation, has been a decided boon to the wives in our homes in bringing within their reach, tasty, wholesome produce, scientifically prepared and ready at a moment's notice, with very little cost.

Bread which once was displayed on shelves and exposed to contamination from all sources, is now wrapped by machine in attractive wax paper wrappers. You are assured of fresh, wholesome, tasty, clean bread when shopping at any of the Haboco Stores.

Cooked meats, bacons, hams, meat loafs, etc., are brought to Peterborough in refrigerator cars fresh weekly, and are kept in sanitary, iced show cases and refrigerators until required. How different this is from the stores of long ago, where these tasty and staple foods were exposed to the absorption of cheese, butter, vegetable and other odors, and their flavor decreased by lack of modern methods of delivery, and lack of proper methods of sanitation. All these "little" things, things which every one of us appreciate, have been very carefully studied by the management of the Haboco Stores. It is these considerations, thees modern methods of handling foodstuffs, which has been a large factor in the eight years of success and expansion behind Haboco Stores.

We have our customers and patrons to thank for many of our ideas, and we still invite criticisms and suggestions which will help us to please you.

WHY STRUGGLE

"If she's a sure-enough heiress what's he struggling for?"

SALE OF FRUIT GROWING PART OF BUSINESS

Maurice B. Pringle Will Have Charge of This Department of Company.

GREAT CARE TAKEN.

Fresh Fruits and Vegetables Are Handled Carefully—New Supply Daily.

One of the most amazing facts in connection with the Haboco Stores in Peterborough has been the large volume of fresh fruits and vegetables sold this summer. With Maurice B. Pringle in full charge of the buying, grading and distribution of these essentials the sales per month are running over $4,000. Popular education has brought many astounding facts before the people, and they are realizing more and more the importance of fresh fruits and vegetables in the daily diet, containing as they do those most vital elements of health, minerals and vitamins. The successful handling of fruits and vegetables, as it has been accomplished in the Haboco Stores, is a problem which caused the management much concern. The very fact that they are perishable necessitates that supplies be purchased almost every forty-eight hours. The proximity of Peterborough to the fruit markets in Toronto, makes it possible for Mr. Pringle to order his supplies and have them delivered here all within twelve to fifteen hours. Citrus fruits, apples and vegetables of the root character, of course, need not be purchased more than twice a week, or even once a week, providing markets are favorable. We pride ourselves, however on being extremely "fussy" about the fresh fruits and vegetable end of our business.

This "fussiness" has been appreciated by our customers and our daily sales of these products of Mother Earth is steadily increasing.

We hope that we may have the pleasure of serving even more of the housewives of Peterborough in this department, and we would be pleased to have the suggestions of our friends and patrons from time to time as to how we may better serve them their wants.

Expansion Steady Since First Store Was Opened Here

MAURICE B. PRINGLE

One of the directors of the H. J. Boyle Co., Limited, who is in full charge of fresh fruit and vegetables in all Haboco Stores. Mr. Pringle was born in Fredericton, N.B., on January 1, 1898, and came to Peterborough about twenty years ago. From 1914 until July of 1924 he was in business with his father at the corner of Charlotte and George streets in this city, and on his father's death in that year he continued the business until the early spring of 1928.

Mr. Pringle has had a vast experience in the merchandising of foodstuffs and his connection with the Haboco Stores will be a decided asset to the company.

CANNERS AND FISHERMEN REACH AGREEMENT

VANCOUVER, B.C., Sept. 29.—Fraser River fishermen have gone back to work following their acceptance of the new terms offered by the salmon canners. The boats have been tied up as a result of a deadlock between the executive of the protective union and the canners over the price of fish to be paid this season.

While not obtaining their original demand, the fishermen have got concessions from the canning interests which are expected to considerably enhance their returns during the next two months. The canners will pay 70 cents for sockeye, an increase of five cents a fish. Cohoe prices will be raised one cent to six cents a pound, while the men will be paid 10 cents for chums, as again the original offer of five cents made by the canners.

CANNED GOODS IN SMALL TINS

Canners this year are going in more for the 1's tins of both fruits and vegetables. Some time ago both asparagus and pineapple were turned out in this size tin. Since then strawberries, raspberries and cherries have been packed in it, and peaches and pears will also be put up in this way. The one-pound tin is the same size as the regular soup tin. This size is designed chiefly for the small family desiring sufficient of the fruit or vegetable for one meal.

Business Started in Small Store in 1920 Has Expanded Steadily.

SEVEN STORES NOW.

Absolute Value for Money Has Attracted Many Steady Customers to Stores.

Since June 30th, 1920, a little over eight years ago, H. J. Boyle has been serving the wants of hundreds of housewives in Peterborough and surrounding towns. His personal interest in the customers of the "Boyle Store" was so apparent that it was not long till his business grew beyond the capacity of his store at 168 Charlotte street. He therefore instituted a policy of expansion which has been carefully carried out to the present time. There are now seven Boyle Stores located at 168 Charlotte street corner Patterson and Rutherford, corner Reid and Sherbrooke, Hunter street, East City; Lake and Aylmer, and 571 Chamberlin street. The store in Lindsay is located at 16 William street north, and is under the management of Charles Boyle, a brother of Mr. Harry Boyle.

Pictures of some of the stores appear elsewhere in this section.

Mr. Boyle has made a most careful study of the merchandising of foodstuffs, and the particular wants of his customers. He has always endeavored to give the housewives of Peterborough and Lindsay absolute value for their money, and to supply only the highest possible quality at saving prices. This service has become widely known and it was not long until a central warehouse was a necessity. This warehouse is located on the Canadian National tracks with entrance to Charlotte street, and all goods are sorted graded, and distributed from there. It is necessary for the company to maintain a staff of five men and one girl at this warehouse to handle the large quantity of merchandise which is sold to the people of Peterborough through the Haboco Stores.

The Name "Haboco."

Repeated requests have been received by Mr. Boyle to establish stores in other sections of this city and in the surrounding towns. These have been very carefully considered and it was quite apparent that the time had come when his chain of stores which had firmly 'taken root' in Peterborough and Lindsay could be profitably extended and the Boyle service made available to housewives all over Central and Eastern Ontario. Experts in business economics made a thorough survey of conditions, and it was on their recommendations that the location of new stores was determined. From time to time these stores will be opened and announced through this paper. For instance, it will not be long after this date that a store will be opened in the town of Hastings. The stores from this date will be known as the 'Haboco Stores," the explanation of which appears elsewhere on this page.

It is the intention of the H. J. Boyle Co., Limited, to establish Haboco Stores wherever opportunity is presented, and present plans include Oshawa, Belleville, Trenton, Cobourg, Port Hope, Kingston, Brockville, Gananoque, Hastings, Tweed, and Campbellford, as well of course as additional stores in Peterborough.

It is and will continue to be the policy of the Haboco Stores to stock merchandise of the best quality, and to make available to the householder that saving which is made possible by cash dealing, and larger buying power.

Increase in Yearly Sales

During the past eight years approximately $775,000.00 in groceries has been sold to Peterborough housewives and represents just seventy-seven million, five hundred thousand cents of value. It is on this solid foundation of goodwill that the Haboco Stores are building what will soon be one of Ontario's largest chain grocers. The steady increase in sales can be quickly realized by the following figures.

Total Sales

The Examiner Extends Congratulations

To-day's Examiner contains something unique in its history, a complete four-page section entirely devoted to the story of the remarkable expansion of H. J. Boyle & Co., Ltd., a business that only a few years ago was a one-man, one-store venture in a very modest way on Charlotte street.

Mr. Boyle brought aggressive methods into his business, used printer's ink freely but judiciously, sold at small profits to realize a quick turnover, and specialized in giving value so consistently that his patrons soon numbered hundreds. One store very soon had a companion in another part of the city, then another and another, until now there are seven stores in the Boyle chain in Peterborough.

Even this was not enough to use up the energy bottled up in the hustling proprietor, and recently a stock company was formed, and a chain of stores acquired throughout Eastern Ontario, the story of which is given fully on the first page of the H. J. Boyle section of this issue.

A study of this special four-page section reveals the fact that a lot of the large manufacturing concerns are fully in accord with Mr. Boyle's plans, and glad of a chance to be identified with such an outlet for their goods as the Boyle chain of stores presents.

The Examiner extends its congratulations and best wishes to the new company, of which, its headquarters and stock-holders being in Peterborough, the citizens may well be proud.

Finest Quality Provisions at Honest Prices Foundation of Haboco Chain Stores

COURTESY IS PRINCIPLE IN HABOCO STORE

Every Branch Treats Customers as Guests, and Tries to Please.

SOME RULES.

If Any Haboco Store Has Not What Customer Seeks, It Will Get It.

That courtesy is a good business asset is the belief of the principals of the Haboco stores, and a set of rules has been drawn up with this in mind. These rules are followed in every Haboco store, and this adds to the pleasure of shopping. Customers will find that they are really treated as guests, and that the principle of the stores, "If we haven't it, we'll get it," is carried out in every transaction.

The rules are:

One of the things that sweetens business is courtesy. Not the overwhelming kind that is afforded in some stores and which makes the customer feel that the courtesy covers something, but the usual courtesies that one expects from every well-bred person should be given in abundance.

Remember that every customer is the store's guest, and that people will flock to a store where the salespeople are always courteous. The salesman who is courteous is laying the foundation of business success.

Don't slam packages down on the counter and throw the customer's change after them. Hand them to him or her and thank her for the purchase.

Greet customers by their name if possible. Cultivate the habit of remembering names. If you don't know names, don't say "lady" or "gent" say "madam" or "sir."

Don't say "whadda y'want" and follow up by "I'll see if we have it." You ought to know what is in stock, and if you haven't got it, don't waste the customer's time by an apparent attempt to locate it. Tell the customer if you haven't got it and as is the policy of the store, offer to get it.

DO YOU KNOW THAT—

1. The scales in each Haboco Store are periodically tested and inspected and you are always sure of accurate weight when you shop the Haboco way.
2. Haboco Store managers are required to report weekly to the management, the staples or specials which are in greatest demand. The management then endeavors to purchase these articles at prices which make it possible to pass part of the profits on to its patrons. We have found that this method is appreciated.
3. All our fresh fruits and vegetables are hand picked and graded in our warehouse before being displayed in the stores.
4. It requires a staff of five men and one girl in the central warehouse of Haboco Stores to handle the large quantities of goods distributed by our stores.
5. The management has observed for many months the different methods of serving customers in the stores. They have come to the conclusion that the "Personal Service" by experienced clerks who are trained to serve you is appreciated more than the "Help yourself system."
6. Up to and including September 1, 1928, the Haboco Stores business is approximately $45,000 more than for the same period last year.
7. The Haboco Stores serve approximately four hundred and thirty farmers from a radius of 20 miles of Peterborough each week. The Haboco prices, quality and service must be appreciated by these people.
8. You may have sandwich loaves for any function sliced on electric slicers—free of charge.

The Opportunity of the Year!

Not often are boys and girls given the opportunity to win prizes like snowshoes, skiis and skates!

But the H. J. Boyle Co., Ltd.,, opening a new organization of chain grocery stores, wishes to interest the children in the most economical method of buying groceries,. There is no doubt that the chain store idea is gaining weight, as mothers find they can buy fresher goods at cheaper prices in the chain store than anywhere else. And Haboco stores will be par excellence in the chain grocery line,.

So Mr. Boyle has decided to give boys and girls a chance to tell about it—and they will be given prizes for the telling.

STEADY BUSINESS.

A short time ago Howard Heinz, of Pittsburgh, Pa., and president of the H. J. Heinz Co., visited Montreal on a business trip. In an interview he had some complimentary things to say about this country. "I am a great enthusiast about Canada and its future," he said. "The last two years have witnesed the best percentage of growth in the entire history of our business in the Dominion of Canada, and we believe all lines of business have benefited in a similar way. Personally I do not believe that Canada is in the midst of a boom, but is really coming into her normal business cycle. Her reconstruction period after the war, with her serious losses, is coming into a period now of construction, which I think will be extended over some period of time.

"As the United States becomes more and more industrialized we are bound to draw more and more of our food supply from Canada and our interchange of commodities will become greater than ever. While we are dependent we are interdependent."

It is interesting to note that the Heinz Co. employs over 11,000 people, with factories in England, Spain, Canada and the United States. The business was founded in 1869 by the father of the present head. The founder died in 1919 at the age of 75.

EDUCATED 'EPICIERS'

A few months ago a professor of retailing suggested that we need a grocer's college to teach scientific selling of groceries.

France has beaten us to it. The "School of Technical Instruction" over there is now awarding diplomas to grocers' clerks who "know their groceries."

The would be "epiciers" as they are called in France must pass an examination in weighing out foodstuffs, tieing up parcels, and general handling of spices, wines, fruits and staples.

In the examination held last month, only 10 of the 60 who took it were proficient enough to win the coveted diploma—"Progressive Grocer."

SMILE

"A bright smile," a famous poet has said, "is to the countenance what sunshine is to the landscape."

A friendly, sunny smile sheds a warm glow on all who come within its scope. It adds a large measure of happiness to the simple, homely tasks and transactions of daily life.

And who has a bigger chance to spread good cheer with smiles than the world's largest, most important group of retailers—the grocers?

COMPETITION FOR YOUNG WRITERS

Essay Contest at Haboco Stores Open to All Under Sixteen.

To introduce the newly-organized chain of stores of the H. J. Boyle Co. Ltd., Mr. Boyle is offering valuable prizes to the children of Peterborough for essays or letters on a subject with which every up-to-date person is acquainted—"Why I Like to Buy In a Chain Store."

The first prize will be the winner's choice of skates, skiis, or snowshoes, and there will be five additional prizes of boxes of the fancy biscuits every boy and girl just loves. Surely these are prizes worth having!

Everyone in Peterborough knows the great advantages of buying in chain stores. The goods are bought in large lots, and stored in warehouses until needed by one of the stores. This enables the Haboco stores to sell at lower prices, because one always gets goods cheaper when they are bought in bulk. Then, because of the great turnover of goods, all articles are always fresh. The overhead expense is smaller in a chain stores organization such as the Haboco stores, making another saving which is passed on to the customers.

Then, again, the Haboco stores buy directly from manufacturers, eliminating several middlemen. They pay cash, and they expect their customers to do so too; thus both save by taking cash discounts.

These are just some of the reasons which make the Haboco stores appeal in a city like Peterborough, and the boys and girls who look through this special five-page section carefully will find many more ideas.

The entry coupon and rules will be found on another page.

Every boy and girl up to sixteen years is eligible to enter, except members of the families of employees.

CONNAL'S TEA AND COFFEES

Haboco Stores Handle Best Products—Connal's Products Made Here.

LONG IN BUSINESS

How many of us, when we sit down to a tasty meal, prepared from the choicest of foodstuffs, stop to realize the many, many hours of labor which has been necessary to place that meal before us. The romance of modern transportation, modern methods and the rapid strides made in the preparation of foods would fill a large volume. In our own particular business we have tried to develop along modern lines, and the romance of Connal's Teas and Coffees covers a period of sixty-three years of progress in Peterborough.

In many of your homes, to-day, Connal's Coffee, has played an important part in the enjoyment of your meals. The Haboco Stores have distributed large quantities of our products and the volume has been steadily increasing for years. We therefore would like each of those who have discovered the delicate and delightful flavor of these beverages to know a little something of their history.

About the year 1865, sixty-three years ago, Connal's Teas and Coffees were first sold to the Peterborough people. This coffee was then and is still purchased and imported by us in the green bean, graded roasted and blended by us. Infinite care is taken in this process, and with many years of experience, we claim that we have developed a unique and delightful flavor to our coffees. The original roaster was a primitive wood stove with a large iron cylinder to hold the coffee beans and was turned by hand while roasting. When this process progressed to a certain point, the coffee was taken from this cylinder and placed in a large oox, with notches to hold the shaft, and kept turning until properly browned. This antique method has now been replaced by an electrically operated roaster, and the specially roasted beans ground in a special electrically operated coffee grinder. The same care is taken in the preparation of our coffees to-day, that was taken fifty years ago, and its fine quality, aroma and strength is attributed by us to the very careful grading and roasting of our imported coffee beans.

Connall's Teas are selected and imported in much the same way and with no less care. We have been complimented from time to time on the cup quality and fine flavor of these teas, and the large volume of our business in this district testifies to our success in blending.

These coffees, which are a strictly Made-in-Peterborough product are featured in all Haboco Stores.

BOYS AND GIRLS CAN WIN PRIZES!

Haboco stores recognizes that boys and girls are big eaters, and therefore, while they don't actually buy the goods, they are the reason why groceries are bought.

To introduce the new development by the H. J. Boyle Co., Ltd., Mr. Boyle is offering valuable prizes to the children of Peterborough. NOT just to customers of his big chain grocery stores, but to all children except those in the families of employees. Note that any child in Peterborough shopping district can compete, and the essays and letters will be judged by an independent board.

Full particulars are printed on another page—girls and boys should read them, and get in their entries early. The essays and letters may be handed in at any Haboco store.

Choice of snowshoes, skiis or skates is offered!

TEA PRODUCED IN SIX COUNTRIES ONLY

Tea is produced in but six countries in the world: Japan, China, India, Formosa, Ceylon and Java. Sumatra is now beginning to yield some tea, but the quantities are as yet negligible.

The varieties of tea can be simmered down to two, namely: fermented, or black, and unfermented, or green.

There are, of course, degrees of fermentation, so that some teas are only semi-fermented, as may be seen by the table which follows:

Japan produces only unfermented (green) tea.

China produces both fermented (black) and unfermented (green) tea

Formosa produces a semi-fermented tea.

Ceylon, India and Java produce very largely fermented (black) tea.

In the case of Ceylon, India and Java, a small percentage of unfermented tea is made for export to the United States and Canada.

CANNED FISH IS POPULAR

Salmon and Lobster Lead, Says Government Compilation of Figures.

REACHES $40,000,000.

Figures compiled by the Dominion Bureau of the Department of Trade and Commerce show that since the beginning of the twentieth century the canned foods industry in Canada has increased rapidly. In 1900 the total value of the canned products did not exceed $8,250,000, while in 1926 it had increased to nearly $40,000,000, or six times as great. In addition to that the wooden box industry and the paper and printing industry have benefited. The following table presents the figures for the canned fish industry alone during 1926:

	Cases.	Value.
Salmon	2,066,818	$16,367,808
Lobsters	123,519	2,745,187
Sardines	217,592	980,474
Clams	30,370	183,272
Pilchards	26,731	119,52b
Haddock	14,734	105,300
Herring	18,007	82,442
All other species	3,462	25,045
Total	2,501,233	$21,614,053

From the above it will be seen that salmon leads all other varieties with the lobster second. These two lines account for approximately $20,000,000 worth of canned fish. Sardines are also an important line. Pilchards, haddocks and herring do not amount to very big percentages of the total pack. The salmon packing industry is confined to the province of British Columbia, and dates as far back as 1876, when the initial pack was 9,847 cases drawn wholly from the Fraser River area. Ten years later the pack had increased to 163,004 cases, and in 1896 to 698,300 cases. In 1926 it had jumped to 2,066,618 cases, with a value of more than $16,000,000, constituting the record pack for the industry. The salmon industry includes the packing of the Sockeye, the Spring, Cohoe, the Pink and the Chum. Of these the Sockeye is considered the most important, owing to the quantity as well as its deep red color. It is the chief export line produced.

Lobster canning is carried on in the Maritime Provinces and in Quebec. Sardine canning is confined almost entirely to New Brunswick.

CANADA'S APPLE CROP WILL BE HEAVIER

Canadian commercial apple crop prospects, based on conditions prevailing September 1, indicate a yield of 2,965,060 barrels, as compared with 2,811,100 barrels in 1927. This year's production, according to the crop report just issued by the Dominion Bureau of Statistics, represents 105 per cent of the 1927 crop, and 95 per cent of the five-year average.

Babies Weighed Free At Any Haboco Store

Another service which the Haboco stores offer to parents is the weighing of babies free.

Any Haboco store offers this convenience, and starting next Saturday a slip will be given parents telling the date and weight for reference. The slips, saved up, will give a splendid record of baby's progress.

Mothers should not fail to take advantage of the service, which is gladly offered.

THIS IS MERCHANDISING

When retail organizations achieve first-line importance and broad scope in the merchandising activities of the country, they frequently are forced to take a very definite interest in matters pertaining to the source of their supplies. It has frequently been asserted by critics that when large retail organizations spread their influence to the manufacturing field, for instance, that it is just a further spreading of the tentacles of the great octopus. This is a ridiculous deduction, for the development is a perfectly logical one. A million dollar retail organization cannot afford to allow itself to be at the mercy of a manufacturing concern which may not be capitalized at one tenth of that amount, and so we find the larger retail organizations exerting a greater influence than ever upon the producers of the articles which they sell. This is a new phase of merchandising.

Salesmen for a men's furnishing goods jobber reported to their sales manager that in certain country districts there was a strong demand among retailers for a cap that could be sold for around 79 cents. The cap must be a good one of the lower-price kind that ordinarily would bring $1 or more at retail. The jobber's merchandis manager took personal charge of a transaction which made the 79-cent cap possible. He conferred with the manufacturer and the two worked out a cap that was an exceptional value for the money. A huge order was given which made volume production possible.

MERCHANT LOSES OLD CUSTOMERS

Estimate Says Fifteen Per Cent., So Old-Established Trade Not Always Best.

One retail business man has figured that a merchant loses 15 per cent. of his trade every year on account of deaths, customers moving out of the district and changing over to competitors. It used to be that retailers could pride themselves on the fact that they were long established, that their customers had been trading with them for years and years, and that no matter what type of competition came along they would still have the old customers on whom to rely. But nowadays the term "old-established does not mean very much. One cannot base development on this alone. He necessarily must lose a great many of his customers from the above-mentioned causes and, unless he secures others to take their places, it does not require much knowledge of mathematics to determine how long the business is going to last.

The fact that a business is old-established is perhaps a questionable asset for any young man to inherit. He is liable to depend too much on the traditions of the older families—that they must continue to deal with the store that had supplied them with their wants for many years. The younger geenration is not tied down to any traditions. It is sure to follow at least to a degree the dictates of its own fancy. Customers of to-day are constantly on the look-out for improvements on the original, and the merchant must [illegible] wide awake to get their business. [illegible]n get it only by keeping up [illegible]he times and supplying the g[illegible]nd service that are called for to-day. Methods that weer adopted ten, fifteen and more years ago were correct for those times, but they are out of date when compared with those required to meet the present situation.

Interesting Story Told of Rise From Wood-Friction Method.

PRECIOUS SECRET.

Modern Match As Sold By Haboco Stores Has Wonderful History.

In Fairfield Rd., Bow, London, E., there is a vastly interesting but little-known museum devoted entirely to the story of man's struggles down the ages to preserve to himself those most blessed gifts of the gods—fire and light.

In the showcases ranged round the large and airy gallery you observe the gradual climb of our early ancestors from the wood-friction methods to the modern matches seen on the shelves of such stores as the Haboco chain, and taken for granted by every member of modern civilization.

The wood friction method is seen in the laborious fire-drills, fire-saws and fire-plows, which were probably the earliest instruments devised by primitive man, to the flint-and-pyrites method that marked the stone and bronze ages. This latter consisted of obtaining sparks which lighted tinder by striking a nodule of the common mineral iron-pyrites with a pointed flake of flint. This method is still employed by certain Eskimo tribes.

The flint-and-pyrites method waned when, about three thousands years ago, man discovered the art of smelting iron a progression that resulted in the more ardent flint-and-steel method which persisted, in slowly improving forms, up to around the year 1835, and, in factfi is still practised by South European peasants and many semi-civilized peoples. Steel and flint have often been found in burial mounds clasped in the hand of a dead warrior ready for immediate use to lighten his way when he awakes in the world beyond!

The museum shows how packed were the three thousands years preceding the arrival of the "instantaneous match" we know today with the ingenious efforts of inventors of the world. Although the flint and steel were basic necessities in all such designs, the variety of form and materials was unlimited. Tinder-boxes of wood, horn, metal and bone are shown by the score; fire-steels of every pattern, some beautifully wrought, and, in the case of eastern specimens, richly adorned with jewels and engraving; tinder-boxes for the pocket as small as snuff-boxes, and as beautifully carved; tinder-bags and

WIN Snowshoes, Skiis or Skates

The competition announced by Mr. Boyle to introduce the new Haboco store organization offers children in Peterborough a splendid opportunity to win these winter sports necessities. The winner of the competition will have a choice, and there will be five additional prizes of boxes of fancy biscuits.

The rules are set forth on another page, where the entry coupon will also be found. Remember, boys and girls, your parents do not have to be customers at a Haboco store in order for you to compete.

There are columns and columns about the Haboco stores and chain grocery stores generally in this section, and your mother can tell you more about why it pays to buy at the chain grocery. Look on every page, and if there is something you don't understand ask some older member of the family to explain it.

You may write a letter or an essay, whichever you like. Just hand in your entry, with the coupon, at any of the Haboco stores before Saturday, October 13, at 10 o'clock. Results will be announced as soon after that date as possible.

Make up your mind to enter—do it now.

pouches for the early smokers; tinder-pistols, often the work of famous gunsmiths (there are over a hundred of these collected in a number of countries; they were extensively used in the seventeenth and eighteenth centuries); burning lenses, in some cases inserted in the lid of a tin of tobacco!—these are representative of the exhibits of the "tinder-box" era.

Mechanical-minded wizards of that period produced many ingenious devices, if somewhat a la Heath Robinson in conception; such was the tinder-box pistol that was fired by an alarm clock. The alarm fired the pistol and ignited a pinch of gunpowder, which in turn lighted a candle that had sprung from inside the box! Another was intended for sluggards. Patented in 1824, it consisted of a piece of string passing over a pulley attached to the stopper of an acid bottle. As you lay in bed you pulled the string, lifting the stopper, which applied a spot of acid to a crude sulphur match, which rotated on a wheel until it came next to the wick of a spirit lamp, which, if everything went according to plan, gave you your light!

Portable Fire-box.

This acid device, or "portable fire-box," as it is called, was one of the earliest forms of "instantaneous lights," and was invented in Italy in 1786. Similar to it was the "Promethean match," patented by Samuel Jones of the Strand in 1828. A minute quality of sulphuric acid sealed in a tiny glass vehicle, surrounded by a compound of chlorate of potash, was enclosed in a paper spill. When the glass vesicle was broken, either by the hammer supplied with the "match" or with the teeth, the acid inflamed the potash and ignited the paper.

Despite the many claimants, the honor of inventing the first real "friction match" of the kind with which we are familiar today belongs to John Walker, a Stockton-on-Tees chemist. In 1826 he was selling his friction lights for a shilling a hundred, and twopence for the box! The match was pressed between the fingers in a piece of sandpaper.

By 1834 the "Lucifers" and "Congreves," which were the first phosphorus matches, were in common use, to be followed later by "Fusees," "Vestas," "Vesuvians" and "Safeties". They had many disadvantages. A strong sun or a sudden blow would be liable to ignite the box. More than one label in the museum warned purchasers that, owing to the poisonous fumes, no one with weak lungs should strike the matches! The harmless red phosphorus of modern "strike anywhere" matches arrived in 1898, though the noxious yellow phosporus with its peril to worker and consumer was not legally banned until 1910.

The museum also contains scores of match box labels of different countries that must surely be unique. Foreign covers are shown with famous "beauties" reproduced upon them in gaudy colors; others bear bird and flower designs; while some, like that showing the meeting of Dr. Livingstone and Stanley, suggest that match boxes once supplied belated pictorial news to patrons!

MANUFACTURERS EXTEND COMPLIMENTS TO HABOCO STORES

CHAIN STORES ARE NOT NEW; HERE TO STAY

Haboco Stores Follow in a Long Line of Merchandising Successes.

BUT STILL UNIQUE.

First Chain Store in Peterborough Backed by All-Peterborough Capital.

Chain stores are looked upon as something new in the world of merchandising, but they are about the oldest thing in Canada. One realizes this when it is recalled that the Hudson's Bay Co. was incorporated on May 2, 1670, and established a chain or trading posts soon after. The Haboco stores of Peterborough are following in a long line of merchandishing successes in the chain store field, and these successes have come by merit.

The Hudson's Bay chain of trading posts is still in existence and is still expanding. Some of the posts, those in Western cities, are modern department stores which are architecturally attractive and compare favorably with the greatest stores in much large cities than there are in Canada.

Chain stores are not new; what is notable about chain stores is their recent rapid development. Besides the grocery chains, which are death within a separate article, there now are drug chains, candy chains, dry cleaning chains, automobile dealer chains. Even government liquor stores are operated in chains.

When management is efficient, a number of merchandising units can be operated with a much smaller overhead expense per unit than can a single unit no matter how efficient the management. This probably explains why chains have grown. Their growth, of course, has been facilitated by the rapid improvement in transportation and communication in the last ten or fifteen years.

Undoubtedly, chains are here to stay. An industry that will survive and continue to grow is a promising investment.

The newly organized Haboco stores are well equipped to meet the requirements set up by other high-standard organizations, and the people of Peterborough will profit by their advent. The high calibre of the men at the head of affairs assures continuity of good service, and the city should be proud of the fact that this big organization is manned by all-Peterborough men.

Competition For Boys & Girls

To introduce the newly organized Haboco stores organized by the H. J. Boyle Co., Ltd., big prizes are beng offered by Mr. Boyle. First prize is the winner's choice of skates, snowshowes, or skiis, and there will be five additonal prizes of boxes of fancy biscuits.

The following are the rules.:

1. Any boy or girl not over sixteeen on October 13 this year may enter, except members of the families of employees.

2. Entries must be handed in at any of the Haboco stores before closing time (10 p.m.) on Saturday, October 13.

3. Every entry must be accompanied by the coupon, properly filled in.

4. Competitors do not need to be customers at the Haboco stores in order to compete.

5. Essays or letters must not be over 300 words, and must be written on one side of the paper only. Neatness will be consdered.

6. The judges will be the directors of the Company, Isaac P. McNabb, Harry C. Huffman, John A. Dewart, H. J. McCannan, Maurice B. Pringle, and F. Mather, assisted by John R. Heron, Managing Editor of The Examiner.

BECOMES A $100,000,000 CONCERN

Recently reference was made to the Postum Cereal Company Incorporated having an option on the Cheek-Neal Coffee Company of Nashville, Tenn. This has since been confirmed, and this coffee house is being taken over by the Postum Company. This makes one more firm of a large number that has been absorbed during the past year or so. The list includes the following: Swansdown Flour, Jell-O, Baker's Cocoa and Chocolate, Franklin H. Baker's Cocoanut, Hellman's Salad Dressing, Sanka Coffee, Minute Tapioca, and now the Cheek-Neal Coffee Company. It is stated that the amount involved in the absorption of the last named concern is approximately $45,000,000. Reports are to the effect that with the acquisition of the Cheek-Neil Company the Postum Company will do approximately $100,000,000 worth of business a year. This makes it one of the largest food products firms on the continent.

WHEAT CROP.

Present indications point to the harvesting of the largest wheat crop ever reaped in Canada, amounting to 550,482,000 bushels," says a report recently issued by the Dominion Bureau of Statistics.

"For the first time the wheat crop has passed the half-billion mark," continues the report. "The largest crop in any former year amounted to 474,199,000 bushels in 1923. The area sown to wheat this year is also the largest on record, 24,114,846 acres, an increase of 1,634,692 acres over 1927. Barley also gives the highest yield on record, showing 144,875,000 bushels from 4,879,588 acres as compared with a previous record of approximately 100,000,000 bushels, in 1926. The yield of oats, 474,242,000 bushels, is distinctly better than the average of recent years."

For all Canada the average yields per acre, in bushels, are as follows, last year's final figures being given within brackets: Fall wheat, 26.1 ((26.1); spring wheat, 22.7 (19.3); all wheat, 22.8 (19.5); oats, 36.1 (33.2); barley, 29.7 (27.7); fall rye, 20.3 (20.4); spring rye, 19.7 (19.2); all rye, 20.1 (20.1); flexseed, 11.1 (10.3). Belleville Wins O.B.A.A. Senior Championship

WALKERVILLE SQUAD LOSES FINAL GAME

Belleville Nationals Defeat the Chicks 7 to 5 at Guelph on Saturday.

GIBSON PITCHES

Losers Collect Nine Hits, Five of Them Coming in the Fifth Frame.

GUELPH, Oct. 1.—Laurel wreaths of 1928 O.B.A.A. senior baseball rest fittingly upon the brows of Belleville's Nationals. The snappy crew from down east grabbed the pennant here on Saturday when they downed the Walkerville Chicks, a hundred to one shot for the honors a week ago, by a count of 7 to 5. The Chicks failed to show the class that carried them through their scheduled season and the first rounds. They were outplayed, outsmarted and outlucked in the final of the series by Belleville and the Easterners captured the pennant on their obvious merits.

The combination of "Hoot" Gibson, National ace flinger, and "Peeney" Mills, veteran backstop, proved too much for the Border City aggregation. The twenty-one-year-old pitcher, performing for the second time within three days, was a mystery to the hard sluggers from the Border and although they found him for nine smacks, five of which came in one frame, the fifth, he never lost control of the game. He struck out five Chicks with his puzzling selection of hooks and sinkers and only walked one during the progress of hostilities.

Border Hurlers Wild.

Marchand started on the mound for Gordie Fuller's hopes and succeeded in holding his position on the slab until the fifth inning when with two runs in and two men on the pathways he was relieved to make way for Smith, who finished the game. Smith had a world of speed but his control was poor. He hit three men and walked two before the conclusion of the engagement.

Belleville counted once in the opening frame and the Chicks drew ahead in the fifth when on five hits and an error three men pattered across the plate. The Nationals came back in their share of the same frame with four more runs and again took the lead. From there they were never headed. They counted again in the sixth and eighth and Walkerville, despite two tallies in the seventh, were unable to pull up again on even terms.

About 3,000 fans from all parts of Western Ontario flocked to Exhibition Park here to watch the struggle. Belleville and Walkerville were both well represented. Box score:

CHAMPIONS WELCOMED HOME.

BELLEVILLE, Oct. 1.—The members of the National baseball team of this city, Senior champions of Ontario, arrived home from Guelph at midnight on Saturday, and despite the late hour were met with a hearty reception. Upon arrival at the C.N.R. depot the players were placed in autos and a parade headed by the regimental band of the city was formed. Many were upon the street to cheer the champions as they passed by. In 1919 the championship was brought to this city, and some of the present team were then members of the team.

YANKS WIN FINAL GAME

Defeat Tigers 7-6 in Closing Game of Schedule at Detroit.

HOYT GETS BONUS.

NEW YORK, Oct. 1.—(Canadian Press)—The pennant-winning Yankees closed the American League season at Detroit today with a 7-6 victory over the Detroit Tigers.

Waite Hoyt, pitching the full route for New York, won his twenty second game of the year and thereby cinched a bonus of $2,000 offered him by Colonel Jacob Ruppert, owner of the champions.

During a wrangle over salary last spring, Ruppert told the pitcher he would add $2,000 to his season's pay if he won 22 games. Hoyt was given the opportunity to pitch yesterday only because he needed one more game to round out the bonus-winning total.

Otherwise, he would have been allowed to rest for the World series.

Hoyt's triumph was marked by Babe Ruth's fifty fourth home run of the year and his fourth of the final series. It was a drive into the right field bleachers in the fifth inning with Durst on base.

Lou Gehrig was struck in the face by a ground ball from Stone's bat in the seventh inning and forced to retire. The Yankee first baseman collapsed in his tracks, and was assisted to the dugout. The injury, however, was not serious and a few minutes later Gehrig walked to club house. George Burns, the former Cleveland player, took his place at first.

The Red Sox closed their season at Cleveland yesterday afternoon with a 7-2 victory over the Indians, their fourth straight from the slipping Cleveland. The Sox gathered 15 hits off Barnhart, a rookie right-hander, and Bayne, while MacFayden restricted the Tribe to nine.

Phil Todt hit a home run with the bases empty.

The Washington Senators pounded George Blaeholder, Brownie right hander, unmercifully at St. Louis and the Browns dropped their last contest with Washington 9-1.

The spell came in the fifth inning when Goose Gosline hit a home run with two men on bases. Sam Jones was on the mound for the Senators.

Bob Weiland, rookie hurler from the Mississippi Valley League, made his major league debut yesterday and pitched the White Sox to a 1 to 0 victory over Philadelphia in the season's finale at Chicago.

Welland held the Athletics to seven hits, fanned nine and was so tight in the pinches that 12 Athletics were stranded on base. The winning run came in the seventh inning when Reynolds, another rookie, singled, took second on an infield out and scored on Kamm's single.

Yerkes, Philadelphia rookie, also pitched masterful ball, limiting the White Sox to four hits.

CARDINALS WIN NATIONAL FLAG

Take Honors When Cubs Defeat Giants and Their Own Victory Over Braves.

TIGHT PENNANT RACE.

BOSTON, Mass., Oct. 1 (Associated Press).—St. Louis won the hottest National League pennant fight in twenty years by the Cubs 6 to 2 victory over the Giants at New York Saturday. About one hour before the Cardinals mad assurance doubly sure by defeating the Braves in this city by a score of 3 to 1. To take their only previous National League flag two years ago, the Cardinals had to fight until Friday, with a Sunday finish, but this year's contest held on one day longer.

The 1928 battle will go down in National League records ranking second only to that of 1908 among all the modern campaigns.

The Cubs of twenty years ago finished the regular season with 153 games played and in a tie with the Giants who had engaged in the same number. The Cubs then invaded New York the day after the regular finish and won from the Giants by 4 to 2 in a play-off of the tie game caused by Merkle's famous failure to touch second.

The Cards bunched hits on Art Delaney in the first inning for all their runs, and never molested Ed. Brandt or Art Greenfield who followed. Willie Sherdel pitched for the new champions until shortly after the Giant defeat was officially announced, and then gave way to Flint Rhem. The Braves got their only run off Sherdel in the seventh.

The Cardinals assumed the lead in the pennant fight about the middle of June, passed the fourth of July going strong, struck hard going for the month of August, and then finished up with another winning spurt through the east. They never were out of first place once they gained it, save for five days in August, when the Giants slipped to the fore by one percentage point after taking three straight games from the Red Birds in St. Louis. The Cards all this time were half a game ahead on games, but second in percentage.

INDIANAPOLIS LEAD BY ONE

American Association Champions Defeat Rochester 5-1 in Fourth Contest.

LITTLE WORLD SERIES.

ROCHESTER, N.Y., October 1 (Associated Press). — Rochester bowed for the second time before the mastery of the right hand of "Swede" Swetonic, young Indianapolis hurler, and the American Association champions are now one up on the International League pennant winners in the Little World Series. Indianapolis took a 2-1 lead in the standing by a triumph over the Red Wings, 5 to 1, yesterday afternoon before an official attendance of 12,207. Swetonic won the first game in 11 innings, 3 to 2.

The ace of the Red Wing mound corps, Herman Bell, was treated roughly, the Indians getting nine hits in seven frames.

Five runs came as a result of these bingles and three of them followed what would have been the third out in the fourth inning when a hit bounced over George Toporcer's head as the second sacker was set to toss Warsler out. That fluke blow brought home Haney and Spencer and Warstler second on Holke's short double to the left field line.

In the fifth the Indians tallied twice, a base on balls to Connolly being followed by safe hits by Haney and Russell and a sacrifice fly to Kauffman by Blenkiron.

The Red Wings made one in the sixth for flurry. Torporcer walked and Gelbert singled to put the second sacker on his own bag. Southworth forced Gelbert at second. Torporcer going to third, Kauffman scored the Keystones with a sacrifice fly.

Swetonic allowed by five hits and walked but two, while fanning three more. In four of the innings the home forces went down in order and in three more but four men faced the former Pittsburgh University star.

The contest was the last in Rochester, the clubs moving on to Indianapolis last night to play the first game in the American Association end of the Series on Wednesday in the Hoosier Capital. With the Indians holding a 2-1 advantage in four before the Indians take three to triumph in the Series.

The teams battled through 12 of the wildest innings ever seen in the third contest here on Saturday, 12 to 12. The scramble twice found the International League Red Wings four runs behind, once goinginto the ninth frame in that manner, but the men of Southworth kept plugging at the delivery of four Indian hurlers and finally tied up the game.

Hits were even. Only 18 for each team in the 12 innings that were played before the contest was halted by darkness.

While 30 men pastimed for the two clubs, Rochester using 17 and the American Association champions 13, there were no heroes.

Connolly topped the hitting of the game with five safe cracks in five trips to the plate.

Tony Kaufman, Monahan, and Ira Smith each had three safe blows for the day, while Haney had a trio for the champions of the American Association. Fielding honors went to Connolly at second with 15 chances without an error.

VIEWS ON SPORT

Yankees and Cardinals will open World's Series on Thursday, at the New York club's stadium.

The Yankees will enter the World Series in a crippled condition, with the Cardinals favored to win the decision, six to five, on Wall Street. Pennock and Moore, two of their star pitchers are out, while Coombs has a wrist injury. Added to this Lazerri and Ruth are handicapped by ailments. Such an epidemic of casualties might be enough to discourage any team. Moundsmen for both sides will be veterans of the game, all having been through a world series before, Alexander, Sherdel and Haines for the Cards with Hoyt, Pipgras and old Tom Zachary on the opposite side. Weaker on the mound than St. Louis, the New York club are far stronger at the bat, Gehrig and Ruth providing a formidable combination of artillery men that would make any team look up.

Assuming the lead in the National League pennant fight about the first of June, the Cardinals have held onto it through a tough season to win the flag on Saturday, by reason of the Cubs' defeat over the Giants and their own victory over the Bruins. The Cards were never out of first place during the month of August except for a period of five days when the New York club slipped ahead to the leader's place by one percentage point after taking three straight games from the Red Birds at St. Louis.

The Hamilton Tigers opened the football season on their own lot on Saturday by defeating Queen intercollegiate squad by a 28 to 2 verdict. The victors played a good offensive and defensive game right from the start. Roy Broadway, a former Argonaut player, was the outstanding star on the Bengal squad, his tackle being a vast help to the men on the back. Munroe and Gilman shaped up well for the Tricolor division nevertheless the college team on the whole play could not gain yards against the Hamilton club until the final session, when substitutes were performing for the Bengals.

Ottawa Senators also opened the season at the Capital City by swamping Camp Borden in an exhibition tilt. The Fliers could do nothing after the first four minutes of the play, while the victors marched from the centre to the Airmen's goal in a succession of plays which resulted in a sweeping triumph for them.

Again the choolboys of the local public schools have taken up the annual competition of the Alex. Kay soccer cup. This afternoon four teams started their respective series, which is divided into two sections. The schools composed of Central, Queen Alexandra and King George play home and home games until they have declared a winner, which will meet the finalists of the other group that is confined to Prince of Wales, Queen Mary and King Edward School. During the last three years the cup has been won by Central, Queen Alexandra and Prince of Wales', last season's champions.

Cards Favorites to Win Series on Wall Street, Six to Five.

(By Alan J. Gould, Associated Press sports editor)

NEW YORK, Oct. 1.—(Associated Press).—Taking up the baseball battle where they left off in the chill and rainy gloom of the Yankee stadium two years ago, the New York Yankees and St. Louis Cardinals will meet this Thursday on the same battle ground in the opening of the 1928 World's Series.

The stalwart, weather-beaten figure of old Pete Alexander was the last to bar the way to the Yankees in that memorable struggle of 1926. He may be the first to try to hold the fort this time, with Hoyt, a factor in every one of the six Yankee pennant victories, as his opponent in the opening pitchers' duel.

Two-storm-tossed, battered and weary outfits have come down to the big climax of the 1928 season, survivors of two of the most exciting pennant campaigns in the history of either major league.

No team that can be recalled offhand has ever entered the series so crippled as the Yankees. To the loss of two of the club's pitching aces, Pennock and Moore, has been the wrist injury to Earl Coombs that will keep the fleet Kentuckian out of centerfield. The team won the pennant with two other stars, Lazzeri and Ruth, handicapped by ailments and the regular third sacker, Joe Bugan also out of action.

Such an epidemic of casualties might be enough to discourage any team. It came close to costing the Yankees the pennant but they had enough stuff to beat off the Athletics, when Mack's machine threatened most, and they won't concede the Cardinals much if anything, in the forthcoming championship fight.

St. Louis, for the reason that it has a superior pitching staff headed by Alexander, Sherdel and Haines all veterans of the 1926 victory, probably will enter the series favored to win.

The betting odds in Wall Street favor them at six to five. The Cardinals also will have the advantage of being more intact, physically, than the Yankees, but it will be upon their moundsmen that the chief hopes of the Missouri men will hinge.

Old. Alex. Sherdel and Haines will pit their stuff against Hoyt, Pipgras and probably old Tom Zachachary, who came back to form at a time when the Yankees were in dire need of pitching talent. Old Tom has been through the World's Series mill before, with Washington, so that the championship test will be nothing new to any of these six twirling hopes.

Even in its crippled condition the Yankees attack figures to be more formidable than that of the Cardinals. Bottomley and Hafey provide the big punch of the St. Louis troupe while Gehrig and Ruth lead the Yankee artillery. The long range firing of these combinations ought to be as interesting a contrast as was the duel last year between the New York home run twins and the Waner Brothers of Pittsburgh.

The Yankees have Lazzeri, Mousel and Koenig to add additional punch to their offensive, the Cardinals rely on Frisch to snap out of his batting slump, besides depending on Douhit, Harper and High.

All reserved seats for the first game, totalling about 35,000 have been sold, the Yankees announce, but 40,000 unreserved seats will be put on sale the day of the game.

After two games here the contenders will take a day off to journey to St. Lous, resuming the series next Sunday. Three games are scheduled there before a return to New York for the final two, if they are necessary. The games will start at 1:30 p.m. standard time, in each city.

PETES OUTPLAY LINDSAY TEAM

Win First Senior Interscholastic Rugby Game of Season 17-0.

LOCAL TEAMS PLAY.

Out-playing their opposition in practically every department, the Peterborough Collegiate senior rugby team came through with a 17-0 win over Lindsay Collegiate in the opening game of the Fall schedule at James Stevenson Park on Saturday afternoon. The game, played in weather ideally suited to baseball, proved plenty fer both teams and an encouragingly large crowd of fans, of which the student element was in the majority, enjoyed it immensely. Completing the double header was a game between two Peterborough O.R.F.U. teams, Junior and Intermediate, the Juniors coming out on top with a 28-20 score.

The Petes' Total

Called for 2:30, the students' game did not get under way until a half hour later, but once started, there was plenty of excitement, for the visitors, while out-shone, presented a line quite as weighty as the homesters.

Their inexperience, as much as anything, proved to the Petes' advantage, and the local students were not slow to take advantage. Within three minutes after the starting whistle, the Petes sent Dunkerley on a run that ended behind the Lindsay line for the first touch, and half way through the quarter, Cuthbertson hooted the ball to the deadline to bring his team's total to the even half dozen.

The second quarter, void of all scoring, was quite interesting while the locals started their second half in the same manner as the first—by Dunkerley making the big crossing to bring the count to 11-0. Dearborn kicked for the next point and just before the final whistle, Cuthbertson went through for the final touchdown.

End Runs Win.

The margin that the local lads had over their opposition was not in line work so much as in their ability to do end runs. Nearly all of their territorial gains were made in this way, with forty and sixty yard runs being far from unknown.

Against this, the Lindsay team inclined to heavy line plunging and to their credit, may it be said, there were occasions when they had the homesters fighting hard to keep them off the touch line. A little variety in the form of an end run might well have brought them out of the blank column. They seemed less sure of their plays and this hesitation several times caused the ball carrier to be nailed before he could get started. Preston, playing snap for the P.C.I., had particular success at this.

Rosy Hewett, playing on the rear guard, Dunkerley and Cuthbertson starred. The last named was prominent by his skilful handling of the team as quarter and some smart long distance runs, and as one of the old-timers remarked, "There goes one boy to whom use of the straight-arm is far from a lost art." Cuthbertson's runs were certainly a big help. For Lindsay, Miles at quarter and Stauffer on the back line, showed up to best advantage, the latter boy doing some nice booting in the pinches.

B. Tolton of Lindsay, as referee, and Carl Brown, of Peterborough, handled the game satisfactorily.

The teams:

Lindsay—Halves, McLean, Stauffer, and Fulton.

Quarter, Miles.

Flying wing, Gamble.

Outsides, Gregory and Beatty.

Middles, Bruthour and Reeves.

Insides, Maunder and Adams.

Snap, Seaton.

Subs., Beal, Stephens, Bradford, Alsop, Johnston, Graham.

Peterborough — Halves, Magee and Hewett.

Quarter, Cuthbertson.

Flying wings, Green and Dunkerley.

Outsides, Westbrook and Reynolds.

Middles, Armstrong and Johnson.

Insides, Hall and Glover.

Snap, Preston.

Subs., Ryl, Lord, Gemmell, Wiman.

Juniors, 28; Intermediates 20

The second game of the afternoon, while not fast, provided great workout for both outfits, and while only an exhibition fixture, attracted a large portion of the crowd that had come for the Collegiate game. Among other things, it proved that their is plenty of material to provide good teams in both the Junior and Intermediate O.R.F.U.

For the Juniors, Newson, Miller and Hope were best, while Sheehy, Westbrook and Dundas looked good on the Intermediate outfit. McLeish got in some nice kicking, too.

The teams:

Juniors—Halves, Hope and White; Quarter, Newson; Flying wings, eWir and Cripps; Middles, Miller and Cowan; Insides, Redyard and Peryer; Snap, Mackey.

Intermediates—Halves, McLeish and Henry; Quarter, Fraser; Flying wings, Westbrooke and Sheehy; Outsides, Snyder, Thornton and Dundas; Middles, McGee and Hall; Insides, Wigg and Flemming; Snap, Cowan.

HARVEST FESTIVAL

power. The thundering of the seas on the beach, the sunrise, the coming of the darkness of night, all signified the presence of some great, unearthly power.

But in the modern times, the Christian believes that all these things are acts of God and together they form but a thin veil which, when lifted, reveals the greatness of His Divine Majesty. It is he who guides the stars, sends the rain and the sun and fills the valleys so thick with corn that they laugh and sing.

All this is but to satisfy man's need that he in turn may realize the divine power and be governed by it. Sacrifice is also to be considered in the great power of God. Just as the seed is sacrificed for the plant and the plant is sacrificed for the needs of man, so man must be willing to sacrifice something even life itself for the glory of God. Nor was man independent. He may plant the seed, but he cannot create it. We can cultivate it but he cannot make it grow. He must depend on the sun and the rain, upon the power of God for the seed to ripen into the plant and the full ear.

TO STUDY ANCIENT DESIGNS.

The National Museum, Ottawa, will conduct a study of the ancient handicrafts and designs of French Canada, in order to determine the extent of their influence on the arts and crafts of the various Indian tribes. It is thought that many, if not most of the patterns in bead and silk work that appear on Indian specimens may not be aboriginal at all, but copied from European patterns.

CANADA NEEDS MORE DAIRIES SAYS PRESIDENT OF COUNCIL

Will Have To Import Fifteen Million Pounds of Fat This Year.

EXPORTS ARE HIGH.

Saskatchewan Factories Win Prizes at British Dairy Farmers' Show.

Regina, Oct. 1.—"Undoubtedly the total make of butter in Canada this year will not come within fifteen or twenty million pounds of supplying our own need," said J. A. Calder, president of the National Dairy Council of Canada, at the meeting of the Dominion Mortgage and Investments Association here. "It is perhaps more correct, however, to say that the development has not kept pace with the increased population and increased purchasing power of the country, so that whereas in 1924 we had an exportable surplus of approximately twenty-five million pounds, we will undoubtedly import fifteen or twenty million pounds in the fiscal year ending March 31, 1929," he continued. Canada consumes approximately 28 pounds of butter per capita per year, undoubtedly the highest per capita consumption in the world, Mr. Caulder explained. "In Eastern Canada they have very large imports of fluid milk and cream, also condensed and evaporated milk, to the United States. Our milk power factories are shipping their product all over the world. Canada's cheese is still the best cheese in the world and commands the highest price. Our best butter is as good as the best in the world, our average possibly not up to the average of Denmark, New Zealand and Australia. However, the fact that we do make good creamery butter is clearly proven by the fact that in 1925 two Saskatchewan buttermakers, both still making butter in this province, won the first and second prizes, consisting of the gold and silver medals, at the London Dairy Show under the auspices of the British Dairy Farmers' Association, and again in 1927 the same buttermakers won honorable mention, but were not fortunate enough to secure the gold and silver medals."

Reviewing the development of the western dairy industry, Mr. Caulder drew attention to the fact that a distinguished pioneer from the district of Moose Jaw delivered to the old Government Creamery at the city mentioned in 1893 the products of 5,800 pounds of milk for which he received the sum of $28.00, being payment in full of 214.11 pounds of butter-fat, or slightly less than 14c per pound. Today, dairy farmers in Regina district received 75c per pound of butter-fat for their whole milk, or almost five and one-half times as much.

One of the difficulties which, as President of the the Dairy Council of Canada, he had to face was the difficulty of interesting farmers who have in recent years received approximately $1.50 per bushel for wheat, in dairy work. Thirty-cent butter-fat cannot compete with $1.50 wheat, but he did maintain that 40c butter fat will. "I am sure that during the hard years which we experienced between 1920 and 1926, the mortgage companies would not have fared so well and the province would not have had such a good record if it had not been for the development of dairying," he declared.

FARMERS FIND SOY BEAN PAYS

Staple Food of Chinese Soldier Finds Favor in America.

PROFITABLE CROP

Regina, Sask., Oct. 1 (Canadian Press).—Cultivation of Chinese soy, or Mung, beans as an industry in itself, or as a side issue to the serious business of wheat growing is to be undertaken by a group of Saskatchewan farmers.

When Dr. Tehyi Hsieh, Chinese statesmen, visited here recently he spoke of the possibilities in the growth of the soy bean in Canada. A group became interested in the plan and their experiments convinced them that the idea was distinctly practicable. They said that the bean could be grown at a cost of four cents a pound and at present quotations could be sold at forty-eight cents a pound.

The best commercial market for the bean is in Eastern Canada and the Eastern United States, and at present this commodity has to be imported from Manchuria where for years they have been the chief food of the people.

The chief requisite for the Mung bean is moisture. It will grow in almost any kind of ground under almost any kind of circumstances as long as there is moisture and a heat of approximately 65 degrees Fahrenheit.

Chinese armies have lived upon the Soy bean alone for weeks at a time.

TOBACCO GROWS WELL IN ALBERTA

Experiments at Lethbridge Station Will Be Continued.

Edmonton, Alta, Oct. 1 (Canadian Press).—Experiments in tobacco growing by the department of agriculture at Lethbridge station have proved so successful that they will be continued, according to a statement made by Dr. J. H. Grisdale, of Ottawa, deputy minister of agriculture. It is the intention to continue the experiments, the results having been fairly satisfactory, as it is believed there is a big opportunity for that industry in Alberta.

P.C.I. SECONDS LOSE OUT 7-5

Bowmanville Intermediates Defeat Local Twelve in Opening Game.

MANY FUMBLES.

Collegiate Intermediates lost their opening game at Bowmanville, 7 to 5. Ideal football weather prevailed, with a light wind blowing from the south. Both teams playing their first football, made many fumbles, but none of these figured in the scoring.

Peterborough were outweighed, 158 to 138 pounds average, but repeatedly tore holes in the Bowmanville line for yards, only to lose their gain by fumbles or offsides.

Bowmanville, on the other hand, by sheer weight, plunged for yards, but twice when within 5 yards of the line, failed to break through Petes' stubborn defence.

Bowmanville scored a try, Adams intercepting a pass on an extend, and galloping 60 yards to goal.

Peterborough retaliated in the second quarter, making yards three times in a row. Dinesen bucked eight yards on the third down to go over.

Bowmanville added single points in the first and fourth quarters.

Three minutes to go, Peterborough pressed hard and were twenty yards out when the final whistle blew.

Both sides were weak in kicking.

The Game

Bowmanville won the toss and took the wind. McWilliams kicked off for Peterborough to Dewitt. Bowmanville on third down. Peterborough lost the ball 20 yards out on fake kick, and Bowmanville kicked for a point.

Peterborough was forced to kick on a third down. Bowmanville fumbled and Wagar recovered. Adams intercepted a pass, and galloped 60 yards for a touch. Bowmanville failed to convert.

McWilliams kicked off to Bowmanville's 30 yard line. Peterborough recovered 30 yards out.

Quarter time — Bowmanville, 6; Petes, 0.

Peterborough bucked 30 yards for a touch. Dinesen scoring. Young failed to convert. Bowmanville kicked to Young on the 20-yard line. Peterborough kicked on the first down to Bowmanville's 50-yard line.

Bowmanvilled bucked 30 yards to the Pete's 20-yard line; lost 10 yards for offside, and were forced to kick for a point.

Peterborough kicked for first down from the 25-yard line to Bowmanville's 40-yard line. Bowmanville bucked to Peterborough's 10-yard line when the whistle blew.

Bowmanville, 6; Peterborough, 5.

Bowmanville kicked off to Young on the 20-yard line. The Petes gained 20 yards, but lost the ball on a fumble.

Bowmanville bucked to the Petes' 5-yard line, but could not cross in three downs. The Petes advanced the ball to the 40-yard line, only to lose on a fumble. Again Bowmanville got within 8 yards, but could not cross.

Third quarter, Bowmanville, 6; Petes, 5.

Peterborough was forced to kick to Bowmanville on 60-yard line. Bowmanville bucked 20 yards but lost 10 for an offside and kicked to Dinesen for a point.

Peterborough began to press hard. Fraser bucked 15 yards, but failed to gain on the next three downs. Bowmanville was forced to kick to Pete's yard line. Braund was 35 yards around short end, followed by a 30-yard gain by young. Petes continued to buck for yards, and were 20 yards out when the whistle blew.

Bowmanville, 7; Petes, 5.

Line-up:

British Empire Sports Federation Will Hold Inaugural Games in 1930

LONDON, Oct. 1 (Canadian Press Cable).—M. M. Robinson, Manager of the Canadian Olympic track and field team, announced at Hamilton Ontario, on September 19 that a British Empire Sports Federation would be created and that the inaugural games would be staged at Hamilton in 1930. Mr. Robinson made his announcement following his return from Great Britain, where he had visited at the conclusion of the Amsterdam Olympiad. He stated that the proposed federation had been discussed by officials of amateur sport representing New Zealand, Australia and South Africa, and that all had shown enthusiasm for the proposal. Definite pledges to send team to the Hamilton Games in 1930 had been received from sports officials of every section of the Empire, even Malta agreeing to do her share. Mr. Robinson stated. He added that F. J. Wadmore, who managed the British Olympic team, had been appointed honorary secretary of the sports federation, and that the first election of officers would be held at Hamilton. The purpose of the federation was set forth as that of promoting Empire games, the presentation of a united front at all international sports meets and the uniform interpretation of existing rules.

CARDS LOSE LAST GAME

Permit Giants to Take 4-2 Victory in Final Game of Season.

TWO GAME MARGIN.

NEW YORK, N.Y., Oct. 1 (Associated Press).—The champion Cardinals permitted the Giants to win from them by a score of 4 to 2 in the final game of the season, the new title-holders thus finishing with a margin of two games over the New Yorkers.

Fred Frankhouse and Karl Hubbell each allowed only six blows, but two of the New York hits were home runs by Bob O'Farrell and Frank O'Doul. Each team started with its regular line-up, but several substitutes finally entered the game.

The curtain came down on the season at Redland Field yesterday and the Reds lost the final game six to one to Chicago. Cincinnati could not do a thing with Percy Jones. The contest meant nothing in the standing of the teams, as New York defeated St. Louis and held second place.

The Phillies and the Robins closed their session at Brooklyn yesterday, with Brooklyn winning a loosely played and frigid game by a score of 5-1. The victory enabled the Robins to finish above the .500 mark.

Wilson Clark went the route for Brooklyn, while Walker, young Phillie southpaw, was batted out of the box before he retired a man. Milligan had the Robins in check for the rest of the game.

BENGALS DEFEAT TRICOLOR 28-2

Hamilton Play Good Game Both Offensively and Defensively From the Start.

HAMILTON, Oct. 1 (Canadian Press).—With more than four thousand fans looking on, the Hamilton Tigers, Interprovincial champions of last year, steam-rollered their way to a 28 to 2 verdict over Queen's Intercollegiate squad here on Saturday afternoon in an exhibition tilt to convince the large gathering that they will again be the team to beat for "Big Four" honors. There was nothing lacking in the make-up of the Tiger front rank offensively or defensively, for from the start they pushed and held the students, who failed to gain yards until the final session, when substitutes were performing for the Bengals.

With "Pep" Leadley and "Timmy" Languay, two of last year's back division looking on, Coach Rodden left the back field duties to Welch, Gibb and Small, and the trio shaped up well at all stages. Gibb, who was forced into idleness last year through an auto accident, proved conclusively that the year's lay-off did not hurt his plunging and kicking ability any, as he carried a large part of the burden, especially on the third downs when one or three years were needed, and it was a common occurrence to see the big fellow plowing his way through the students' line for large gains. Welch, a star in Interscholastic circles last year, showed kicking ability, while Small was dangerous on the attack and mighty good defensively. The outstanding performer on the Tiger squad was Ray Boadway, an Argonaut player of last year. Boadway proved to have everything in his make-up that goes to make a star player. He hit the Queen's line with telling effect and his tackling was an improvement over what Tiger outsides showed last season. Boadway started at flying wing and his work of Saturday just about won that berth for him this season.

The students could do nothing against the husky Tiger line, though Munroe and Gilmore shaped up like two valuable additions to the Tricolor back division. Munroe proved slippery enough while Gilmore showed plenty of class as a punter. On the line Monohan, Gilmore and Gorman shaped up best.

Indianapolis Lead Little World Series

ROCHESTER, N.Y., October 1 (Canadian Press). — Indianapolis jumped into the lead in the Little World Series yesterday by defeating Rochester, 5 to 1, in the fourth contest.

Herman Bell, who started for the Red Wings, had a bad time in the fourth when Haney's single, a walk to Spencer, Warstler's bad bound over Toporcer and a double by Holke, put three runs across the plate for the Indians.

Swetonic, who won the opening game 3 to 2, had the Wings under control all the way.

The standing of the team is:

Indianapolis 2, Rochester 1, tied 1.

Little World Series score by innings:

Indianapolis .. 000320000—5 9 2
Rochester .... 000001000—1 5 1

"HARVESTER" AMONG YEAR'S WORTH-WHILE FILMS

Gene Stratton - Porter's Famous Novel Makes a Powerful Picture

A simple love tale, simply told, and all the more powerful because of its very simplicity, is "The Harvester," the screen adaptation of Gene Stratton-Porter's widely read novel, which opens an engagement to-day at the Regent Theatre.

Seldom, indeed, are theatregoers afforded an opportunity of seeing a motion picture which is so pleasingly unfolded and against backgrounds so filled with natural beauty. Particularly in respect to the scenic investiture of the production, "The Harvester" achieves the distinction of showing us something which is entirely new.

Since the story of the novel is laid at the famous Limberlost Cabin of the late Mrs. Porter, and since Director Leo Meehan is also her son-in-law, transported his entire company to the Limberlost estate in Indiana, and photographed the exterior scenes in that location. The result shows a freshness of scenery that is especially pleasing.

In the title role of the "Harvester," Orville Caldwell, a strapping young giant with a most engaging personality, delivers a performance that at once places him in the front rank of leading men. No less may be said of Natalie Kingston, a beautiful young girl whose elevation to prominence once the screen has been swift and sure.

Delightful characterizations are delivered by Jay Hunt and Will Walling, two veterans who have the easy unction and histrionic facility that are the product of long experience. These, with Lola Todd, Edward Hearn and Fanny Midgely, constitute a cast which is exceptional.

Photographically, "The Harvester" is one of the mots beautiful productions of the year, and is a tribute to the artistry of Allen Siegler, cameraman.

Altogether you will find this picture to be among those which are decidedly worth-while.

AT THE CAPITOL.

To-Night and Tuesday at 8 o'Clock, Barrie's, Limited, Will Present Their Fall Fashion Revue, Displaying the Newest Mode in Furs and Ladies' Wear for Fall and Winter —D. W. Griffith's "Drums of Love" the Feature Screen Attraction.

Of special interest to the ladies, will be Barrie's Limited fashion pageant, which takes place at the Capitol Theatre to-night and to-morrow evening. The new mode for fall beautiful living models. Our advice is to come early as the fashion revue is being held for one night only. D. W. Griffith's "Drums of Love" will be the feature screen attraction.

No picture of recent years has evoked more spontaneous praise from critics than has "Drums of Love," with Mary Philbin, Lionel Barrymore, Don Alvarado, Tully Marshall, and William Austin in the leading roles.

The picture is said to be so far advanced in the realms of sheer beauty and dramatic strength that no comparison can be made with any modern screen production. In this new masterpiece of his, Griffith is said to have achieved the very ultimate in perfection.

It is seldom that Griffith grows enthused. Twenty years of bitter struggles in bringing an infant industry to the plane of an art—more reaching and universal even than the graphic arts—has tempered whatever of self-laudation he might have possessed. "The Birth of a Nation," "Intolerance," and "Broken Blossoms" didn't burst on a sceptical public in a flurry of meaningless adjectives of praise. Griffith is not given to useless prophecies. When he says, as he did concerning "Drums of Love," 'boys, I think I've got it," the statement carries an implication of pride, that, coming from him, is the best recommendation the picture could get.

Many who have seen the production have been unable to express its great dramatic power and poetic treatment in terms of mere words. For the first time, life is vividly portrayed on the screen in all its ramifications. All the joys and the sorrows, the loves and sly amours of mankind are paraded through the medium of a new photography and masterfully woven into a sublime story.

CROWN LIFE PASSES $100,000,000 MARK

Comparatively Young Company Has Weathered Trying Times.

Announcement by the Crown Life Insurance Company that it has passed the $100,000,000 mark in insurance in force brings this comparatively young company, which has had an unusually rapid growth, definitely into the class of the large insurance companies of Canada.

Established in 1900, with Sir Charles Tupper as its first president, the Crown Life weathered the difficult formative years, and despite the trying times which accompanied the Great War and the 'flue epidemic, by 1918 it had attained a volume of insurance in force of $17,400,000. Since then it has advanced rapidly, maintaining the record established immediately after the war of doubling in size every four years.

The company recently announced the purchase of additional frontage adjacent to its home office building at Yonge and Colborne street, Toronto, where it proposes to erect a modern office building to provide adequately for the expanding needs of its home office staff.

The company has had a succession of presidents well known in the business life of Canada. The late G. T. Somers, President of the Sterling Bank of Canada and of the Canada Grain Company, became president in 1907. The late John G. Kent, internationally known as managing-director of the Canadian National Exhibition, succeeded Mr. Somers, and was followed on his death by H. Victor Cawthra, whose death occurred a few weeks ago. C. W. Somers, eldest son of the late G. T. Somers, is vice-president, and H. R. Stephenson has been general manager for the past nine years.

More time to play

You can always find people to tell you that the country is going to the dogs because we're doing so much playing.

"When did your grandmother find any time to play? There was a woman for you!"

No doubt.

Just the same, we'd like to have given her a vacuum cleaner, a washing machine, electric lights, running hot water, a telephone, baker's bread, delicious canned foods, an automobile and a set of golf clubs.

Can you picture grandfather's face? . . . "Gone to the country club. Look in the ice-box."

Through advertising, science is giving us more and more time to play. Advertising is knocking minutes off every phase of household work from cooking to shopping, to give us leisure hours.

. . . and we're just using them as grandmother would have if she'd had the chance.

Read the advertising here in your paper. It will bring you more time to play.

Following a fruitless five years' search for his motherless baby boy, given in mistake to another parent by a nurse at the Evangelical Deaconess hospital, Detroit, William C. Greatrex, formerly a resident of Ontario, is suing the hospital for $200,000 in the Detroit courts. The picture shows: (1) Mrs. William C. Greatrex of Toronto, mother of the plaintiff. (2) William C. Greatrex, who declares that he will devote the remainder of his life to searching for his missing son. (3 and 4) Mrs. and Mr. H. Kaale, also of Toronto. Mrs. Kaale is Greatrex's sister.

His suit was disallowed.

PARLIAMENT HOUSE REQUIRES RENEWAL

Stonework Has to Be Refaced Over Considerable Area.

LONDON, Oct. 1 (By the Canadian Press).—The Houses of Parliament, architecturally, may be a "poem in stone," as they were so described by the Emperor of Russia soon after their erection. But it hardly speaks well for the outward material of which they are composed that it should require a wholesale renewal after the lapse of less than 80 years.

The stonework is now being refaced over considerable portions. The office of Works—the department having charge of national buildings—is making arrangements for the disposal of the old stonework to such members of Parliament as may care to use it for making rock gardens on their private property, at ten shillings a ton. Gargoyles and other carved stonework will also be available in moderate quantities. Out of session, therefore, an M.P. will be able to smoke a contemplative pipe, the while he gazes upon what used to help make up the Mother of Parliaments.

The present Houses of Parliament were designed by Sir Charles Barry, after the fire of 1834 which destroyed the old Houses. Although much of the libraries both of the Lords and of the Commons were saved, many priceless documents perished in that fire, including the original warrant for the execution of Charles the First. Barry's great design in Gothic was accepted only after the most expert examination, but time has shown that while magnesium limestone may stand up well to the weather in its native countryside it is no match for the acids which are in the atmosphere of a great city. All the same it seems to have been singularly bad advice which permitted an expenditure of three millions sterling on a building that cannot keep its outer face secure for something under a century.

FOWL SUPPER AT HAVELOCK

Lady McGill, L.O.B.A., Holds Well Attended Social Function.

ADDRESSES FOLLOW.

HAVELOCK, Oct. 1.—The L.O.L. hall was filled to capacity on Thursday evening, when the Lady McGill Lodge, L.O.B.A., No. 471, held the first fowl supper of the season and favorable comments were passed as to the capable manner in which the affairs of the evening were carried out.

The program of the entertainment was very attractive, the chair being occupied by Rev. John Lennox, who spoke briefly before announcing the initial number, expressing his pleasure to be back in Havelock.

Joseph Abercrombie, of Campbellford, appeared three times as soloist, and his numbers were very enthusiastically encored.

The program was as follows:

Piano solo, Miss Cordie McColl; reading, Miss Dayman; vocal solo, J. Abercrombie; piano solo, Miss Roxie Rutherford; reading, J. Faulkner; address, Rev. Hugh Brown.

Mr. Brown expressed pleasure to be present and said that Mr. Lennox was not the only one who was glad to get back to Havelock. He had always been made welcome by the Orangemen while he lived here, and Havelock had always been a green spot in his memory. He recalled that it was in Knox Church that he had been set apart for the ministry, and he always had good friends, not only among the Presbyterians, but in all denominations.

In speaking to the members of the Order, he said that they should remember that a chain is no stronger than its weakest link, and that every member should determine to be a strong link. "If you are true to your obligation, you cannot be anything else but a Christian," he said. "If not a faithful reader of the Word, if not faithful in attendance at God's house you are not keeping your obligations. If you are true, rest assured that there will not be any empty pews in the Havelock churches."

Vocal solo, J. Abercrombie; address, John Adams, of Campbellford.

Mr. Adams said it was always an extreme pleasure to assist to advance the glorious Orange organization. He had been initiated and received all his degrees in the Havelock Lodge. He was proud to meet the L.O.B.A. and complimented the ladies on the splendid banquet.

Reading, Miss Dayman.

Rev. J. Lennox gave a short address at this point, speaking on the privilege of the Open Bible, which is the revelation from God.

He advised that the old hymn, "Cling to The Bible," should be remembered, as it was the only book that could tell one how to be happy.

Solo, Rev. J. Lennox;; solo, J. Abercrombie.

CYCLE LOOPS THROUGH HOOPS FEATURES MOTOR CIRCUS

At a recent motorcycle show in London, a rider demonstrated his skill by driving his machine through a double paper hoop while going at a high speed, says Popular Mechanics Magazine. The stunt required a steady hand at the take-off, since the obstruction was of considerable length, and there was danger of turning the front wheel so as to make landing hazardous.

Build a 40-Year EDGWOOD Roof and Forget It!

IN Grandpop's time, folks made every penny count. They realized that durability was the first essential in home construction. As a result, there are thousands of old homes that were roofed a half century ago with Red Cedar Shingles that are giving service today.

Nature created this wonderful roofing material in her centuries-old Cedar trees, and endowed it with a time-resisting preservative against decay. When you put an EDGWOOD Red Cedar roof on your home you can forget it! You have a roof that will be free from trouble for forty years and more.

Every sturdy Edgwood Shingle is sawn edgegrain to prevent cupping, curling and warping. Your architect, contractor, or lumber-dealer will explain how this edgegrain feature permits a greater exposure for EDGWOOD Shingles — 5" for 16" EDGWOODS — 5½" for 18" EDGWOODS. As a result, EDGWOOD Shingles cost you no more than the ordinary flat-grain Shingles. We believe EDGWOODS will last longer (40 years and more), than any other roofing material, not excluding tile or slate in those territories addicted to hail-storms.

"EDGWOOD HOMES" is an interesting and informative illustrated booklet. We'll gladly send it free on receipt of name and address.

Trading In Toronto Light This Morning

TORONTO, Oct. 1 (Canadian Press).—Trading was light on the Toronto Stock Exchange to-day, and prices on the whole held firm, with only a few small changes. Brazilian, with a small turnover, was leading the listed section at noon, and was up almost a point at 59⅝. Cockshutt was unchanged at 28½, and Massey Harris was down a fraction at 44¾. Dominion Stores returned to the board with a good turnover, and at noon was selling at 140.

In the unlisted section, the oils were the only active issues, with Imperial and Service Stations attracting most attention. The former was up 1¼ at 79½, and the latter ¾ at 44½. British American was unchanged at 41. Hiram Walker's slumped down to a few sales at 61½, up a half from Saturday's close.

Abana Leads Market; Other Shares Weaker

TORONTO, Oct. 1 (Canadian Press).—Abana occupied the spotlight on the Standard Stock and Mining Exchange to-day, with a net gain at noon of 22 at 4.25 and a turnover of more than 79,500 shares. The rest of the list was quiet and the price showed a slight tendency to lower levels. Amulet, on active trading, dropped nine to 3.16, Sharritt Gordon declined twenty to 6.50, and Mond Nickel 25 to 31.25. Hudson Bay was stronger than for some days and closed with a gain of thirty at 19.35 after touching 19.60. Malartic scored a good turnover, but dropped five to 1.60, while Newbec, also quite active, was up three at 58½.

MINING BRIEFS

A Special Service to The Examiner

Jackson Manion Develop Excellent Ore in Three Levels.

H. E. Harcourt, general manager of Jackson Manion Mines, reports that better than $20 per ton over a minimum width of 8 feet is being opened up in the drift and that some assays over 10-foot widths have been remarkable. Over 100 feet of drifting has been done on the 125 and 210-foot levels and last on the 250-foot horizon and it is the purpose of the management to carry workings north in intercept ore indicated by diamond drills to be high grade. There is 200 feet to go. Developments to date indicate that the Jackson and Rowell veins are distinct ore bodies. Shaft-sinking to 500 feet is being speeded and it is anticipated that by February next stations will be cut at 275 and 500 feet when lateral work will be pushed to open up the ore at these two new horisons. The ore faces on all three upper levels look well, showing free gold.

McKinley Split May Become Effective.

Holders of McKinley-Darragh old stock will be interested in knowing that the transfer for shares in McKinley Mines Securities, on the basis of four old for one new, may still be effected.

The Northern Miner learns that the papers for filing application to have the new stock listed have been prepared and will shortly be submitted to the directors of the Standard Stock and Mining Exchange. When the new stock comes on the board the old will be removed.

There is a possibility that McKinley Mines Securities might declare a dividend within the year. The treasury position would permit this.

Central Manitoba Makes Steady Progress.

A. D. Miles, director of Central Manitoba Mines, reports that development work is being carried on steadily. A winze has been sunk from the 160-foot level on the Teno 6, having reached a depth of the faces 47 feet below the level. The width of the faces has averaged 42 inches, showing an average of $12 to the ton.

Driving both east and west on the 520-foot level of the main workings are progressing satisfactorily, and driving west on the 375-foot level will probably be started shortly, to connect with the Growler shaft section. The raise, 775 feet west of the shaft, from the 375-foot level, has reached 128 feet, showing an average width of 42 inches, averaging $11.25 to the ton.

On the 250-foot level, east stope, 1,530 tons of ore were broken during the month of August, with values averaging $11.76 per ton. On the 250-foot level, west stope, 300 tons of ore were broken, averaging $15 per ton. On the 125-foot level, west stope, No. 2, 780 tons of ore were broken, averaging $10 to the ton.

It is reported that the San Antonio have bought two new compressors and that eastern engineers are now visiting the property in the interests of the Coniagas and N. A. Timmins. In a report on the property, Mr. John Reid yesterday stated that this company "is still a prospect, but nevertheless geological conditions have improved greatly."

Rumors of Wright Hargreaves passing the dividend entirely at the next quarter is heard on the street. Recent softness in the shares has given rise to this belief. Officials of the company are non-committal.

A special shareholders' meeting of the Ostrom Gold Mines, Limited, was held at the Carls-Rite to discuss reorganization plans. A new 5,000,000 share company will be formed as soon as money to provide for re-organization expenses will be obtained. Par value of the share is set at $1.00. The situation is that while the old company has almost 2,500,000 shares unissued, they cannot dispose of any at a profit on account of the stock selling for under 10 cents in the unlisted market. Re-organization was for the purpose of overcoming this difficulty. Methods of raising from $2,000 to $3,000 for organization expenses were discussed and it was decided that, while the new company was not yet organized, its securities would be sold to existing shareholders at a favorable schedule, payment to be made immediately and delivery to take place upon organization.

During the discussion news as to progress was given out. Before the old company stopped work at the property in Catherine Township, crosscutting on the 500-foot level was under way and the workings were reaching an interesting stage. One new vein was encountered in this lateral work showing good values over 26 feet. When operations were suspended a new copper vein was discovered on surface by the caretaker. While the extent of this showing is unknown as yet, assays yielded 12.6 per cent. copper. When the new company commences operations, diamond drilling will be carried out from the 500-foot level and lateral work will be continued on towards the main vein system. The new copper showing will also be prospected. Mr. G. E. Sylvester presided at the meeting.

The Bobjo Mining Company, recently formed to take over and operate the new discovery at Clearwater Lake, will begin operations immediately. Buildings are to be erected and a plant taken in over the ice this winter. Two 60 h.p. boilers and mining machinery to sink to 1,000 feet will go in as early as possible.

Ankerite is reported to be making ady progress and unofficial ad- ss are to the effect that the company can step up millheads at any time. Development is said to be yielding results as regards adding to the ore supply.

Attention of traders is swinging to Pioneer. This company is now at an extremely interesting stage of its campaign in developing the Jubilee Break. Lateral work is under way on three levels and already it is reported that high-grade ore over greater widths than indicated on surface has been encountered. The annual meeting will be held on Tuesday and interesting developments are going to occur.

Obituary

JOHN GROSE.

An extended illness terminated fatally this morning when John Grose, of 231 Princess Street, passed away at his home. Forty years' residence in the city, during which he became well known as a contractor, painter and decorator had gained for him a wide circle of acquaintances, while as a private citizen he had gained the highest esteem of many close friends. He attended St. James' Church.

Surviving, besides his bereaved mother, who resides at 148 Rubidge Street, and his widow, are three daughters and seven sons, namely: Mrs. D. Davis, Bolivar Street; Marian and Marguerite at home, Norman of Toronto, Harold, Earl, Gerald, Lloyd, Maxwell and Jackie, also at home.

The funeral will take place at 2.30 p.m. on Wednesday, October 3, from 231 Princess Street, to Little Lake Cemetery for interment, the Rev. J. H. Dudgeon conducting service at the house at 2 p.m.

RICHARD P. WATT

Many old friends in Peterborough were shocked to learn this morning of the rather sudden death of Richard P. Watt, Town Clerk of Renfrew, Ontario, and formerly a resident of this city, where he spent the greater part of his life in school and in business, and had made many friends.

The deceased formerly held the position of County Clerk for the County of Peterborough, following which he had charge of the office of the Auburn Woollen Mills.

He was greatly interested in sports and was a player of considerably ability on local hockey teams.

Hs was an enthusiastic militia man and was a member of the Canadian Expeditionary force. He came up from the ranks to Major, and was always active in organization work of the old 57th Battalion.

He was a member of Echo Camp and of a number of social and fraternal organization in Peterborough.

His wife, who was formerly Miss May Aikens, and one daughter, survive, as well as his father, John Watt, of Ottawa; a brother, John Watt, Jr., in Rouyn, and a sister, Mrs. Lang, of Montreal. Mrs. Watts is a sister of Bruce Aikens of Peterborough.

The funeral will take place from Comstock's Funeral Farlors on Wednesday afternoon.

The late Mr. Watt was a comparatively young man and had many years of usefulness ahead of him. His friends here regret exceedingly to learn of his early and unexpected demise, following an operation.

MRS. WHITTEN YOUNG

There passed to her rest in Schumacher, Ontario, on Wednesday last, Mrs. Whitten Young after a lingering illness. The remains were brought to this city on Friday and burial took place yesterday in Apsley Cemetery. The funeral service was held in the United Church, with Samuel Taylor of Haileybury conducting the service. Mr. Hartshorn of Peterborough sang "There Will Be No Trouble Over Yonder," in a fine clear voice, and Mrs. William Lowe of Apsley presided at the organ.

There are left to mourn her loss a sorrowing husband, there sisters, one brother, and her father and mother.

The pall-bearers were Lloyd Young, John Wrickles, Vernal Windsor, Leonard Matthews and Walter Terrant. There were many beautiful floral tributes, including wreaths from Timmins Lodge, 459, I.O.O.F., and Golden Encampment, 107, South Porcupine.

SCHOOL SURVEY URGED TO SAVE CHILDREN'S EYES

Organizer For Institute for the Blind Advocates This Step as a Necessity.

ADDRESSES ROTARY.

Tells What Is Being Done in Canada To Educate the Blind.

A survey of Peterborough's schools for the purpose of locating the children of defective vision was strongly urged by G. H. Gustar, of Toronto, organizer of the Canadian National Institute for the Blind, in addressing the Rotary Club at its luncheon today.

Pointing out that one of the most important features of the work of the Institute was the prevention of blindness, Mr. Gustar impressively pleaded for a survey as a very necessary step in the campaign to save the sight of children whose visions subnormal.

His address dealt first, with the history of the Institute for the Blind and with the activities carried on by the organization. Prior to the war not very much along this line had been attempted in Canada, but so many Canadian soldiers had been blinded that the necessity for the work became evident. In this connection the speaker paid a tribute to Captain Baker, M.C., Croix de Guerre, a graduate of Queen's University, who lost his sight as the result of a sniper's bullet and after being trained at St. Dunstan's in England, came back to Canada and started a movement to make blinded Canadians self-supporting and self-respecting citizens. A survey of the country disclosing the fact that at that time there were over 5,000 blind Canadians, was followed by the opening of broom shops, whitewear factories, libraries for the blind, and the establishment of a system of home teaching. Later a placement branch was formed for the purpose of locating blinded persons in industrial position, where lack of sight was not a handicap to them. The sale of basketwork made by blinded Canadians had grown to $50,000 a year, Mr. Gustar declared.

A most important feature of the Institute's work was the prevention of blindness. They were satisfied that they could prevent 50 per cent of the blindness in Canada with proper co-operation. And in this connection the speaker referred to the fact that every school contained children of defective vision, unable to see the blackboard clearly or even to read their text books properly. As a result, these children were backward in school, their health was bad, their nerves failed, and eventually some of them became blind. To meet this complete survey of the schools, in order that the children of poor vision might be found and arrangements made to have these children examined by experts and provided with proper glasses. If it were found that the parents of some children were unable to pay the cost of inspection and glasses, the Canadian National Institute would gladly pay the bill and a similar promise was made in the case of adults suffering from defective vision who were too poor to meet the cost of treatment.

In conclusion, Mr. Gustar made an eloquent plea for more care of the eyes, pointing out carelessness in this regard often had a most serious result, not only in the case of industrial works, but among women whose eyes were injured by their work at home.

The thanks of the Rotary Club were extended the speaker on motion of Rotarian R. F. Downey, who endorsed his statements in regard to defective vision in the school, and President W. R. Morris promised the co-operation of the Rotary Club in seeking to have a survey made here.

Visitors at to-day's luncheon were John Kingan, of Trinidad, Col., a borther of Rotarian R. G. Kingan, and Evangelist Tor Urquhart, the Salvation Army musician, who treated Rotarians to something new in music by playing selections on a musical saw, with a hammer and then with a bow, and by using a toy balloon as a musical instrument with unusual effect. His numbers were greatly enjoyed.

"Y" PLANS CAMPAIGN.

Membership Drive Will Get Under Way Next Thursday.

The Y.M.C.A. is out to get more members and the organization meeting is called for Thursday night in the Y.M.C.A., when supper will be served by the Ladies' Auxiliary. The campaign will open on October 4th and will continue for one week, closing on October 9th. Two sides have been drawn up, with C. S. Cummer head of one and J. H. Vernor head of the other, John R. Marshall is the chairman of the membership committee. Each side has five teams, with each team having a captain. The captains are A. E. Dryland, E. E. Jones, H. Tranter, J. Jennings, H. Vickers, M. A. Fitzgerald, W. J. Hamilton, W. F. Stewart, H. McLeod and H. Macdonald.

Fifteen Potatoes Grown Into One

A whole potato crop all in one was exhibted to The Examiner to-day from the garden of Bruce Douglas, Warsaw. On the one spud was fourteen others, six of them being of a fair size, while the other eight were small. There were also numerous other small ones just starting to grow.

ARE APT PUPILS MASTER STATES

adopted for their instruction similarly had to be out of the ordinary. They are instructed in a form for the youngest boys, conducted by Mrs. J. R. Simpson, and in class are given geography magazines to study. They look at the pictures and copy some of the script. These magazines as well as all books seem to fascinate them. Already they can write their names and know the alphabet.

Not to Learn to Fight.

The headmaster stated that it had been specially requested that these children should not be taught to fight. This stipulation was made in view of the fact that the Eskimo is naturally peaceful.

When these northe. waifs were handed over to Mr Mackenzie something closely resembling a helpless feeling overcame him. What would he do if they were sick? How were they to intimate their troubles? To overcome this a hasty list of a few Eskimo idioms was pressed into the headmaster's hand by Rev. F. H. Gibbs. Among other things was the salient question, "Have you a pain?" which in Eskimo was run off in the following manner, "Ar-ne-uk-peet."

Like Hot Baths.

One of the things neither Sam nor Ben had experienced before was a hot bath. It was the first thing they were given when they arrived and they revelled in it. Mrs. Perry, the matron, declared that after the bath and while she was drying one the other slipped back into the bath and splashed.

Thomas Wood, a master, said the boys liked white man's food, are interested in cattle, but are terrified of horses. Another master told The Examiner that Ben and Sam spent a great deal of their time in class drawing pictures of bows and arrows. They seemed to prefer this form of weapon to the spear. In spite of the fact that they do not understand English, they always seem to know what is being said to them. When appearing to have their picture taken by a photographer, they acted upon the directions given them as though it were given in their own tongue. The language they speak between themselves is soft and low and apparently they are always cracking jokes, for the interchange of a few remarks between them never fails to provoke a burst of merriment.

Ben wore his Eskimo costume made of caribou skin when posing for his picture. Sam remained in the recently acquired habit of white man. Their eyes flashed good humoredly as they regarded the camera and they accepted the operation as if they had been used to such things all their lives.

TEST WORKERS MOURN FELLOW

Attend Brief Service Before Body of George Osborne is Taken Home.

RESUSCITATION FAILS.

A brief but impressive service, conducted by the Rev. R. C. Blagrave, D.D., of St. John's Church, at Comstock's Funeral Home on Sunday afternoon, marked the departure for Prince Rupert, B.C., of the remains of the late George Osborne, who, as a member of the Canadian General Electric students' course, met a tragic death at the local plant on Saturday. A large number of fellow-employees attended.

Osborne, a young man of about twenty-three years, had come to Peterborough only a month or so ago. Despite a five-hour attempt at resuscitation by fellow-employees and medical men, he failed to survive a severe electrical shock received while testing in the brass department about 10.30 in the morning.

Following the service, the remains were placed on the 3.30 C.P.R. train. They will be accompanied to Prince Rupert by W. M. Cruthers, of the C.G.E.

JUNIOR RALLY GREAT SUCCESS

Number of Children Join Y. W. C. A. Classes This Year.

WORK EXPLAINED.

Junior members of the Y.W.C.A. thoroughly enjoyed their first party of the fall season last Saturday afternoon.

The program opened at 2 o'clock with over 200 children all glad to be back to "Y" again and many new members who are joining for the first time. The first hour was spent in games in the gymnasium, in which all joined. Members of the Intermediate gymnasium class then presented one of their little folk dances which was much enjoyed. Girls taking part in this Dutch Dance in pretty blue and yellow costumes were P. Dawson, M. Harvey, J. McLean, H. Kingsbury, A. Johnson, E. Long, E. Lemon, M. Pitchford, P. Lawrence, J. Matchett, R. Kingan, K. Lawrence, D. Boyle and L. Comstock.

Mrs. Foster, National Y.W.C.A. Field Secretary, who delighted the senior members and friends at the Rally Friday evening spoke to the children, telling them about how the Y.W.C.A. reaches around the world and how it aims to be a friend to everyone and to help every girl — strong, learn all that is best and to love God.

Mrs. Foster told the girls how people coming to Canada from other countries are met by "Y" workers and how glad they are to see the blue triangle, and some of the ways the Y.W.C.A. is able to help them and some of the ways they are able to help us. Every child felt very proud to belong to the "Y" and thanked Mrs. Foster for her talk by hearty applause.

Miss Margaret Dickson sang several songs for the children and their splendid attention and enthusiastic applause told of their enjoyment.

A swimming exhibition in the swimming pool was a treat for spectators and swimmers. The sports consisted of stunts, diving and races, by the following pupils, M. Kingsbury, M. Harvey, G. Johnson, L. Charlton, E. Lemon, Bertha Belleghem, a wee tot who swam the length twice, T. Buller, E. Buller, B. Rogers, M. Jackson.

Miss Littlefield and Miss Brownscombe told the girls about the gym classes, clubs, story hours, cooking and sewing classes, parties and good times planned for them and each child was given a calendar to take home telling about all "Y" activities.

MARKET REVIEW

Outside of a few instances the liquidation was general across the board in to-day' trading on the Standard Stock and Mining Exchange. Abana provided one of the two strong spots, moving up 5 points in heavy trading to close at $3.85-7. St. Anthony old Mines, whose property is situated in the Metagama district, at 62-63 was up 14 points.

Noranda still continued to slide, and at $47.15-.25 was down $1.35) The Street evidently is discounting the fact that there will be little news of importance from Noranda for some time. This short selling combined with forced liquidation undoubtedly will have a depressing effect on the price of Noranda.

Amulet at $3.20-25 was 14 points easier. A despatch from Rouyn states that Mr. MacGregor will take over the duties of Mr. Armstrong as geologist, and that he will initiate an active exploratory campaign in which diamond drilling is to play a major part. The operating end will remain under the supervision of Mr. Anderson. Resumption of shaft sinking operations will take place tomorrow at the 250 foot level.

Arno at 28 to 29 was 3½ points stronger, while Clericy at 28.29 was also a firm trader. Hollinger at $8.55 bid, Howey at $1.02-1.03, Newbec at 53¼-53½, Sherritt Gordon at $6.40-45, Sudbury Basin at $6.35-45 were all traded in in small volume showing no change. Hudson Bay Mining and Smelting at $19.00 was off 25 points, Kirkland Lake at $1.45.6 was off 5. Many seems to be unable to hold at the $2.00 mark and again sank down into the nineties.

Malartic at $1.63-4 suffered an unexpected reverse during the day, easing off 7 points. On a rumour that directors of Wright-Hargreaves were considering the possibility of declaring no dividend for the next quarter, this issue reacted sharply to $2.75, firming at the close to $2.80-5.

Rains In Southern Fields Cause Decline In Wheat

CHICAGO, Oct. 1 (Canadian Press)—Beneficial rains, both in Australia and Argentina, gave the wheat market here an early trend downward to-day. Meanwhile corn values developed firmness, talk being current that the September deliveries of corn had largely passed into industrial channels. Opening ¼ to ⅜ off, wheat later held near to the initial figure. Corn started unchanged to ⅜ down, but subsequently scored an all-around advance. Oats were easy.

Opening prices were: Wheat, December 117⅛, March 121⅜. Corn December 73⅜, March 80⅜. Oats, December 42⅝, March 43⅞.

FALSE ALARM ON SATURDAY

Fire Brigade Turns Out Late at Night When Box Is Pulled.

CHIMNEY ON FIRE.

The Chief's car, Number 1 motor and a ladder truck turned out from the local fire department at 10.32 on Saturday night in response to an alarm from Box 32. It proved a false alarm.

The same units were called to 228 Rubidge Street at 8.21 this morning, the phone call having informed the department that a house was on fire. The trouble was located in a chimney and easily eliminated.

KNOX CHURCH IS RE-OPENED

One question of the Catechism is: 'What do the Scriptures principally teach?' and the answer is, What man is to believe concerning God—the doctrinal—and what duty God requires of man—the practical.

"In the Old Testament times the people were called upon to give a dead sacrifice and hence they brought their sheep and their goats but we to-day on account of the death of Christ on Calvary are not called upon to give a dead sacrifice but a living one. God wants us as a living sacrifice. Girls and boys, He wants you; young men and young women, He wants you; men and women, no matter what your station in life is, He wants you. In the war we got to know what sacrifice meant, for we were willing to sacrifice ourselves for our country. How much more then should we be willing to make a sacrifice for God, Who made us, and from Whose very hand we draw our breath?"

In conclusion, the speaker asked his hearers on this re-dedicatory day in the life of Knox United Church to re-dedicate themselves anew to the services of God and His vineyard.

Miss Olive Cullen sang in a beautiful voice, "I Heard the Voice of Jesus Say," and the choir, with a quartette composed of Mrs. Rogers, Miss Crocker, S. Willis and H. Hughes, rendered "I will Sing of the Mercies," by Daruton. R. J. Devey, the choirmaster, presided at the organ.

COUNCIL MUST COMPLETE DISPOSAL PLANT

NOVA SCOTIA GOV RNMENT IS NEARLY BEATEN

CONSERVATIVES, LED BY RHODES, WIN 23 OF 43 SEATS IN HOUSE; FOUR MINISTERS ARE DEFEATED

Liberals Elect 20 Members, Including Five Former Cabinet Members.

LABOR RUNS POORLY.

Charges of Breach of Faith Levelled Against Government—No By-elections Necessary.

HALIFAX, N.S., Oct. 2 (Canadian Press).—Hon. W. N. Rhodes, tenth Premier of Nova Scotia, is the first Conservative leader to be invested with the authority of the Premiership for a second term. The Conservative Government back in 1925 succeeded a Liberal regime of 43 years, and yesterday it received re-endorsement at the polls, but the majority of 37 enjoyed by the party in the last Legislature was cut to three as the Liberal Opposition registered a net gain of seventeen seats. At the time of dissolution thirty-seven Conservatives and three Liberals sat in the House, three Conservative seats being vacant. The new assembly will be made up of twenty-three Conservatives and twenty Liberals.

Premier Rhodes was returned in Hants along with Speaker the Hon. Albert Parsons, but one Minister of the Executive Council and three Ministers without portfolio were defeated. Hon. William Chisholm, leader of the Liberal Opposition, was returned in Antigonish. Four members of the Government were included in the administration's loss of 17 seats. Hon. J. A. Walker, Minister of Natural Resources, was defeated in Halifax. Captain the Hon. J. F. Cahan, assistant Minister of Highways, was beaten in Yarmouth, Dr. W. N. Rehfuss, Minister without portfolio, lost in Lunenburg, and Dr. B. A. Leblanc suffered defeat in Richmond.

The Liberals, on the other hand, elected five former members of the Armstrong Government, which went down to overwhelming defeat in the general election of 1925. Mon. A. S. MacMillan, a former Minister of Highways was elected in Digby. Hon. D. A. Cameron, a former provincial secretary, was elected in Victoria. J. J. Kinley and J. Willie Comeau, two former members of the Armstrong Government without portfolio, were elected respectively in Lunenburg and Digby, and Hon. William Chisholm was elected in Antigonish.

The Government had appealed to the electorate, two years before the completion of its term of office, as a result of the abolition of the Legislative Council and the Opposition had charged throughout the campaign, leading up to the election, that the Government had broken its pledges of non-partizanship, economy, and reform. As a result of legislation passed by the Government, it will not be necessary for the Ministers to return to their constituencies for re-election.

The Labor party, most potent factor in the ranks opposed to the Armstrong Government from 1920 to 1925, failed to threaten either party's candidates in the one constituency where the third party entered candidates, James B. McLachlan, and Norman Wave, former M.P.P., each trailed their Conservative opponents, Hon. Col. G. S. Harrington and J. Macdonald, by about three thousand votes, in Cape Breton, and were far behind the Liberal candidates as well.

The Legislature dissolved on September 5 of this year was the fifteenth under which the affairs of Nova Scotia have been controlled since Confederation, and the second in which a Conservative majority has been placed in power. On June 25, 1925, when Hon. E. N. Rhodes was place at the head of affairs in the province with a record-breaking plurality of thirty-seven seats at his command, the only previous Conservative administrations had been those of Hon. S. H. Holmes, and Hon. J. S. D. Thompson, afterward Sir John S. D. Thompson, Premier of Canada, who headed the 1878-82 Legislature, succeeding Hon. Mr. Holmes, shortly before the election of 1882, in which the Liberals under Hon. W. T. Pipes, were victorious.

On July 16, 1925, the Rhodes cabinet was sworn in, with the premier taking the portfolio of Provincial Secretary. Hon. John C. Douglas, previously a member of the Federal House, appointed as Attorney General, was the one member holding a portfolio besides the Premier, who had previous parliamentary experience. Col. Gordon S. Harrington became Minister of Public Works and Mines; Percy C. Black, Minister of Highways, and John A. Walker was given charge of the new addition to the group of cabinet offices.

One cabinet change has occurred during the Rhodes regime. In 1926 Hon. [illegible] Douglas resigned as Attorney [illegible] to contest Antigonish.

ZEPPELIN POISED FOR HISTORIC TRIP OVER SEA TO U. S.

FREIDRICHSHAFEN, Germany, Oct. 2.—The giant dirigible, Graf Zeppelin, nearly twice as big as the Los Angeles, was poised here yesterday on the eve of her flight to America.

Exactly when the start will be made is undecided, but it is believed not more than forty-eight hours distant. Final revisions are being made for the Graf Zeppelin's passenger list, which will include Commander Rosendahl of the United States Navy.

Dr. Hugo Eckener, head of the Zeppelin company, believes the run to Lakehurst, N.J., will be made in ninety-six hours. While weather conditions may delay the start, these are not nearly so much a factor in dirigible flight as in the case of airplanes.

APPEAL CALLED FOR OCTOBER 15

Preston and Wilson Vs. Currie Will Be Heard in Toronto.

DEFENDANTS DELAYED.

TORONTO, Oct. 2.— The appeal of W. T. R. Preston and Fred Wilson, Port Hope, from the judgment against them in the action for libel brought by Sir Arthur Currie will be heard at Osgoode Hall on Monday Oct. 15.

Grayson Smith, K.C., for the appellants asked at Osgoode Hall yesterday that the appeal be not set down for hearing for four weeks. The Court finally agreed on the fortnight.

Application was made on the ground that R. R. Hall, K.C., Peterborough, who had been retained by defendants, would require that length of time to prepare the case for appeal in view of the 2,095 pages of evidence, the sixty-five exhibits and the length of the Judge's charge. Mr. Smith said that Mr. Hall had been retained on September 18.

Justice Middleton: "Why does not the client explain the delay in retaining counsel?"

Mr. Smith: "I have no explanation."

Justice Riddell: "We will have Sir Arthur Currie complaining of the denial of his just rights under Magna Charta, these being that we shall not delay justice."

LABOR PASSES PEACE MOTION

Calls On Government To Enter Effective Disarmament Agreement.

CONDEMNS POLICY.

BIRMINGHAM, Oct. 2 (Canadian Press).—Ramsay McDonald, former Labor Premier, presented a comprehensive resolution on world peace and disarmament which was adopted by the Congress of the Labor Party here to-day. The resolution demanded that the government sign a general pact of arbitration, that the Anglo-French, naval agreement be abandoned, that an effective disarmament treaty be signed, and that all foreign troops be unconditionally withdrawn from the Rhineland. Mr. McDonald called his proposal "a full blooded, unqualified condemnation of the government's foreign policy."

Sir Oswald Moseley seconded the resolution, saying the American note on the Anglo-French accord was the greatest rebuke any country had ever addressed to another.

Lindbergh Loses His Temper At Last; Gets Angry During Hero-Worshipping Riot

HAZELTON, Pa., Oct. 2.—(United Press).—Hazelton is recovering from a wave of hero-worship over the week-end, in which Col. Charles A. Lindbergh was its idol.

However, the hero was not appreciative of the mob's adoration, and turned a harried, bristling front to the tribute.

Forced down Saturday en route from the middle west to New York, by fog, Lindy was greeted by crowds at the airport near here.

In boarding a waiting automobile, a man in the crowd rushed forward and grasped the "lone eagle" by the shoulder. Lindbergh whirled about, enraged.

Lindy "Saw Red"

"Keep your hands to yourself," he shouted. The man cowered back, expecting a blow to follow the outburst. Later a girl cheerily hailed him, and Lindy flashed a smile in response to this welcome.

A crowd gathered at his hotel, and the liberty band gave the scene the gala atmosphere of a welcome to the town hero or a successful political candidate. The mob attempted to storm the hotel, mostly women, using every possible ruse to gain admittance to his suite.

CHILDREN DRIVE STOLEN CAR IN TRAFFIC AT 60 MILE RATE

Change Drivers While Maintaining High Speed Ahead of Police.

BULLETS CAUSE HALT.

Woodstock Police Have Exciting Chase After Boy Who Has Theft Record.

INGERSOLL, Ont., Oct. 2 (Special to The Examiner).—A story of a wild ride, with an eleven-year-old girl at the wheel of a stolen car, tearing through Woodstock's main streets last night at forty miles an hour, of the chase by police of that city at the instance of the owner of the stolen car in Ingersoll, and of the subsequent changing over of the wheel to the car of her thirteen-year-old brother, while the car was doing almost sixty miles per hour, was made public here to-day and read like dime novel fiction.

The car was stolen here Sunday night, its owner saw it going east and telephoned Woodstock; two of the Woodstock police gave chase through the city and east to the waterworks hill at Paris before the car was stopped by police bullets.

Both the eleven-year-old girl driver and the thirteen-year-old boy, who were accompanied by another sister aged ten years, indicated driving ability that was uncanny.

At sixty miles an hour the car was threaded through mile after mile of highway traffic in such a manner that the police car could not get it.

Once when the police car was following close, a collie dog was thrown out of the fugitive car directly in the path of the pursuers. It escaped. Still again when the chase got hot, another dog was thrown out into the pathway of the police car.

And when bullets called a halt at Paris the two girls jumped into the ditch and lay prone on the bottom.

The lad darted across the roadway in front of coming traffic, which held up the police. He got away in the fog.

He was captured here yesterday afternoon by Chief P. Holmes, and this morning was ordered detained for a week, pending investigation.

It is known that he has stolen two cars, two bicycles, and one horse recently.

He is of foreign extraction, and lives at Beachville, five miles east of here.

Freak Hole In One Puts Golfer Ahead

BALTIMORE Oct. 2.—(Canadian Press).—A freak hole in one enlivened the first round of match play in the National Pro golf tourney to-day when Billie Burke, of Port Chester, N.Y., aided by this lucky break on the 17th hole, finished half the 36-hole round one up on Horton Smith. Burke's shot was three inches from the cup when Smith's putt knocked Burke's ball in for an ace.

At 18 holes Willie McFarlane was five up on Jim Foulis, Walter Hagen was one up on Willie Ogg after nine holes, while Al Espinoza was no less than even up on Johnny Golden after 18 holes.

CARS CRASH AT CORNER

Visitor to City and Local Man in Collision On Aylmer Street.

MUCH DAMAGE DONE.

At 4:45 on Monday afternoon, a large crowd quickly gathered and much excitement prevailed at the corner of Aylmer and Dalhousie streets where two motor cars crashed. One, driven by a stranger to the city was proceeding east on Dalhousie street, while the other, driven by a resident of this city, was proceeding north on Aylmer [illegible] together with such force that the front tires of both were blown out and the visiting car received further severe damage including a smashed-in fender and running board, broken wheel and damage to front axle and steering gear.

Aylmer street below Charlotte street is not a through street as many had supposed.

BREAK IN DYKE CAUSES FLOOD

War Time Scenes Are Re-enacted By Nature in Belgian Lowlands.

50 MILES FLOODED.

BRUSSELS, Oct. 2 (Canadian Press). — An equinoxial flood strengthened by heavy winds has reproduced war-time scenes in the region of the same dykes which fourteen years ago saved the Belgian army and Calais from the invading Germans. Fifty square miles of land has been transferred into a no man's land following an exceptional flood seventeen feet in depth which rushed through a breach in the dykes and swept into the lowlands.

It is one thing in life to select your target, and quite another to become a crack shot.

TRAINS AND AIR PLANES FAIL TO IMPRESS ESKIMO CHILDREN AS MUCH AS COMMON HORSE

Think Drayhorse is Big Dog and Marvel at Size of Load.

NOVELTY WEARS OFF.

Machinery, Being Inexplicable, Does Not Interest Them As Do Strange Animals.

LAKEFIELD, Oct. 2.—(Special to The Examiner).—Such modern miracles as the train and the airplane left two nine year old Eskimo boys, Samuel Pudlutta and Benjamin Audlanak, from the far North, who are at Lakefield Preparatory School unimpressed, but they were simply appalled at the sight of a common dray horse.

"Oh look at the big dog" they exclaimed in amazement as they saw the beast dragging what they considered stupendous loads to and from the docks at St. John's, Newfoundland.

Of course these boys were speaking in their own language, but it was easily understood by Rev. F. F. Gibbs, Arctict Anglican Missionary who has spent past three years at Port Harrison a northerly outpost in Hudson's Bay, and who escorted these lads from that point to Southern Ontario.

Many Weeks on Way

When Archdeacon A. L. Fleming made the tour of the Bay this fall he picked the two boys up at their home and took them away on the Hudson's Bay Company boat, Nascopie, a well equipped and spacious steamer, which arrived at Port Harrison, Mr. Gibbs' Mission, on August 19. Mr. Gibbs joined the party at this point and they sailed homeward to Cape Smith. The Archdeacon left the party at Burwell and Mr. Gibbs and the two boys continued on the Nascopie to St. John's. This trip occupied three weeks.

It would be wrong to state that the boys were not surprised at trains and other mechanical wonders which they saw on the boat at St. John's, but the novelty of these wore off in a day. The boys simply put them down as inexplicable mysteries of the white man and promptly forgot them.

But not so with horses. These animals held their constant attention. The boys had no education whatever before coming to Lakefield, and could not speak a word of English, but now they can use the commoner words with facility, understand nearly everything that is said to them.

Very Happy.

"Our boys from the north are wonderfully bright and exceptionally happy," said Rev. A. W. Mackenzie, the principal. He says it will be three years before they return home.

An amusing incident was told by Rev. Mr. Gibbs. The boys had changed for the first time from soft moccassins to a sturdy pair of thick soled and leather heeled boots. They got quite a kick out of stamping their heels on the hard floor and continued to do so for about half an hour.

SUES POLICE CHIEF FOR $170 DAMAGES

Port Hope Man Says He Was Assaulted When Placed Under Arrest.

Action is being taken through his counsel Hon. G. N. Gordon, K.C. by William Wilson of Port Hope against Chief of Police Thomas Murphy of the same town and Frank Powell of Cobourg on the grounds that he was assaulted and attacked by the defendants. The sum of $170 is claimed by the plaintiff for damages.

The alleged assault took place on or about July 30th when Wilson was arrested by Chief Murphy on a B.L.C.A. charge. Kerr and Cochrane of Cobourg are acting for the defendants.

BIG SEARCHLIGHT TO FOIL RUNNERS

DETROIT, Oct. 2 (Canadian Press) A giant searchlight mounted on a derrick on the Detroit river front is to be given initial trial this week as an aid to United States border patrol agents in curbing liquor smuggling from Canada. If successful, other lamps will be installed along the river. The light has a radius of two miles and has a siren attachment.

$1,381 RAISED FROM TAG DAY

Children's Aid Society Meets Generous Response From Citizens.

INCREASE OVER 1927.

The result of tag day on Saturday was very gratifying to the committee in charge. The amount collected including the schools of the city was $1,381.72. This is more than was realized last year, and the Society feels that the response this year is an expression of confidence in the work carried on during the year.

Mrs. Newhall, the convenor of tag day, wishes to thank all for the good work done, also all those who contributed towards its success.

The Society feels very grateful for the liberal response made to its appeal, and assures the public generally that every effort will be made in the future to carry on the good work of caring for the little ones.

A list of the boxes with the amounts collected will appear in The Examiner in a few days.

POWER DEBATE BEGINS TO-DAY

Dominion and Provincial Rights To Be Argued Before Supreme Court.

FIVE PROVINCES UNITE.

OTTAWA, Ont., Oct. 2 (Canadian Press).—Argument on the question of Dominion and Provincial rights to water powers opened in the Supreme Court of Canada, to-day, the question having been placed before the court for adjudication on reference with a view to deciding "the whole question of the division of legislative control over property interest in water power" as between the federal and provincial governments. The Dominion Government and the Provinces of Ontario, Quebec, Manitoba Saskatchewan, and British Columbia were represented by counsel when Chief Justice Anglin opened the proceedings.

Led by the Province of Ontario, representatives of Quebec and British Columbia supported the objection raised by W. N. Tilley, K.C., to-day to an appendix of over 900 pages being filed on behalf of the Dominion when the water power case opened before the Supreme Court to-day. Mr. Tilley, Ontario's counsel, contended that data giving the history of canal development should be struck out, the provinces having been given no chance to offer a rebuttal to the appendix which was introduced at the last moment without notice. Hon. N. W. Rowell, K.C. said the Dominion was merely anxious to submit all possible information.

Chief Justice Anglin ruled that the objection would be taken into consideration, but in the meantime argument would be proceeded with.

Moseley Drops Title At Labor Congress

BIRMINGHAM, Eng., Oct. 2.—(Canadian Press).—Sir Oswald M. Moseley, young Labor M.P., has dropped his newly acquired title so far as the Labor Party Congress now in session here is concerned, says the London Evening News. Both Moseley and his wife, Lady Cynthia, are attending the sessions. Moseley to his friends is just "Tom," while on formal occasions they call him "comrade."

KENNETH HULL PLEADS GUILTY

Stoney Lake Resident Given Suspended Sentence For Log Theft.

WARNING ISSUED.

Kenneth Hull of the township of Dummer appeared before His Honor Judge Huycke at the opening session of the County Judge's Criminal Court this morning and entered a plea of guilty to stealing logs the property of the Peterborough Lumber Company which were adrift on the shores of Stoney Lake. His Honor passed suspended sentence but not before he had thoroughly warned the prisoner and all others who might appear before him that the three years term in the penitentiary will be the punishment meeted out in future. Although not inclined to pass suspended sentence His Honor took into consideration the man's wife and young family which would be left without any support and only on this account granted the lightest sentence that could be given to any man pleading guilty to such a charge.

Represented by B. Parks the prisoner at the opening of the court changed his former election from trial with judge and jury to trial by judge only and changed his plea from not guilty to guilty. Mr. Parks entered a plea that his client be let out on suspended sentence as the value of the logs was small and the man had a wife and seven children, the two youngest being only a few weeks old. Crown Attorney G. W. Hatton K.C., who represented the Crown told His Honor of the steps Provincial Constable Thompson had taken in investigating the case and arresting the man. His Honor was not satisfied with the evidence given and asked that Dickson Davidson of the Peterborough Lumber Company be called. Mr Davidson said all that the company was asking was that the stealing be stopped and he thought if the prisoner was let out on suspended sentence it would be a warning to many others in that district.

His Honor in passing judgment said, "I think it is too bad that a man of your strength and ability should be guilty of doing such a dishonest thing, for it is the meanest kind of theft as you have the owner entirely at your mercy. You do not deserve any consideration, but I will consider your family more than I will consider you, for if I did what I ought to I would give you three years in the penitentiary and were you single I think I should. You must pay to the Peterborough Lumber Company the sum of $15 for the lumber taken and I will let you go on suspended sentence provided you report to Provincial Constable Thompson or Chief of Police Newhall around the first of every month. If you come before me again—and I hope this will be circulated through the entire Stoney Lake district—the penalty will be three years."

There were no other criminal cases on the docket so the court was adjourned.

Forlnight To Finish Plans

Provincial Health Department Issues Mandatory Order to City.

SHORT MEETING.

Ald. C. H. Ackerman Wishes To Resign—School Sewer Fee Confirmed.

Last night's council meeting was short, but at the same time a considerable amount of business was handled, most of it with a minimum of discussion. Ald. Stocker precipitated one heated debate when he renewed his opposition to reducing the fee for the sewer connection to the Confederation School to $80, but was overruled by three votes, and Alderman Ackerman started another debate, felicitous rather than acrimonious, when he tendered his resignation as an alderman. He was persuaded to withdraw this until the end of the year, but gave up his positions as chairman of the Property Committee and member of the Board of Health, being succeeded by Ald. McIntyre.

Possibly the most important matter coming before the house was the matter of sewage disposal, which was settled with very little debate. A mandatory order, resplendent with red seals and signed by the Hon. Forbes Godfrey, Minister of Health; W. J. Bell, Deputy Minister, and A. E. Berry, Director of the Division of Sanitary Engineering, commanded the city to have plans prepared for a sludge disposal plant to be added to the present plant. The plans must be submitted to the department for approval by October 15.

The accompanying letter stated that the construction of this addition had been ordered in January, but that apparently nothing had been done. Work on the addition was ordered started as soon as the plans have been approved.

City Engineer R. H. Parsons reported that the plans, which he has been preparing for some time, are nearly ready and can be submitted on that date. He was instructed to complete them and submit them and it was proposed that some member of the council take them to Toronto to point out the inadvisability of starting building operations of this kind before Spring.

Sewer Debate Renewed

Ald. Stocker opposed accepting the Board of Works report, while clause six, recommending that the fee for the sewer connection for Confederation School be $80, was allowed to stand. His opposition precipitated a heated debate for a few minutes, which concluded when the casting of vote vive voce showed his motion defeated.

Ald. Stocker began by asking if any of the aldermen had gone to any trouble to find out what other towns charged for private connections outside the limits; to which the Mayor responded in the negative.

"I have here a document," continued Ald. Stocker, which cost me $10—I made a trip to Toronto to get it. The City of Toronto charges sixteen cents a foot frontage for connections and thirty cents a foot for maintenance, which averages up to $23 a year. We are charging $16 and are giving them $7 a year, while the business men of this city are sweating blood to pay their taxes. There are men around the edge of the city who have imposed on us for twenty-five years."

City Makes Profit

"Ald. Stocker doesn't know what these services cost other cities," replied Ald. Hamilton. "Maybe if he had gone to other places he would have found some charging less, in which case he probably would want to reduce the charge here." He went on to point out the margin between the average cost to a city householder and that charged to the North Monaghan people, showing that the city has a margin of profit.

"They are paying us the cost of these services, plus a percentage," he continued. "They are not costing us a cent more. We don't have to hire extra men to care for them. It seems to me its neighborly to give it to them. We are not squandering the people's money; they need the service; we're not making the merchants spend any more blood, in fact, we're help them a little. I think we're getting a fair price for the service we're rendering."

"Do you think it good business to sell things at cost?" demanded Ald. Stocker.

"We're not selling at cost. We want to try to get an agreement to get things straightened up."

"After they had been stealing us."

"We went to them and brought them before the council to try to get an agreement," interrupted the Mayor. "They're not trying to steal anything. The agreement is not signed yet, and if they don't sign we can't collect.

"You went to the Department on the matter while I was chairman of the Board of Works, and I was not

ROBERT ... DAY WORSHIP SERVICE OBSERVED IN TRINITY UNITED CHURCH AT OMEMEE

Interior of Edifice Beautifully Decorated For Annual Occasion.

SPECIAL PROGRAM.

Harvest Home and Thanksgiving Services Held in Christ Church.

(Examiner Correspondence)

OMEMEE, Oct. 2. — On Sunday morning, the annual rally day worship service was observed in Trinity United church. The special program prepared by the Board of Religious Education was used, and the entire congregation joined with the scholars in the service which was held in the auditorium. A profusion of cut flowers was tastefully arranged inside the altar rail and surrounding the pulpit, and also in the choir loft. The centre pews, which were reserved for the scholars and teachers, were almost fully occupied by them, while a splendid congregation turned out to fill the side pews.

Messrs. T. C. Ivory and H. Lamb, the superintendents, led the responsive reading. They were assisted by Arthur Weir, Howard Vaughan, Evelyn Morcombe and Almeda Magee who in turn recited several sentences in praise of "peace."

Messrs. Russel Williamson and Ross Widdis collected the offering which was for a special object of the maintenance and extension fund — the strengthening of Sunday school and Young People's work throughout Canada. While the offering was being presented at the altar, the congregation sang softly, "We Give Thee But Thine Own."

Rev. J. T. E. Blanchard spoke for a short time on the theme of the leaflet, "Peace and Good Will" and the service was brought to a close by a fitting hymn, and the Benediction.

Thanksgiving Services.

Large congregations attended the Harvest Home and Thanksgiving services in Christ church, on Sunday, both morning and evening. The church was beautifully decorated

S. S. 7 PUPILS WIN SHIELD

Capture North Cavan Fair Trophy for Second Year in Succession.

ONLY FIVE PUPILS

(Examiner Correspondence)

CAVAN, Oct. 2.—S.S. No. 7 won the shield at the Rural School Fair at Ida. This is the second year in succession that they have won it. Previously they won a silver cup, three years successively and now own it and have it in their school. In this school they are only five pupils; three in prime, one in third book, and one taking continuation work this year. Because they are so few in numbers and three quite small, their teacher, Miss Segsworth, did not enter them in the school parade or physical culture.

CLERGY DISCUSS CHURCH REFORM

Deanery Chapter Hold Quarterly Meeting in Apsley Church.

HARVEST FESTIVAL

(Examiner Correspondence)

APSLEY, Oct. 2.—The eighty-seventh meeting of the Rural-Deanal Chapter of the Deanery of Peterborough was held in Apsley on Thursday and Friday, Sept. 27 and 28. The following members of the Chapter were present: Rev. C. A. G. Spence, Rural Dean; Rev. R. T. C. Dwelly, of Young's Point, secretary; Rev. T. J. O'Conor-Fenton, of Norwood; Rev. Dr. R. C. Blagrave, of Peterborough; Rev. H. Francis Battersby, of Hastings; Rev. George Bousfield, Sr., and Rev. George Bousfield, Jr., of Peterborough; Rev. W. J. Creighton, of Lakefield; Rev. Dr. T. Stannage Boyle and Rev. E. Ralph Adye of Cobourg were visitors.

Upon the arrival of the members lunch was served at the Rectory of St. George's, Apsley. The business meeting of the Chapter followed. Then Rev. T. J. O'Conor-Fenton, rector of Norwood, conducted a study in New Testament Greek, using the passage, Ephesians iv., 1-16. This was greatly appreciated.

After tea, there was a service held in St. George's, Apsley. The rector, Rev. C. A. G. Spence, had arranged to combine the Deanery service with the annual Harvest Thanksgiving service. Rev. G. J. Bousfield and Rev. W. J. Creighton conducted the service. Rev. Dr. Blagrave and Rev. T. J. O'Conor-Fenton read the lessons, while the sermon was preached by Rev. Dr. Boyle of Cobourg, who used as his text I. Kings xxii., 29: "And the rest of the deeds of Ahab, are they not written in the books of the Chronicles of the Kings of Israel?"

The activities of Friday, September 28, began with a celebration of the Holy Communion, at which Rev. C. A. G. Spence was the celebrant.

During the morning session, Dr. Boyle read a most illuminating paper on the subject, "Some Needed Church Reforms." This led to much discussion, which was enjoyed by all.

A pilgrimage was then made to the "Rock of the Holy Cross" on Loon Lake. This rock is a huge boulder of granite with two veins of quartz running right through it in the form of a cross. Beside the rock there grows a huge birch tree, which consists of three trunks emanating from the same root, seemingly symbolizing the Doctrine of the Trinity.

After a delightful trip down Loon Lake to the home of Mrs. Alex. Woods, lunch was kindly served.

Several of the clergy remained at Apsley at the conclusion of the proceedings in order to conduct and preach at the Harvest Festival services to be held at Lasswade and Chandos.

It was decided to hold the next meeting of the Deanery in Lakefield.

HARVEST HOME SERVICES HELD

St. Paul's Church, Marmora, Prettily Decorated for Occasion.

SPECIAL SPEAKER

(Examiner Correspondence).

MARMORA, Oct. 2.—The interior of St. Paul's Church never looked prettier than on Sunday morning last on the occasion of this year's Harvest Thanksgiving service. Flowers and foliage with vegetables and fruits made up an idealistic picture of Nature's harvest and silently urged the goodly congregation present to a hearty expression of thanksgiving to creation's Lord and Master. So hearty and joyous was the service that the speaker of the day, Rev. Percy Heywood, M.A., of Trenton, was urged to express his own personal appreciation of the work of the choir before delivering his sermon. "There is a real danger," he remarked, "when we have eaten and are fed, of forgetting the God Who gave us those good things. I am tremendously afraid of prosperity for the

CONCERT BRINGS SALVATION ARMY CAMPAIGN TO CLOSE

Varied Program of Selections Played On Many Instruments.

LARGE AUDIENCE.

The climax to a ten-day campaign to stir up a greater and more general interest in the Salvation Army, during which programs have been given at the Jail; House of Refuge, Lakefield; Rotary Club; Norwood, and Bethany, came last night when a capacity audience turned out to hear Field-Major Tom Urquhart, the musical wonder, "who travels on hundred thousand miles in a chariot of music and song," at the Salvation Army Citadel, Simcoe street. With his instruments, valued at $1,500, including a beautiful set of organ chimes costing $550.00, sleigh bells, hand bells, fairy bells, and banjo, to say nothing of a water kettle, saw, broom, washboard and rolling pin, the field major put on a program that challenged duplication. To describe each novelty number would be to write columns—they had to be seen and heard to be appreciated. Following was the program, including the numbers played by the Temple Band. Ensign E. H. Green was the chairman, and a most acceptable one indeed.

Hymn 345, "All Hail the Power"; Opening Song; Prayer; Bible Reading; March, "Canada West"; Mandoline Solo; Vocal Solo; Washboard Selection; Sleigh Bells Harmony; Tin Can Selection and Rolling Pin; March, by the Band; Hand-Saw Melody; Fairy Bells Harmony; Hand-Bells Selection; Balloon Solo; Vocal Solo; Red Hot Music from the Tea Kettle; Instrumental Duet, by the Major; Sweeping Chords from the Corn Broom; Organ Chimes Selection; Benediction.

The Major proved himself not only a versatile musical entertainer, but also a humorist, and his coming to Peterborough has been of much direct and indirect benefit to the local Salvation Army.

Laborer Drowned At Kingston Docks

KINGSTON, Ont., October 2 (Canadian Press).—Falling from a low scaffolding, on which he was wheeling a wheelbarrow at the new water works dock, late yesterday afternoon, Richard McGeein, aged 64 years, of Portsmouth was drowned when picked out of the water. An inquest was ordered by Coroner M. J. Morrison. Deceased had been working on the job for some time, and in view of the fact that the scaffolding was only about three feet wide, it is believed that he lost his footing and fell into the water.

LEAGUE SOCIAL GREAT SUCCESS

Earl Fairman is Given Wrist Watch as Memento of Services.

AT ZION CHURCH

(Examiner Correspondence)

BURNBRAE, Oct. 2.—Perhaps the most enjoyable social evening ever held under the auspices of Zion League took place at Mr. and Mrs. Fred. Barnum's home on Thursday evening. This event was staged in honor of Earl Fairman, formerly teacher at S. S. No. 1, who for almost four years has been an enthusiastic league worker and for the past two years convenor of the missionary department. Mr. Fairman is now teaching in West Seymour and is unable to continue his league associations.

Fred. Barnum, as president, called the meeting to order, and the attendance showed more than sixty present. Lindsay Anderson was then called upon to read an address, while Miss Gladys Simpson made the presentation of a handsome wrist watch. Mr. Fairman expressed his appreciation of the gift, his deep regard for the people of Petherick's Corners, and the benefit he had derived from his league associations. Some of the league officers, including Miss Gladys Simpson, Roy Fry, George Brunton, Thomas Fry and the Rev. MacTavish, gave short addresses.

The Misses Jennie Fry and Gladys Simpson had charge of the fun period, the party being divided into four groups, under leadership of Earl Fairman, D. Dickson, Everett Fairman and L. Anderson. After some nine contests which taxed powers of the brain, digestion, required considerable speed and even included the composition of poetry, the prize for the most points went to Earl Fairman's group. Amos Banum, the oldest active league member, gave two comic readings, which put the crowd in good humor for the excellent lunch which followed.

Personals.

Miss Dorothy Dickson and brothers, Messrs. D. and H. Dickson, of Sunbury, were the guests of Miss Jennie Fry last week.

Mr. T. A. Smith and daughter, Miss Opal McMullen, of Belleville, were guests of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Watson last week.

Messrs. Garnet and Thomas Kerr were prominent at the Campbellford Fair with their exhibits of Jerseys and Ayrshires.

MANY HELPERS

(Examiner Correspondence)

MILLBROOK, Oct. 2.—A successful sale of home-made baking and candy, under the auspices of the Women's Missionary Auxiliary of Saint Thomas' Church, was held in the vacant store formerly occupied by J. L. Byam, on Saturday afternoon, all the wares being disposed of within a comparatively shore space of time.

Late fall flowers were used for decorative purposes, and the daintily-laid afternoon tea tables were well patronized throughout the hours of the sale.

Among those assisting were: Mrs. T. H. Harkness, Mrs. J. A. Vance, Mrs. Harold Nattress and Mrs. E. Whyte, who had charge of the baking and candy counters; Mrs. J. E. Allen, Mrs. Charles McNeil, Mrs. W. Hilton and Miss Rose MacNamara.

PARCEL SOCIAL HELD AT KEENE

United Church Ladies Arrange Successful Concert in Hall.

GOOD PROGRAM

(Examiner Correspondence)

KEENE, Oct. 2.—The ladies of the United Church held a most successful and gratifying social on Wednesday evening in the basement of the church. The program opened with musical selections under the direction of Miss M. Bryce and Mrs. F. A. Easson. The Rev. Mr. McNeely made his debut as chairman for the first time since his induction and filled the position admirably, delighting the audience with his address, interspersed during the program with humorous stories.

At the close a surprise parcel sale was conducted by six ladies. There were 130 parcels made very attractively, which sold for twenty-five cents each, and judging from the quick sale a good many more could have been sold had they been available. A candy booth of home-made candy was also very attractively decorated, and the six ladies in charge wore uniforms with white caps and aprons. The proceeds of the evening amounted to $67.25.

The following was the program: "All Hail the Power of Jesus' Name"; piano duet, Helen and Marion Gillespie; selection by the Niller orchestra; guitar duet, Minnie Edwards and Alford Fletcher; duet, Mary Belle Humphry and Betty Brown; recitation, Isabelle Nelson; solo, Jean Knowles; selection by the orchestra; solo, Margaret Bryce; guitar duet, Alford Fletcher and Minnie Edwards; solo, Isabelle Nelson.

SEYMOUR THRESHER BUYS NEW ENGINE

William Fry Has Now Up-to-Date and Efficient Outfit.

(Examiner Correspondence)

BURNBRAE, Oct. 2. — Anything that will keep a bunch of hungry thresher farmers away from the supper table is worthy of more than passing recognition, yet this is what actually occurred on the farm of Lindsay Watson on Saturday. Just as William Fry, veteran thresher of the community, blew the supper whistle, an answering blast was heard from the road, and there came into view a shining new steam engine, driven by Thomas Locke, local Waterloo agent. This machine was purchased by Mr. Fry to replace his old engine, which has seen about twenty-five years' active service. New engines are somewhat of a rarity here, hence the uncommon interest shown by the men.

As soon as Mr. Locke had the new steamer in the yard, Wilbert Whitton, assistant to Mr. Fry, began the journey to Hoard's Station with the old engine, which was placed on a flat car for shipment to Waterloo. As Mr. Fry, at the beginning of the present season, purchased a new threshing machine from the same company, he now has perhaps the most complete and certainly the newest threshing outfit in the local field.

HARVEST THANKSGIVING SERVICE OBSERVED AT HAULTAIN CHURCH

Rev. R. T. C. Dwelly of Stoney Lake Mission Speaker For Occasion.

SPECIAL MUSIC.

(Examiner Correspondence)

HAULTAIN, Oct. 2.—On Sunday afternoon, September 30, the Harvest Thanksgiving service was held at Holy Trinity Anglican Church, Haultain. The church was well and tastefully decorated for the occasion with an abundance of fruit and vegetables, and a large congregation was present. The musical portion of the service was ably rendered by Miss Daisy Wilson, of Young's Point.

The incumbent of the Stoney Lake Mission, Rev. R. T. C. Dwelly, was the preacher, who used as his text Deut. viii., 11-27: "Beware that thou forget not the Lord thy God....and say in thine heart, my power and the might of mine hand hath gotten me this wealth." The harvest season should teach us to remember God. We are too apt to forget Him, and come to the conclusion that the necessities of Life are produced by natural causes, and that God has little to do with it. We must never forget that He is the source of all things. The world, the solar system, vegetation, man himself, in fact everything was made by Him, and without Him was not anything made.

There are many ways in which we can show that we do not forget Him. The first is by attendance, and regular attendance at the services of the church ascribed to Him. This should and must form an integral part of our life. Then, if it is necessary to have a church to attend, that church which represents the cause of Christ, must be supported. God asks us all to return to Him only a portion of the good things with which He has endowed us. That is our obligation and duty and we should not shrink from it.

If we are to live up to the ideal which is set before us as adherents of the Christian religion, we must live up to our obligations, and through this means make ourselves acceptable to Him Who made, sanctified, and redeemed us.

British Harvesters To Make Homes Here

WINNIPEG, Man., October 2 (Canadian Press). — Two British harvesters who came to Canada six weeks ago have adopted the Dominion as their home and will remain in Western Canada as farm owners, having bought a section of land with the proceeds earned while working in the harvest fields.

The men are Jack Wilson and Fred Wells, both of Durham, England. The accomplished the jump from harvest hand to farm owner by pooling their money earned while harvesting, and buying a quarter section of land from the farmer for whom Wilson had worked. The men had $225 apiece, and the sum needed to procure the land was $450. They immediately gave their wages to the farmer and Mr. Wilson is leaving for England to bring back his family and Wells' sweetheart, and will settle down in Canada to become a Canadian citizen.

SPONSORS PLEASED WITH RESPONSE

Three Local Artists Delight the Satin Finish Management.

Letters as follows have just been received by the secretary of the Chamber of Commerce, from the Satin Finish Hardwood Flooring Company, with reference to "All Peterborough Night," September 26th, station CKGW:

"When we received your letter stating that you were sending down three local artists and that the station would link up with the "City Service Cavaliers," we were very much afraid that the entire vocal hour would be uninteresting to the citizens of Peterborough, but after listening to last night's concert, we are of the firm opinion that it was undoubtedly the finest concert that we have ever broadcasted and our sincere hope is that as we broadcast from week to week, that we will have the co-operation of the secretary of the Boards of Trade of the different towns, as you have given us.

"Undoubtedly, your effort made last evening a success, and we are looking forward to some time later on in the year when we will again have Peterborough "on the air."

"Everyone here is very enthusiastic over last evening's program and we believe that Mr. Copeland more than excelled himself in the broadcast and your local artists certainly gave credit to Peterborough for supplying some of the finest artists we have heard on the air for a long time.

"Yours very truly."

Just in receipt of your letter of the 27th of September and are very pleased to hear that you and your artists were well received by Mr. Ashcroft and Mr. Copeland of Station CKGW. At the time we wrote you, we knew that every courtesy would be extended to you should you pay a visit to the station and we are pleased to learn that our views have been more than substantiated.

"We have always found Mr. Ashcroft and Mr. Copeland quite willing to make an evening a success and should be decide at a later date to dedicate another evening to Peterborough, we are confident that any arrangement you care to make, as far as local artists are concerned, you will have no trouble whatever in arranging with the station to allow them to broadcast.

"From the telegrams, telphone messages and letters received from Peterborough it would indicate that nearly everyone in your city was listening and if this is the case, we undoubtedly reached a large number of citizens who have never heard of Satin Finish before.

"Again thanking you for your co-operation in making the evening a success.

"Yours very truly."

As at the morning service on Sunday last Knox church choir attended in capacity numbers for the evening re-opening service at 7 p.m. Mrs. T. E. Curvin gave a beautiful rendering of "O How Amiable Are Thy Dwellings. The anthem, "What Shall I Render Unto the Lord," sung by the choir, opening solo by Mr. Willis and the vesper, "Abide With Me," were numbers both reverent and impressive. Messrs. Willis, Kelsey, Coleman and Pitchford formed the male quartette for the vesper.

The Postlude on the organ at the conclusion of the evening re-opening service was "Quoniam," from Mozart's 12th Mass, played by R. J. Devey.

WILLIAM SCOTT HERE 40 YEARS

Celebrates Birthday To-day But Does Not Reveal Age.

RECALLS OLD DAYS.

"Yes, I'm celebrating my birthday, and I have had a good many, but couldn't we make it a little different—by not stating the exact number?" The Examiner couldn't very well resist the pleasant tone and smile in which and with which the request was made. And so, the interview with W. Scott, well known throughout the city as a coal dealer and cold storage owner goes on recor with the secret unrevealed. The Examiner representative spent a pleasant half hour in conversation with him at his residence, 109 Hunter street east, on his birthday yesterday, thereby discovering a main reason why the Peterborough Coal and Cold Storage Company has grown to its present proportions. He is quiet and sincere, yet a pleasant conversationalist. Would would like to do business with him.

Here Forty Years.

"It is forty years or more since Mr. Scott came to this district from Galt, near which city he was born. His grandparents had come from Scotland. "I have seen many changes and much progress here," said Mr. Scott, "but the greater growth has taken place on the west side of the river. I remember when there was a population of about eight thousand over there. This side has not grown as fast as the west."

At another juncture in the conversation, he recalled hearing the story of Albert Edward, Prince of Wales to Peterborough. "It was before my time, of course," said he. "If I remember rightly, the train on which the Prince came to Peterborough stopped right out here (indicating the tracks near his present buildings). And they tell me that at that time the tracks led across a part of Rice Lake. Fear that the bridge might not be safe, prompted those in charge to have the Prince leave the train and cross the lake in a boat to re-entrain on this side."

Modest reference was made to his active life as a citizen, including the several years that he served on the Ashburnham, and later, the City of Peterborough Council. One picture, which Mr. Scott showed his visitor, was that of the 1905 City Council, of which the late Henry Best was mayor. E. Mason, T. J. Begley, J. Crow, Robert Hicks, F. Adams, A. A. McIntyre, G. J. Tovey, Adam Hall, R. Leary, Joseph Batten and W. Johnston (the last four are now dead) were the other members of the council as well as Mr. Scott, while another picture, that of the 1904 city council included, besides some of those named above, Mayor Rogers, Dr. M. A. Morrison, H. Rush (deceased), James Edgcumbe, who kept the store at the corner of George and Antrim streets, now owned by E. F. Mason, R. Clinkscale and R. McWilliams. Mr. McWilliams is now in the northwest.

St. Paul's Church, and in later years, St. Andrew's Church have felt the value of Mr. Scott as a member, he having served on the board of the former church for many years.

Though at one time he drove his own car regularly, he has of late left the driving to his daughter because, as he put it, "there are so many cars nowadays, a driver must be right on the watch all the time." In answer to the oft' asked question regarding his attitude toward tobacco and liquor, Mr. Scott smiled—then declared that while he had done some smoking, he had pretty well left it alone of late. As for liquor—"well, it's all right in its place, but a man should leave it alone if he cannot keep it in its place." He recalled several instances of the folly of it, as he had seen it.

C. HENRY HURT IN AUTO WRECK

Peterborough Man Cut and Bruised When Car Hits Bridge.

ONE MAN KILLED.

ROCHESTER, N.Y., Oct. 2 (Special to The Examiner).—One man was killed and three others, including Clarence Henry of Peterborough, Ont., were injured early Sunday morning when the light touring car in which they were riding left the road and hit the New York Central Railroad bridge in Linden avenue, Brighton, N.Y., near here, tipped over, and was wrecked. The dead man is Charles L. Herschell, aged 24, of No. 17 Love street, this city. Those injured are Michael Uolitz, 23, of No. 1329 North street, this city, at the Highland Hospital here, with severe scalp injuries; Raymond Henry, 25, of 331 Murray street, this city, driver of the machine, cuts and bruises; and his brother, Clarence Henry, of Peterborough, Ont., visiting here, cut and bruised.

Deputy Sheriffs McChesney and Clark said the men had been visiting an aunt of Politz and were returning to this city shortly after midnight when the accident occurred. They were driving at a fast rate of speed, deputies say. The railroad bridge is situated at an "S" curve in the road, and it is believed Henry was unable to make the turn and lost control of the car. After hitting the bridge, it ran part way up the railroad embankment, tipped over, and rolled back.

Herschell received a fractured skull and died before the arrival of an ambulance. The others were taken to the Highland Hospital here for treatment, and with the exception of Politz went to their homes. Herschell and Politz had been employed as coke truck drivers by the Rochester Gas and Electric Corporation.

CHILD KILLED BY MOTOR VAN

Thelma Knighton, 4, is 56th Victim of Year in Toronto.

DRIVER ARRESTED.

TORONTO, October 2. — Motor traffic took its fifty-sixth victim for the year in Toronto yesterday, when 4-year-old Thelma Knighton of 543 Jones Avenue was fatally crushed by a motor van near her home. The driver of the vehicle was arrested.

The little girl, with a number of other children, had been playing about Harcourt and Jones Avenues, when a delivery van driven by Walter Dyer, of 208 First Avenue, proceeding north on Jones Avenue, struck her, according to the police, and one wheel passed over her body.

A severe skull fracture was sustained by the tot, and she died on the way to the Hospital for Sick Children. The body was removed to the morgue, where an inquest will be held by Coroner Dr. J. M. Casserly on Oct. 5. The police of Pape Avenue Division conducted an investigation into the accident, and took Dyer into custody on a charge of criminal negligence. It was reported that the van had skidded a distance of forty-six feet.

TORONTO WOMAN DROWNS IN PLANE

Machine Piloted By Husband Capsizes While Taking Off.

STURGEON FALLS, Oct. 2. — Trapped in the fuselegae of a capsized plane, Mrs. Belle Sheppard, 40, of 18 Hurndale Avenue, Toronto, was drowned in Sturgeon River yesterday afternoon.

Her husband, Leigh B. Sheppard the pilot of the plane, extricated himself and fought desperately to save her life. Witnesses of the accident rushed to the scene in boats and found Sheppard desperately clawing at the fuselage in an attempt to open a way to release the woman prisoned inside. She was dead when a way was forced by the combined efforts of the party.

Taking off for Toronto

Sheppard, president of the Sheppard and Gill Lumber Company of Toronto, had flown the plane during an intensive trip to mining property he was interested in the Red Lake area. He was endeavoring to take off on the second stage of the return to Toronto when the tragedy occurred.

The plane had attained considerable speed and was just ready to leave the water when it was thrown sharply over on its nose after striking a submerged log. It was turned completely over, burying its occupants in the water.

It was 10 minutes after the crash before Mrs. Sheppard was released. She was rushed to shore, where Dr. Hawley worked for hours before hope was given up.

Mr. and Mrs. Sheppard had been visiting here as the guests of Mr. and Mrs. George Cockburn. Mr. Sheppard had just arrived in his plane on Saturday, and on Sunday afternoon they had cruised over the lake with the plane in perfect condition.

The body, which now lies at the resident of Mr. and Mrs. George Cockburn will be shipped to Toronto to-day for burial. Coroner Dr. Columbe will hold an inquiry to-day.

GRAIN YIELD IS FAIR HERE

Quality Not High in This District, Says J. B. Nelson.

RAIN SPOILS CROPS.

A fair yield of grain, though not of exceptional quality, was the comment of J. B. Nelson, local agricultural representative of the Provincial Government, in discussing the condition of crops in the district surrounding Peterborough, this morning. Mr. Nelson gave out some interesting sidelights on the 1928 harvest season.

The continued wet weather has not been most favorable to the harvesting of the grain crop, and wheat, especially has been soft and badly colored with considerable sprouting noticeable. The buckwheat crop is also proving a difficult proposition, and even mowers and scythes have been resorted to to cut it. Quite a lot of rot has been reported of the potato crop, due both directly and indirectly to the wet weather—directly because of soggy ground and indirectly because blight always works under the soggy conditions.

However, the situation is not something to be regarded as representing a complete loss, and if the wet weather has been detrimental in some ways it at least has put the ground in good condition for plowing. The corn crop is a little late and silo filling has just got nicely under way, but there has been little damage from frost, so the crop is fairly good.

The root crops, such as turnips, are coming along nicely according to Mr. Nelson, while the abundance of rain has kept the pasture lands in splendid condition throughout the season. There has been no "burning up" as in former years.

DOING GOOD WORK.

Cock the activities carried on in Peterborough by the Council of Women the organization has given proof of its willingness and ability to serve the munity, and, incidentally, has earned the right to uest public support.

The present campaign for $1,000 should be viewed in the light of the record of the Local Council.

If that record only contained the credit for launching supervised playgrounds, securing the appointment of a police matron and making possible the establishment of the Well Babies' Clinic, it would justify the appeal that is now being made.

These reforms, brought about through the instrumentality of the Local Council of Women, do not by any means exhaust the achievements to the credit of the organization, and they are quoted merely as a sample of what a wide-awake and public-spirited collection of women can accomplish when they set their minds to working in the field of public service.

The appeal should commend itself to all citizens who realize what a power for the welfare of the community the Council of Women has been since its inception.

FIRE PREVENTION.

Next week has been set apart by proclamation of the Governor-General as Fire Prevention Week in Canada in an annual effort to arouse the people of this country out of their lethargy in regard to this very vital question.

Our fire losses in this country, when contrasted with those of other nations are enough to have us indicted before the bar of world opinion as a people lacking altogether in common sense.

That the vast majority of fires could be prevented makes our position all the worse.

Various methods of stirring up interest in the problem will be followed next week, but after all the responsibility is an individual one.

Everybody can do something in the way of fire prevention, and just at this time of the year when furnaces and stoves are in active use again the householder is in a position to eliminate one very serious hazard by making sure that his chimneys and stove-pipes are clean.

The fact that a fire originating because of dirty pipes or chimneys carries a $50 fire for the party responsible should help to concentrate attention on this important task, which should be seen to at once.

LIFT THE LICENSES.

There are some motorists who appear to think that reckless driving largely consists of driving too fast.

The Hamilton Spectator points out the fallacy of that view. Remarking that there is less danger in operating a motor car at 50 or 60 miles an hour on an otherwise deserted stretch of highway than there is in attempting to maintain the legal speed of 35 miles an hour on a heavily-trafficked road, it says:

"Reckless driving is chance-taking, doing something that common sense says should not be done—cutting out of the traffic line when the odds are against one getting safely back into it again; trying to get past another car when it is apparent that the only way this can be accomplished is to force the other driver off the road; taking more than one's share of the right-of-way."

These and other offences, it may be pointed out, are committed by many motorists, and by such driving they show themselves unfit to be entrusted with the responsibility of a motor vehicle on the highway.

The most effective and the simplest way of getting rid of such motorists would seem to be that advocated by the registrar of motor vehicles for Ontario, who urges that the license of offending drivers be lifted.

Undoubtedly that method would have more effect than the imposition of fines.

"UNCLE TOM'S CABIN."

Another link with the past parted this week when Samuel Bolter, aged 82, passed away at Los Angeles. He was the first actor to play the role of Uncle Tom in Harriet Beecher Stowe's classic, "Uncle Tom's Cabin." Mr. Bolter filled the part for years and no doubt brought tears to the eyes of hundreds of thousands as he portrayed the sufferings of the kindly old colored man who forms the central figure of the drama.

In all the history of the stage, on this continent, at least, where will one find anything to compare with "Uncle Tom's Cabin" for continued popularity? It has been played in large theatres and small theatres, in the great cities and the little hamlets, for year after year, decade after decade. In thousands of municipalities all over the continent, the annual visit of what theatre men call, a "Tom show," was the great annual event. Young and old thrilled to it. The excitement began with the posting of the first lurid bills on the livery stable and other prominent spots around town. Boys and girls gathered to gaze on the agonized face of Uncle Tom, the augelic loveliness of little Eva, the "little devilry" of Topsy and the blood-thirsty expression of Simon Legree.

There was always speculation as to how many bloodhounds the troupe would carry. Sometimes the showing was disappointing. More often than not, the "bloodhounds" weren't bloodhounds at all, but mastiffs or Great Danes. This always provided ground for another argument hinging upon what a real bloodhound looked like. It is safe to say, though, that no production of "Uncle Tom's Cabin," no matter how poor and how cheap, failed to provide dogs. They may not have been the blood-sweating monsters of the original manuscript, but they were dogs and that saved the tradition. "Uncle Tom's Cabin" without dogs would have been quite as serious as "Uncle Tom's Cabin" without Uncle Tom.

It would be interesting to know how many millions of dollars have been paid out by the public for the privilege of seeing "Tom shows." In this day and age it is considered almost remarkable if an expensive theatrical production lasts four or five years. "Uncle Tom's Cabin," however, has gone on for half a century or so and it isn't off the boards yet. Simon Legree is still wielding the black whip and little Eva continues to make her nightly ascents to realms above. Eliza leaps across the ice with the bloodhounds or near-bloodhounds in full cry. On the stage and on the screen, the greatest drama of all time is still hauling dollars to the box office, as new generations gather to laugh and weep while Uncle Tom and Eva and Topsy and Legree go through the old familiar performances that age seems not to wither nor custom stale.—Border Cities Star.

GREATEST YEAR FOR THE MOTOR INDUSTRY.

The year 1928 has proved the greatest year on record for the automotive industry in the United States, and doubtless when statistics are compiled the same will prove true in Canada. In the course of a year between 4,000,000 and 5,000,000 families in the United States have provided themselves with a car of some kind.

The August output included 500,689 passenger cars and 57,740 trucks. These brought the total production for the eight months of the present year to 3,051,220 units, as compared with 2,646,285 for the same period of last year, and 3,394,386 for the entire twelve-month of 1927. With four months still to go 1928 looks like a banner year for the industry.

It is asserted frequently that the motor car craze, if it can be called that, has slowed up other industries, particularly construction of dwellings and ownership therein. People, it is claimed, are buying cars where they should be making an investment in a home. That may be true to a very great degree and doubtless economic ill will result from such tendencies, but will not this economic ill be offset by prosperity and activity and employment in many other lines, directly attributable to the motor car? There is reason to believe that the impetus to distribution of wealth given by tre motor car will more than counter-balance any economic anomalies which may also result. In the steel trade, 13 per cent. of all steel manufactured is required now for the motor car industry. Between 2,000,000 and 3,000,000 are employed in the output of lead, zinc, paint, varnish, glass, iron, steel, lumber, rubber and textiles which go into motor cars. In the industry itself in the United States there are 400,000 employed directly, not including thousands of salesmen, and other thousands who sell gas and operate repair stations. The motor car industry, therefore, creates a prosperity of its own.

In Canada, we also feel it to a tremendous degree in the tourist traffic. More and more are Americans buying goods here which they cannot secure in quality or in price at home. The motor car is also giving people a knowledge of the continent never possessed before. It is extending the horizon of thousands. There is no doubt that the ownership of homes will in due course become adjusted to new conditions. There is only a small percentage of people after all who mortgage a house to buy a motor car.—St. Catharines Standard.

Belleville folks stayed up until midnight Saturday night to welcome their championship ball team, doubtless figuring the occasion justified losing a couple of hours from the community's usual period of sleep.

GOD'S MINUTE.

He is faithful and just to forgive us our sins.—I John, 1:9.

Almighty God of the Heaven, the earth and the sea! God of our fathers and God of the nations! Hear us, we pray Thee. Forgive our sins and remove our transgressions far from us. Help us, that we may behold Thy glory.

Help us to see the beauties of Thy law, and to feel the quickening power of Thy wonderful love. Give us, we pray Thee, broad faith, bright hopes, strong love and a firm step to meet the duties of life.

Let our hearts sing for joy in the remembrance of Thy goodness. We praise Thee for Thy many and signal blessings vouchsafed to us, not only as individuals, but also as a people and a nation. We thank Thee for our forefathers, for Thy manifold blessings, bestowed upon them, and through them upon us, their children. We pray Thee, O God, for grace to enable us to live useful lives, helpful to our fellow-men.

May wars and strife cease, and the kingdoms of this world become the kingdoms of our Lord and His Christ. Hear our prayer for our Redeemer's sake. Amen.

MONTREAL GRAIN AND PRODUCE

MONTREAL, Que., Oct. 2 (Canadian Press).—The export trade in grain here yesterday was quiet, there being practically no demand from any source. The trade in cash grain in the domestic market was more active and sales of two cargoes of oats were made for shipment to Quebec this month, and a sale of 50,000 bushels of Argentine corn was made for shipment to an Ontario point. The tone of the market was steady. Sales of Manitoba No. 5 wheat were made at $1.11; No. 6 wheat at $1.02, feed wheat at 98c; Argentine corn at $1.06, American corn at $1.03, and Manitoba feed barley at 79c.

The trade in Spring and Winter wheat grades of flour was steady and prices were unchanged.

A fair trade was done in all lines of millfeed and the undertone to the market was firm. The trade in standard grades of rolled oats was active and values were steady.

There were no further developments in the fresh egg situation, but the tone was firm under a good demand. The receipts were 1,626 cases.

The demand for imported beans was steady and a moderate business was done in small lots to meet actual wants at firm prices. Sales of choice white hand-picked beans were made at $4.20 to $4.40 per bushel, ex-store, and car lots to arrive were quoted at $4 per bushel, ex-track.

The demand for butter was still of a limited character, but the undertone was about steady. The receipts were 297 packages

There was very little response from English importers to the offerings of cheese made by exporters over the week-end and the volume of business reported was small, but there was some demand from spot buyers. The receipts were 4,130 boxes.

CHICAGO GRAIN

CHICAGO, Oct. 2 (Canadian Press).—Big additions to the United States wheat visible supply proved to be more of a load yesterday than the wheat market could stand up under. An increase of 6,665,000 bushels during the last week enlarged the total to 110,047,000 bushels, an amount never before met with at this time of year.

Closing quotations on wheat were nervous at ¾c to 1c net decline. Corn finished ¼c off to ¾ up; oats ¼c to ¾c down, and provisions varying from 42c setback to a rise of 2c.

Lowest prices of the day in the wheat pit came after announcement of domestic visible supply figures. The total was in striking contrast with this time a year ago, when United States stocks of wheat in sight aggregated only 78,363,000 bushels, prior to posting yesterday of the visible supply, the market has been recovering from early downturns, but soon gave way in the face of the new bearish factor, and closed a little from the bottom level reached.

Export business yesterday in wheat from North America was of fair volume, 80,000 bushels, but this circumstance failed to offset the visible supply increase of United States wheat, most of the export sales being of wheat grown in Canada. Meanwhile rural deliveries of Canadian wheat continued heavy, totalling for a single day, 6,692,000 bushels besides. Eastern Australia and Southern Argentina were reported as receiving needed moisture and there was also word of 10 per cent. increase of Germany's bread cereal yields this season over 1927.

Corn future deliveries were active, and averaged higher most of the time yesterday, but declined toward the last owing a good deal to sympathy with wheat weakness.

Export bids for corn were out of line. A considerable part of September corn deliveries were said to have lodged finally with manufacturers of corn products. Oats prices were unsettled with action of other grain the chief influence.

Provisions showed an easier undertone despite upturns in the value of hogs. Deliveries of 17,400,000 pounds of lard yesterday on Chicago Ocotber contracts had a bearish effect.

RALLY DAY WORSHIP

with vegetables, fruit, grain and flowers. Each pew was tied with wheat and flowers, while a touch of nature adorned every available place. Rev. J. D. Patterson, of All Saints' church, was the special speaker at the morning service. He took his text from Deuteronomy, 8-18, "But thou shalt remember the Lord thy God; for it is He that giveth thee power to get wealth, that He may establish His covenant which He swore unto thy fathers, as it is this day." The choir rendered an anthem, "The Lord is My Shepherd" in good style, the solo parts being taken by L. A. Southworth. They were assisted by Mrs. A. L. Amys, of Peterborough, who also contributed a pleasing solo, "Father Almighty."

At the evening service the Rev. G. J. Bousfield, of St. Luke's, Peterborough, delivered the message, taking for his subject the "Prayer of Thanksgiving." Mr. Bousfield delighted the large congregation by his splendid discourse. Having sung the thoughts of Thanksgiving and the prayers for Thanksgiving, the material things which God has provided to keep the soul and body together for the days which are to come, were first dealt with by the speaker, and later the spiritual things and God's inestimable love.

The choir rendered a very pretty anthem and Mr. Amys sang in fine voice, "Open the Gates of the Temple."

The hymns were very appropriate to the season, they being, "Come Ye Thankful People, Come." "Hear Us, O Lord From Heaven Thy Dwelling Place" and "We Plough the Fields and Scatter the Good Seed on the Land."

By some misunderstanding, the congregation of St. Andrew's church were disappointed on Sunday morning, when their preacher for the day, a student from Toronto, failed to arrive. A fair congregation had gathered.

PACKED HOUSE GREETS SINGERS

Madrigal Singers Please Large Campbellford Audience

ENCORES DEMANDED.

(Examiner Staff Correspondence.)

CAMPBELLFORD, Oct. 2.—Probably one of the largest audiences ever to attend a concert in this town during recent years, was present last night to hear the Madrigal Singers of Peterborough under the direction of Dorothy Allan Park. The entertainment was under the auspices of St. John's United Church choir and was presented in the auditorium of the church, the choir loft being used as a stage for the singers. There was scarcely an empty seat in the entire church and there were many who were forced to stand during the entire program. This was especially the case in the gallery, which is on three sides of the building. For the occasion, the choir loft was artistically decorated with autumn flowers.

This is the first appearance of the now famous group of lady singers in Campbellford. That it was an overwhelming success was amply attested by the rapt attention throughout the entire program and the enthusiastic and persistent applause which followed each number of the program.

Among the features which were most noticeable about the Madrigal Singers was their delicacy and beauty of tone. There was not the slighest hint of the bombastic type of vocal music during the entire program. In only two numbers did they depart from their subdued tones and then only for brief passages. It should be borne in mind that madrigals are written in any number of parts from four to seven, and usually in a variety of movements.

There were fourteen numbers on the program presented last night, with the Madrigal Singers themselves doing the larger portion of the entertainment. Mrs. Hazel Davidson McClelland, elocutionist, was easily the most popuar entertainer and after each of her two numbers, persistent applause demanded, and refused to be denied, an encore. Mrs. McClelland's numbers were exceedingly humorous and at once endeared her to the hearts of her audience. Her first number was illustrative of a little child at a theatre and for an encore she gave Little Marion. For her second number, Mrs. McClelland won much applause with her "Friday Afternoon," a most perfect imitation of a Friday afternoon concert in one of the lower grades of most any public school. The Scotch Sermon, her encore, pleased everyone.

A real treat for music lovers was the solos by the three medallists from the Toronto Exhibition this year. Miss Geraldine Collins, Peterborough, not only won the gold medal in her class, but also the exhibition scholarship for the most promising voice at the Exhibition. She sang "A Request" by Woodford-Finden. Mrs. Fred Free, contralto gold medallist, sang Wood's "O Flower Divine," and was the second member of the group of singers to be encored. She sang "My Treasure." Mrs. Park was at the piano. Miss Margaret Dickson, silver medallist in the lyric soprano class, sang "Should He Upbraid" by Bishop, an old English number. Miss Daisy Davidson's solo, "The Little Damozel" by Novello, was greatly appreciated. It was a little love song, reminiscent of the British Isles.

The two duets on the program also found favor with the large audience. The first, the Barcarolle from "Tales of Hoffman," was sung by Mrs. Ross Williamson and Miss Bertha Hill. This popular favorite of the musical classics was most pleasingly sung. The second number was Newton's "The Golden Goose," sung by Miss Margaret Dickson and Mrs. Fred Free. It was a light and airy setting of an old nursery tale.

"Old King Cole," a quartette sung by Miss Helen Lamb, Miss Daisy Davidson, Miss Margaret Wolstenholme, and Miss Bertha Hill, so pleased the audience that the appl

XLI—SALLY'S WISH

Following his conversation with Sally, Philip Sanderson seemed to take it for granted that she would marry him as soon as matters could be arranged.

He was a man to whom eloquence was always difficult, but the few words he had spoken had meant so much to him that he was sure they must have conveyed as much to Sally.

He was fully aware that she did not love him as he loved her, but he was obstinately convinced that once she was his wife he could break down any barriers between them and show her that there were no limits to what he could become for her sake.

All his life he had been more or less forced back upon himself, and unable to give full expression to his feelings, and he longed more than he realized for somebody of his own with whom he could be perfectly frank and free from restraint.

Perhaps he had always placed Sally upon too high a pedestal; perhaps he had overrated her intellect and also her capacity for loving, but he would not have believed it had anyone told him so; in his eyes even her faults were virtues.

When he believed that matters were settled between them he told her of the money which he had inherited from his half-brother.

"I shall settle it all on you, Sally, of course. I'm much older than you, and I dare say I shall be pushing up the daisies long before you have grown tired of pretty frocks and fripperies. Beside, my wife must be properly provided for."

Sally smiled with her lips though her eyes were sad.

"You're very good to me, Philip," she said, but there was a lack of interest in her voice. Money no longer seemed the infallible god she had always believed it to be; she had begun to realize that there were only twenty shillings in every pound, and nothing left over with which one might buy happiness.

"You're all I have in the world," Sanderson said, as he had said once before.

He told Mrs. Kiff all about it the following morning, as he was chopping wood for her copper fire.

"Do you like weddings, Mrs. Kiff?" he inquired.

Mrs. Kiff sniffed.

"I've never been to any except my own," she said cynically. "And that wasn't much fun, from what I can remember of it, and I can't remember much, thank the Lord."

"Well, would you like to go to another?" Sanderson asked. Mrs. Kiff put down the dish she was drying, and eyed him suspiciously.

"And whose might it be, may I ask?" she inquired with deadly calm.

Sanderson straightened his long back and wiped the perspiration from his brow.

"Now, whose do you think?" he asked whimsically.

He was thoroughly enjoying himself; he was so happy in the wonderful secret he had to impart that, like a child, he hugged it to himself for the longest possible moment.

Mrs. Kiff flapped at a fly with her wet dishcloth.

"If it's that Mr. Garry Nairn's come back," she said sharply, "it's not at his wedding I'm wishful of wearing my shoes out, and that's flat! I've never spoken of it to you before, sir, hoping that I know my place, seeing that I'm only a servant, but what I've thought about the way he went off is something worth hearing, so if it's that he's coming back to marry Miss Sally—"

"It's not," said Sanderson.

He felt as if someone had reached up into the blue sky of his happiness and eclipsed the sun.

For a moment he stood staring down at the half-chopped wood before him, then he laughed and shrugged his shoulders.

"Supposing Miss Sally is going to marry me?" he said.

Mrs. Kiff laughed—a fat, comfortable sort of laugh.

"I suppose you will have your little joke," she said cheerily. "But all the same——"

"It's not a joke," Sanderson interrupted sharply. "It's the truth. Miss Sally and I are going to be married as soon as she is well enough." He was not looking at Mrs. Kiff, but the minutes that passed before she spoke felt like a lifetime.

Then at last she found her voice, helplessly it seemed.

"Well, I never! It just shows! Well, I never! I never was so flummixed!"

"Many thanks for your hearty congratulations," Sanderson said drily.

He threw down his chopper and turned back to the house, but Mrs. Kiff followed, her face red with distress.

"I'm sure I never thought, sir. You took me all by surprise. Of course, I've always known it was what you wanted, but after Mr. Garry came——"

"Oh, hell!" said Sanderson.

He turned on his heel, struck across the little garden and went off down the road at a tremendous pace.

He had walked a couple of miles bareheaded before he came to himself and stood still laughing grimly.

What a fool to get so upset over a blundering woman's still more blundering tongue!

As if it mattered what she said or thought! Nothing could alter the blessed fact that Sally was to be his wife.

He went back to the cottage feeling sheepish and ashamed, wondering what explanation of his absence he could give to Sally.

But Sally had not missed him; she had been asleep, she said—asleep and dreaming such lovely dreams.

"Of me, I suppose!" Sanderson submitted grimly.

Sally looked at him with grave eyes. The unhappiness of her own heart that gave her no peace night or day had given her a new and wider understanding.

Sometimes it seemed to her that she stood behind Sanderson's hard eyes and looked through them at life, seeing it as he saw it, seeing all his disappointments and bitternesses, and realizing the grim stoicism with which he tried to cover his wounds.

So she said now very gently:

"What's the matter, Philip?"

"Nothing."

Much as he longed to tell her, Sanderson felt it to be an impossibility.

She would only laugh and call him jealous, and Sanderson loathed being laughed at, even by Sally.

And Sally was too tactful to press the question, save from a different point of vantage.

"I've been thinking," she said half-shyly, half in a business-like way, "that if we're to be married, and if I'm supposed to be engaged to you now, I ought to have a ring."

"A ring!" Sanderson stared down at her from beneath his frowning brows, then he laughed and the shadows cleared as he sat down beside her on the couch where she had been resting, and took her hand in his.

"What sort of a ring, Sally?"

"Any sort. You choose."

That pleased him.

"I'll go to London tomorrow and bring some down," he said.

"No. You choose. It will be much more fun if you choose," she insisted gently.

She was not really interested in a ring, but she was interested in seeing Sanderson happy. As each day passed she seemed to realize more vividly how much he had done for her, how great was her debt to him. "If I can't be happy myself, at least I can try to make him happy," was the way she argued it out to her conscience.

That was a great step forward for Sally. In the past it had been only of herself that she thought; she had used everyone as stepping stones by which she might further her own advancement.

"I'll choose the prettiest ring in London," Sanderson promised recklessly.

HOROSCOPE

The Stars Incline, But Do Not Compel

WEDNESDAY, OCTOBER 3, 1928

This is a day of contradictory influences, according to astrology, which finds benefic and adverse aspects contending.

It is well to distrust one's judgment under this sway and to avoid impulsive action. Small matters may seem unusually irksome.

The rule may incline both men and women to find fault with their places in life and to suffer from a discontent, far from divine.

It is well to nurse one's job instead of watching for all its objectionable features. This is not an auspicious time to change employment.

Farmers may be especially susceptible to the planetary rule today, which is likely to bring discouraging matters into prominence.

The seers point out that this is a period of transition when all that is to be eliminated gains conspicuousness.

Women who exhibit lack of modesty in dress are mere signs that reactionary influences are at work, for fashions are to turn backward to many picturesque modes.

While this is a favorable day for making new acquantances it is not a lucky day for romance. Summer flirtations do not crystallize into bona fide love affairs while this rule continues.

All the signs appear to be favorable to persons who have places in the sun. All political candidates will be inclined to be confident under this direction of the stars.

The stars smile on evening entertainments and on meetings of every sort. Speakers of every sort should find that words flow smoothly under this way.

CONSERVATIVES WIN 23 SEATS IN HOUSE

Guysboro in the interest of the Conservative party during the federal election campaign. He was elected and subsequently died. William Morrimer Hall, former leader of the party in Nova Scotia, succeeded Mr. Douglas as Attorney General.

Council Abolished

A change in Nova Scotia's parliamentary machinery was made during the Rhodes' administration in the abolition of the Legislative Council, or "upper chamber" of 21 members, whose approval had to be gained by all bills passing the assembly before they went into effect.

Members appointed to this chamber during the government of Hon. Mr. Murray had agreed to vote themselves out of office, should a bill to this end be passed by the assembly. A change in the constitution of the council was made during the premiership of Hon. Mr. Armstrong, providing that members be placed in office for ten years, rather than life, setting the age limit at 75 years, and providing that any bill passing the assembly for three successive years, other than one abolishing the council, should become law without regard to the council's decision.

During the campaign of 1925, Hon. Mr. Rhodes included in this platform a pledge that this chamber be abolished. A committee of which one member was the Rt. Hon. Robert L. Borden, having found the promise given by councillors appointed under Hon. Mr. Murray not binding, an abolition measure was introduced at the first session of parliament after the accession of the Rhodes government, but the Legislative Council refused to vote itself out of office. This occurred a second time at the next session, and overtures were commenced between the premier and the council looking toward an agreement by which the council would come to an end. These were unsuccessful.

Seeking authority to appoint sufficient councillors over the customary number of twenty-one, to carry the abolition measure, after receiving a favorable opinion from the provincial law officers of the Crown, conferred with the Lieutenant Governor, and the case was placed before the law officers of the Crown at Ottawa, who ruled that the number in the council should not be increased. An appeal to the Supreme Court of Nova Scotia resulted in an equal division of opinion, and the case was carried to the judicial committee of the Privy Council at London.

Finding Reversed

The decision of this body gave the Premier authority to dismiss life members of the Council at pleasure of the Governor-in-Council and to appoint as many as he desired. Eight life members who had opposed abolition were dismissed, and fourteen abolition measure was then passed, abolition measure was then passed, and the legislative council went out of existence on May 31, 1928.

"The direct result of this important constitutional reform," said Premier Rhodes in his pre-election manifesto, "will be to invest the people's chosen representatives with wider powers and greater responsibilities than were ever heretofore conferred upon members of the House of Assembly." It was to justify this greater responsibility, the Premier said, that an election was called for October 1.

UNCLE WIGGILY

By HOWARD R. GARIS

Today: Bedtime Story

UNCLE WIGGILY AND PUSSY KAT

(Copyright, 1928, by McClure Newspaper Syndicate.)

Uncle Wiggily was hiding behind the piano. Papa Kat was hiding back of the big arm chair. Pussy Kat, the newest little sister of Joie, Tommie and Kittie Kat, was out on the front porch dreaming of catnip, of which she was very fond.

"I think she's waking up, now, and will soon be coming in to take the last lot of catnip I brought," whispered Mr. Kat.

"Hush!" whispered Uncle Wiggily. "We don't want her to know that we are here to watch and see what she will do."

In the story before this I told you

Papa was hiding there.

how Mr. Kat would bring home catnip leaves and hide them away in his house to be used in case of illness. But Pussy would find the catnip, no matter where it was hidden, and as catnip to a kitten or cat is what ice-cream or candy would be to you, Pussy ate the catnip up as fast as her daddy brought it home.

So Papa Kat asked Uncle Wiggily what to do, since hiding the catnip even back of the mustard jar didn't seem to keep Pussy from finding it. So Uncle Wiggily just stuffed the catnip, which is very strong, almost like the corner of the room in plain sight.

"Pussy will never think of looking for it there," said the rabbit.

"I think she will," said Papa Kat. So the two hid themselves to watch what Pussy would do.

Soon the little cat came in from the front porch. And no sooner had she entered the room than she smelled catnip which is very strong almost like peppermint.

"Oh!" mewed Pussy not knowing her daddy and Uncle Wiggily were hiding in the room. "I'm going to get more catnip!"

Pussy did not mean to do wrong, but she was very young and small and she looked for catnip in the most cunningly hidden places and ate all the leaves, which left none in case Tommie, Joie or Kittie became ill in the night.

"I guess Daddicums hid this catnip behind the piano, like he did before!" softly mewed Pussy as she walked on tiptoes about the room. "He can't fool me! I'll find it."

She was going to look behind the piano but she didn't and it is a good thing she didn't or she would have seen Uncle Wiggily. But all of a sudden Pussy thought perhaps the catnip was back of the big arm chair.

"I'll look there," she mewed, turning toward it. But she didn't look behind the chair and it is well that she didn't for Papa Kat was hiding there and she would have seen him and have found out about the trick that was being played on her.

"No, I guess he hid the catnip back of the clock," mewed Pussy. So she looked behind the clock, where often before she had found catnip, but none was there this time. "It must be in the umbrella stand," whispered Pussy Kat, but no catnip was there.

"This is very queer!" mewed the puzzled little cat. "I guess he hid the catnip in a milk bottle. He'd never think I would look there but I shall and I'll find it."

However the catnip wasn't in the milk bottle. All the while it was in the crumpled paper bag in the corner of the room in plain sight. Pussy could smell it but though she saw the bag she never thought her father would put catnip in such a queer hiding place as that.

But it was Uncle Wiggily who thought of the bag, not Mr. Kat.

So Pussy looked all around the room, back of pictures, under the rugs and on top of the piano, but no catnip could she find. She did not know what to make of it and her daddy and Uncle Wiggily, in their hiding places, couldn't help laughing.

At last Uncle Wiggily sneezed and Mr. Kat snickered and then Pussy knew some one else was in the room and she mewed:

"Who is here?" Out came the bunny and the cat gentleman and Mr. Kat picked up the paper bag, opened it and took a taste of catnip as he said to his little girl:

"Were you looking for this, Pussy?"

"Oh!" she cried. "To think it was there all the while and I never thought of opening the bag! How silly of me!" And she was so ashamed of herself when her father and Uncle Wiggily laughed that never after that did she look for hidden catnip or take any that wasn't given her. So Pussy Kat was cured of a bad habit.

DIVISION COURT DOCKET MELTS

Only One of Seven Cases Slated For Trial Heard in Court.

FIVE SETTLED.

(Examiner Staff Correspondence).

CAMPBELLFORD, October 2.—Only one case was heard by Judge O'Connor in Division Court here yesterday afternoon. Another was laid over till the next sitting of the court and five others were settled out of court. These seven constituted the imposing looking docket which awaited His Honor on his first visit to Campbellford in the official capacity of Counties Judge. The court was held in the Council Chamber of the Public Library building at two o'clock yesterday afternoon.

The case to be heard was an appeal from the Magistrate's decision in the case of Sampson vs. Rogers. The Hon. G. N. Gordon, K.C., Peterborough, appeared for Sampson and W. F. Kerr, K.C., Cobourg, and N. Alex. MacColl appeared for Rogers. The case centered about a used car deal and more particularly on the tires which were included in the deal. Most of the evidence had already been heard at previous sittings of the court, but Mr. Gordon attacked the case from several different angles. After taking evidence most of the afternoon, His Honor reserved judgment.

TWO BLAZES IN CAMPBELLFORD

Slight Damage Done By Fires Occurring Yesterday Afternoon.

FIRST IN MONTHS.

(Examiner Staff Correspondent.)

CAMPBELLFORD, Oct. 2.—Although the fire department [illegible]ed only one alarm yesterday, there were two fires reported within a few hours of each other. The first occurred about 12.30 noon in the store of W. J. Armstrong, merchant, Front Street South. Mr. Armstrong was alone in the store at the time and did not notice anything amiss till he heard a slight "poof," and turned to see flames leaping from under one section of a wooden counter. He managed to extinguish the blaze by using plenty of water, and his loss will not be heavy. The wooden structure of the counter is damaged on the under side and there is some evidence of the fire to be seen from the front portion immediately under a metal cash register. The damaged goods consist chiefly of shoes and children's rain cloaks. Mr. Armstrong is unable to form any opinion as to the origin of the fire.

The second blaze brought in an alarm at 4.17. This time it was to extinguish a blaze on the roof of the house owned by W. I. Stillman, Rear Street, and occupied by George Dunn. The house is situated immediately north of the Trent Valley Creameries, and it is thought that the blaze was the result of a spark from the chimney of the creamery. A few minutes' work on the roof, aided by chemicals from the truck, was sufficient for the firemen to extinguish the blaze. The loss is slight and is covered by insurance. These two fires are the first reported in town for many weeks.

How Barren, Mute and Empty is a Room Without its Rug!

THE icy hand of winter stretches out and takes from a garden its colorful beauty and freshness. How similar is the effect when a room is stripped bare of its Barrymore Rug! Where is the serene relationship that existed between all the furnishings? . . . why do they appear so angular and harsh? . . . where is that spirit of hospitality and cheerfulness?

Just as Nature binds its colorings together by a boundless green carpet, even thus does a Barrymore bring unity to your whole room scheme. The rich mellow colorings of the rug find their echoing notes in the tints of the walls, curtains, upholsteries. The lustrous, luxurious pile invites the tread . . . the whole room is a silent gesture of welcome!

Study each room in your house with a critical eye, and ask yourself frankly if new rugs would not make a real, striking difference. Then visit any good house furnishing store (they all sell Barrymores) and learn the small amount it would take to recarpet with the beautiful, famous Barrymore. Wilton, Axminster or Saxony qualities . . . all sizes, designs and colors.

MOULDERS UNION HOLDS MEETING

Big Gathering of Men From All Over Continent at Montreal.

W. A. MOWRY THERE.

MONTREAL, Oct. 1.—W. A. Mowry, representing Peterborough (District No. 191) is one of the 500 delegates who were in Montreal, where the twenty-seventh triennial convention of the International Moulders' Union of North America was held in the Knights of Columbus Hall of that city. The delegates present represent every State in the Union and every Province in the Dominion, with one representative in attendance from far-off Honolulu.

In many respects this gathering of moulders is unusual. It resembles others of recent days in that it has been heartily welcomed by the city which appears to be setting up in rivalry with Toronto as a convention city. Mayor Camillien Houde of Montreal made an appearance at the initial gathering and extended civic felicitations and the leaders of the movement have enjoyed the hospitality of the various service organizations of Montreal. So far as length is concerned, the moulders outstrips all others of this year. The first sessions were held on Monday of this week and it is fully expected that the closing meetings will not be over until the end of next week. The speeches which the Moulders listened to during the first three days were of a type that made others who heard or read them sit up and take notice. John P. Fry, secretary-treasurer of the Metal Trades Department of the American Federation of Labor, who was one of the American Government representatives of the economic conference at Geneva last year, flatly declared that the influx of American dollars into Canadian industry was having the effect of weakening the Canadian allegiance to the British system of handling labor problems and was causing the Dominion to follow more and more the practice of the American employing and governing classes in such matters as securing unjust anti-Labor injunctions. "While there may be some doubt about a constitution following its flag," he declared with great emphasis, "there is no doubt about special privilege following its dollars. Three and a half billion American dollars are invested in Canadian industries and the owners of these dollars are schooling their local organizations along the lines of experience gathered and methods used in the United States." Discussing the question of union organization, Mr Fry declared that he would never obey an injunction which took from the workers rights and priveleges enjoyed by the employing class.

Touching on the wage question, he submitted that while the worker on the American continent was the highest paid in the world, production was greater here than anywhere else, and taking into the consideration the production turned out by the worker, the American was relatively the poorest paid instead of the best.

Matthew A. Wall, a member of the executive of the American Federation of Labor, and representing the President, William Green, of that body, pointed to the post-war economic condition of the world as one of the matters for Labor's serious consideration. Describing present-day reorganization of industry as a second industrial revolution, he pointed to the ever-increasing size of modern combines and their consequent increase in power and prestige as opposed to the corresponding decrease in number of units of production. The day of the individual, of partnerships and even of the small corporation was dead. It therefore, he opined, devolved on Labor to follow similar lines and to study new and efficient fusions.

Canada's Labor problem of the national as against the international union was aired by Miss Mary McNab of the Trades and Labor Congress Journal, who held that anything that had been successful on this continent had been internationally organized. The Kiwanis and Rotary Clubs were cases in point.

A Utopian state, which he declared to be within reach of practical achievement was pictured at the business session by Howard Ross, K.C., of Montreal, who described the plan of the Equitists, which includes a two-hour day of work, with the law of supply and demand unhampered by legislation. Under this scheme, he said, individual initiative would be preserved. Unit money, which, he contended, is the cause of the trouble, would disappear and in its place would be the work-unit money which would make the poor rich and the rich richer. War would disappear with the establishment of this new society. Strikes would be no more. Rents, interest, profit and taxes would be done away with. Individuals would do things and they would do them well with the fear of poverty lifted from their lives.

"The Equitists' plan is the exact opposite of Socialism," he said, "because it believes in property and because it is an individual philosophy. Governments would only be on hand to keep the roads open."

BISHOP DECLARES HIS OPPOSITION

Norwich Has No Part in Bishop's Prayer Book Manifesto.

LONDON, October 1 (Canadian Press).—Bishop Pollock of Norwich to-day declared he was not identified with a manifesto issued by the House of Bishops last Friday, authorizing the use of the second (1928) revision of the book of common prayer under certain circumstances. He has been a consistent opponent of the prayer-book on the ground it was not wanted, and has taken the position that the Church of England Assembly which approved it was not representative of "full Anglican thought."

race. I am afraid that there is a real tendency where there is prosperity to kill that which is spiritual." Comparing the harvest thanksgiving of to-day with that of half a century ago, the reverend gentleman reminded his hearers that when men had to grub from the soil a hard living, as autumn came, they had the real joy of harvest and possessed a wonderful spirit of thanksgiving, but now there is a distinct falling off in the spirit of thanksgiving where things come easy. "For downright thankfulness, commend me to the harvest thanksgiving service in the country churches," Rev. Heywood said in concluding his preface.

A crisp and appropriate message was forthcoming from the text: "Thou preventest him with the blessings of goodness," Psalm xxi., 3. The preacher having given the definition of the word "prevent" as "to go before," said that the Psalmist knew that God went before him. He knew God in the past and in the present but he also knew that God went before him and prepared his way. "We are born into a prepared world, not a world that is hostile but a world ready and prepared for us," continued Rev. Heywood. "The soil has been prepared to bring forth fruitage and it is not a matter of yesterday. God has gone before and prepared the soil that it should produce. Man is warmed by the stores of the forests and mines. Here again God went before us and met our needs in advance. God has ordained that man should be socialable. We inherit the achievements of the ages."

Addressing the youth of the congregation, the preacher enquired: "Do you know that there was a time when boys and girls could not get books to read? Now within our reach are books stored with the wisdom of the ages. Men who achieved have thus handed down the knowledge of their results, and thereby too has come to us the Book of God, which is a lantern unto our feet and a light unto our paths. What is there that has not been prepared by God or either by those inspired of God? Then there is Christ Himself. He described Himself as the Good Shepherd. The shepherd, who was a type of Christ always went in advance of his sheep and never drove them. In the Shepherd psalm we read: 'He leadeth me beside the still waters. He restoreth my soul. He leadeth me in the paths of righteousness, for His Name's sake. Yet, though I walk through the valley of the shadow of death, I will fear no evil, for Thou art with me. Thy rod and Thy staff comfort me.' So then not only in this world's pilgrimage are we led but He leads us through the valley of the shadow of death. Further still are we to be led. Before Jesus left the world, He said, 'Let not your heart be troubled. In My Father's house are many mansions or abiding places. I go to prepare a place for you.' So we are led not only through the valley of the shadow but also unto the other world. Not only for this year's harvest should we be thankful and grateful unto God. This year's harvest is only one instance of God's goodness. We ought to be thankful every day of our lives. Everything we have is a gift from God coming down from the Father of lights with Whom is no variableness or shadow of turning. Then there is God's goodness to us as individuals. What gift, ability or talent is there that we possess that is not a gift of God? It is God's talent for your investment. Sometimes storm clouds come over us, but compared with the glad bright days, such days are few and far between. Clouds of sorrow and distress shall disappear with the advance of God's own glorious light."

The choir, strengthened with the inclusion of members of Deloro choir, sang most beautifully the anthem, "Thou Visitest the Earth" (Caleb Simper), the solo part being ably taken by Mrs. S. C. Boyd.

Hearty services, marked with inspiring messages were also held at Holy Trinity and Deloro Hall, both buildings being prettily decorated within.

years the herd has not been out in as large numbers, although the quality has never been allowed to drop. Then the veteran Ayrshire breeder, William Stewart, had a few head on exhibit, as well as F. G. Hawes, and these three herds made a great deal of competition wit hout any others.

In the Holstein section J. C. Nelson & Sons were showing quite a number and secured most of the firsts, especially in the younger groups, their calves being exceptionally fine.

CROP REPORT

Below will be found a brief synopsis of telegraphic reports received at the Head Office of the Bank of Montreal from its Branches. The Branch Managers have complete and intimate knowledge of each local situation and are in close touch with crop conditions in all sections of the districts mentioned.

Throughout the Prairie Provinces weather during the last ten days has been almost ideal for harvesting and rapid progress has been made. Frost damage is proving to have been heavier than was expected, and there is no doubt that there will be a substantial quantity of low grade grain. Deliveries of wheat at country points last week exceeded 50,000,000 bushels. In Quebec while unsettled weather has delayed harvesting operations returns on the whole are expected to be satisfactory. In Ontario weather conditions have been satisfactory during the past two weeks except in Northern Ontario where almost continuous rains have damaged late grain crops and potatoes. In the Maritime Provinces variable but on the whole suitable harvesting weather has been experienced during the past two weeks and the prospect of good crops still holds. In British Columbia under favorable weather conditions harvesting has been well advanced while threshing now practically completed, shows the grain yields to have been above the average.

Prairie Provinces.

ALBERTA WESTERN AREA—Threshing should be finished in two weeks, with an average yield of thirty bushels and the grades running from two to four but there will be considerable frosted grain. The sugar beet crop is maturing in good condition. ALBERTA NORTHEASTERN AREA—Threshing should be completed in three weeks. The average yield is twenty-five bushels. Owing to frost damage grades are ranging from three to six. ALBERTA SOUTHEASTERN AREA—Most of the wheat is grading two and some one. The average yield is thirty bushels. Threshing is nearly completed. SASKATCHEWAN NORTHERN AREA—Exceptionally fine weather prevails and threshing is proceeding rapidly with about 50 per cent completed. SASKATCHEWAN SOUTHERN AREA—Threshing is half finished and ideal conditions prevail. Earlier indications of a large yield throughout the province are being confirmed by threshing returns. The early cut crop is grading high but a large tonnage of the later crop has been damaged by frosts and is grading number three and lower. Course grains are mostly injured by frost and the yields vary. MANITOBA—Good weather prevailed last week in all parts of the province. It is estimated that fully 60 per cent of the threshing has been completed. The wheat grading largely numbers two and three.

Province of Quebec.

Threshing of wheat, oats and barley is well advanced in most districts and average yields are reported. Corn is in good condition and cutting has commenced. Root crops are satisfactory but in some localities potatoes show evidences of rot. Pastures are in good condition.

Province of Ontario.

Threshing operations are well advanced and Fall wheat and barley are yielding satisfactorily but oats are below expectations. Corn is a much better crop than was at first expected. Cutting has started. Root crops have improved from recent rains. Potatoes and turnips are particularly good. Plums are plentiful and late peaches are very good. Grapes are heavy. Ninety per cent of the tobacco crop has been harvested in good condition. Pastures are good for this time of the year.

Maritime Provinces.

An oat crop above the average in yield and of good quality has been practically harvested. The potato yield promises to be rather above the average. In New Brunswick and Nova Scotia the quality is good but blight may interfere to some extent with the yield. In Prince Edward Island weather has been favorable for apples which are colouring well and are clean, the yield is still estimated at 85 per cent of the five year average. Pasturage is good.

British Columbia.

Roots are doing well and good average crops are anticipated. Tomatoes have suffered frost damage and the estimated yield is put at only 80 per cent of the average. The apple crop is now placed at 120 per cent of average, but scab will lower the grade, especially of the MacIntosh variety. Pasturage while adequate is rapidly drying up.

A BAD BREATH

The odor of a bad breath has an unpleasant resemblance to that of sewer gas, and principally from the reason that they are both caused by decaying food materia. An offensive breath indicates some diseased condition, such as decayed teeth, catarrh of the nose, throat and bronchial tubes, or digestive disturbances.

As has often been delicately hinted at in advertisements, a bad breath is a social and business handicap. It stretches the ties of friendship to the breaking point. A man with halitosis who is courting a maid usually finds that with her, his first kiss is his last. It is impossible to be affectionate to the one who has a barrier of poison gas.

The most unpleasant odors of the breath are caused by some decomposition of organic particles, and are offensive for the same reason as is the flesh of a decaying animal. The breath of a really healthy person has a decidedly pleasant odor, faintly suggestive of mellow apples. The wholesome breath of a baby is a delight to its mother until the child has been given wrong foods to eat.

When there are decaying products in the intestinal tract, the blood is bound to absorb these products and carry some of them to be discharged through the lungs, bronchial and nasal passages. These cases can only be cured by following a cleansing diet until the toxins have been removed. The mouth should be kept clean by frequent washings, and bad teeth should be cared for by dentists.

A foul breath is an indication of internal uncleanliness and is so offensive because it is actually to some extent poisonous to others.

A very good regime for clarifying the breath is to follow an exclusive acid fruit diet for a time. I have an article called "Fasting and Dieting for Health" which outlines the correct regime to accomplish this, and I will be glad to send it to anyone who sends me a large, self-addressed, stamped envelope.

Some foods in themselves, such as onions and garlic, produce a bad breath, and since there are laws to prevent smoking in some public places, I think that some wise councilman could make himself famous by introducing a law to prevent onion eaters from attending picture shows and dances.

One becomes so accustomed to his own bad breath that he ceases to notice it, and unless some kind friend tactfully suggests that he use a remedy for halitosis, he is apt to neglect this important social courtesy.

If you discover that you are afflicted in this manner you should make strenuous efforts to correct the condition.

Questions and Answers.

Question: Mrs. G. K. writes: "I have been troubled with neuralgia for a number of years. For the last few months there has been a stiffness in the leaders in the back of my neck, especially at night. What causes this condition, and is there any remedy?"

Answer: The stiffness in the back of your neck may be caused by some form of rheumatism, by lesions in the cervical spine, or by some faulty posture assumed while you are going your work in the daytime. Abscessed teeth might also cause the facial neuralgia. The remedy would depend upon the cause which must be ascertained through a diagnosis. If you will send me your doctor's report accompanied by a large, self-addressed, stamped envelope (care of this newspaper), I will be very glad to advise you.

Question: B. J. writes: "Please tell me which foods are alkaline forming."

Answer: The fruits and vegetables are all alkaline forming, with the exception of rhubarb, plums and cranberries, which contain an organic acid that is not oxidized by people suffering from acidosis. Cereals, legumes and meats, while they contain valuable elements for the body, are slightly acid forming, and since they contain elements which are valuable to the body, their acidity should be counteracted by using large quantities of alkaline forming foods, being careful however, not to combine the acid fruits with any of the starchy foods. An exception to the acid forming legumes are lima beans, which are alkaline forming.

Question: G. V. N. asks: "Will you kindly tell me the meaning of the word "pneu-mo-hy-dro-per-i-car-di-um?"

Answer: The long name you ask about in your letter refers to a condition caused by the collection of air or gas and serum in the pericardium, or heart covering.

Arrowood, Alta., Oct. 2 (Canadian Press).—Unable to work in the harvest fields owing to rain, a resourceful group of harvesters obtained permission from civic authorities to use the skating rink here recently and gave a concert which was attended by 300 persons. A collection taken up provided funds to tide them over the wet period.

PLOW HAS PLAYED IMPORTANT PART

J. J. Duffus Tells London Kiwanians About Share in Progress.

"The plow plays an important part in everything pertaining to human nature," said J. J. Duffus, Peterborough, past president of the Ontario Plowmen's Association, and ex-mayor of his home town, in an address at the regular Kiwanian luncheon held at Hotel London Friday noon. The arrangements for the day were in charge of the agriculture committee of the club under the chairmanship of Ed. Shuttleworth, and by reason of the Ontario Plowmen's Association international match being held near London on Oct. 9 to 13, inclusive, it was deemed advisable to have members of the association present as guests [illegible] as a prominent member in [illegible].

Mr. Duffus pointed out in his introductory remarks the duty resting upon every man to take some interest in activities apart from his own definite work, and asserted such was necessary for a man to reach the highest standard of citizenship. He also expressed his appreciation of the growing spirit of co-operation which was everywhere manifest between urban and rural organizations.

Reviews History.

In a few words he reviewed the history of plowing matches during the past few decades of the province and of the events leading up to the formation of the Ontario Association, which has grown so that it has become international in its scope and its plowing match is now the largest event of the nature in the world.

By statements which revealed his intimate personal knowledge of the art of plowing, the speaker stressed the importance of this which he characterized as the basal operation of farming and the good execution of which leads to prosperity. He showed also that plowing was governed by soil, climate, crops, etc., as to the time when and the type of plowing which should be done.

Mr. Duffus also spoke of the great exhibits of modern machinery which the manufacturers have at the matches and of the opportunity which it affords those farmers wishing to purchase to see displayed a wide range of the modern labor-saving machinery.

The speaker said: "The farmers are carrying on the greatest enterprise in the world to-day." He pointed out it was more scientific, more complex, and required as much skill in salesmanship as did merchandising, or as the manufacturer required in connection with his operations. "The farmer," he said, "must theorize, he must study labor and the best distribution of material, and also required a knowledge of local and other markets that he might dispose of his produce to the best advantage. This, to my mind," said the speaker, "pictures a successful farmer."

WHY CHILDREN LIE

By Mehran K. Thomson, Ph.D.

(Author, The Springs of Human Action)

An alarmed father came to me not long ago with the complaint that his nine year old boy, Fred, was a confirmed liar.

Fred was supposed to have visited his mother at the hospital but had not done so. Upon being questioned the boy insisted that he had been to the hospital. Nor was he stumped by demands for descriptions of the rooms and other details connected with the hospital he had never seen. He could concoct the most elaborate descriptions on the spur of the moment.

The father was sure that his boy was an incurable liar. Whereupon I congratulated him upon the fact that at least one member of his family had imagination.

Many youngsters have a hard time distinguishing between truth and falsehood. They tell the biggest yarns without consciously lying at all. Fred was not a real liar. He was in the fairy tale stage of his development and loved to adorn his stories. They seemed real enough to him. He deceived himself more than he deceived others. He would not admit telling a falsehood because he was certain he had done no such thing.

This type of so-called lying can easily be detected. It deserves patience and sympathy more than it deserves punishment. The child will ordinarily outgrow it in time.

Adults are sometimes found in this stage of arrested development. They are merely children mentally who have not grown up sufficiently to learn to discriminate between fact and fiction. If this were the only reason why children and some adults lie the situation would not be so bad. Usually children lie for exactly the same reasons why anyone tells a deliberate falsehood—to avoid a licking, to show off, to gain some advantage, to get over an embarrassing situation, to avoid ridicule, to keep from spoiling a perfectly good story, etc.

Not infrequently parents unconsciously teach their children to lie by setting the example. They make promises they never intend to keep in order to pacify the children or they tell wild tales of dangers they know will not befall the child for disobedience. Now shocked and grieved these fond parents are when the youngsters who are apt pupils turn the tables.

MARKETING BOARD EFFORTS MEET GENEROUS RESPONSE

Agent Predicts Great Progress For Canada in Coming Years.

COMPLETES TOUR.

British Imports From Empire Up Two Hundred Millions in 1927.

Montreal, Que., Oct. 2 (By the Canadian Press).—The efforts of the British Empire Marketing Board to encourage the purchase of empire products in Great Britain are meeting with a generous response, said A. Ryan before he sailed for England after a three months' trip through Canada in the interests of the Board. "Travel in Canada is a tonic for any one connected with the advancement of trade within the Empire," Mr. Ryan remarked.

"There is no country in the Empire more certain to startle the world by its progress in the coming years than is Canada," he continued. "Wherever I went from Atlantic to Pacific and back, I found a spirit of robust confidence and a lusty determination to develop wisely and vigorously the still only guessed at riches of Canada.

"It is our job in the Empire Marketing Board to help in furthering the sale of Canadian and all-Empire produce in the old country. So it was most encouraging to find Canadian producers so keen and so thorough. The Old Country is, I think the largest importer in the world and exporters everywhere have their eyes on our markets. But we prefer to buy whenever we can from our fellow-citizens in Canada and other parts of the Empire.

"Statistics show what I mean. Imports from Empire countries to the United Kingdom rose from $1,930,000,000 in 1924 to $2,100,000,000 in 1927—an increase of nearly nine per cent; while imports from foreign countries over the same period decreased.

"The will to buy within the Empire is growing steadily among the men and more important among the women of the old country. Foreign exporters are spending infinite pains and much hard cash to establish their wares rather than those of the Dominions.

"Provided the Dominion products keep level—they need not keep ahead, though they often do—in price and quality, they will capture the market.

"The Board is a British government department set up with an annual fund of $5,000,000 from the old country taxpayer to push the sale of Empire goods in the old country. We do not, by the way, attempt to push the sale of British goods in the Dominions. I have met a number of people in Canada who thought that the Board works both ways. But it confines itself to using all methods of publicity and of research to help the Empire producer in the old country market. The Board is an official reply on the preferences granted by the Dominions to old country exporters.

"There is one thing I would like to add," concluded Mr. Ryan, "the recent decision of the Department of Trade and Commerce under Mr. Malcolm to set up an Exhibitions Branch in England, to advertise Canadian goods has helped the Empire Marketing Board immensely. As the witness of that magnificent and unique show, the Canadian National Exhibition proves, nobody in the world can teach Canada how to make the most of exhibitions."

WORKING THE SHIP

I wonder, when men join a crew,
If that is all they have to do?—
Just what the sailormen would say
If someone happened down that way
And said, "I want to go along,
To join you—but don't get me wrong
I like your ship, I like your plan,
I'd like to join you, if I can,
I think the trip would do me good—
But want it clearly understood
I don't intend to reef or haul,
The rest will have to do it all."

I wonder, when men join a thing,
Why that's the tune that some men sing?
They know how better towns are made,
Associations help their trade,
And so they join—but, understand,
They don't intend to lift a hand.
"I'm sure your plan will bring me coin,
And so, since you insist, I'll join;
But, if some labor there should be,
Of course, you mustn't call on me.
I'll share the profits of the trip,
But I won't help to work the ship."

FISH FROM NORTH BROUGHT TO CITIES

Trout and Whitefish From Lake Athabaska Sold in Toronto.

Winnipeg, Man., Oct. 2 (Canadian Press).—That the map of Canada is being rolled back so far as the economic handling of fish from the northern lakes is concerned is emphasized in the progress being made in the shipment of Lake Athabasca trout and whitefish to such markets as Chicago, New York and Toronto, says the Financial News. The fishing being carried on by two companies at Lake Athabasca, in Alberta, constitutes the most northerly commercial operation in Canada, the extent of which is indicated by R. T. Redd federal inspector of fisheries, who, on his recent return from an inspection trip, stated that 62,000 pounds of trout and 4,000 pounds of whitefish were taken from the lake in the first three days of the summer fishing season.

The excellent quality of the fish from the cold northern lakes of Canada's prairie provinces has met with wide recognition in the large American cities. Speaking of the circumstances under which Lake Athabasca fish are handled, Inspector Redd paid tribute to the systematic and intelligent handling of the large catches of fish.

Eighty per cent of the fish catch is being shipped fresh, packed in ice, the fish barges being towed up the Athabasca river to Waterways, the terminus of the Alberta and Great Waterways railway, where the dressed fish are carefully repacked in ice for the long rail journey to the populous centres of the continent.

You get more heat for your fuel dollar when you buy

Ford Coke

Product of the Ford Motor Company

FORD Coke burns without either soot or smoke. The reason is that the materials in coal which make soot and smoke have been removed. Of course those materials are heavy. And you buy fuel by weight. Ford Coke prevents your fuel dollars from going up the chimney.

Attention twice a day is all Ford Coke needs—morning and evening. It provides all the heat you want whenever you want it, for it responds to control quickly. And once you have made certain how to get the greatest satisfaction out of Ford Coke, you need never experiment further. For the quality of Ford Coke does not vary.

Ford Coke is made in Ford Coke ovens, from coal mined in Ford-owned mines, and is used in the Ford industries. The need for coke of both high and uniform quality—and a coke that would maintain the traditional standards of Ford economy—made it essential that the Ford Motor Company produce its own coke.

A BAD BREATH

The odor of a bad breath has an unpleasant resemblance to that of sewer gas, and principally from the reason that they are both caused by decaying food materia'. An offensive breath indicates some diseased condition such as decayed teeth, catarrh of the nose, throat and bronchial tubes, or digestive disturbances.

As has often been delicately hinted at in advertisements, a bad breath is a social and business handicap. It stretches the ties of friendship to the breaking point. A man with halitosis who is courting a maid usually finds that with her, his first kiss is his last. It is impossible to be affectionate to the one who has a barrier of poison gas.

The most unpleasant odors of the breath are caused by some decomposition of organic particles, and are offensive for the same reason as is the flesh of a decaying animal. The breath of a really healthy person has a decidedly pleasant odor, faintly suggestive of mellow apples. The wholesome breath of a baby is a delight to its mother until the child has been given wrong foods to eat.

When there are decaying products in the intestinal tract, the blood is bound to absorb these products and carry some of them to be discharged through the lungs, bronchial and nasal passages. These cases can only be cured by following a cleansing diet until the toxins have been removed. The mouth should be kept clean by frequent washings, and bad teeth should be cared for by dentists.

A foul breath is an indication of internal uncleanliness and is so offensive because it is actually to some extent poisonous to others.

A very good regime for clarifying the breath is to follow an exclusive acid fruit diet for a time. I have an article called "Fasting and Dieting for Health" which outlines the correct regime to accomplish this, and I will be glad to send it to anyone who sends me a large, self-addressed, stamped envelope.

Some foods in themselves, such as onions and garlic, produce a bad breath, and since there are laws to prevent smoking in some public places, I think that some wise councilman could make himself famous by introducing a law to prevent onion eaters from attending picture shows and dances.

One becomes so accustomed to his own bad breath that he ceases to notice it, and unless some kind friend tactfully suggests that he use a remedy for halitosis, he is apt to neglect this important social courtesy.

If you discover that you are afflicted in this manner you should make strenuous efforts to correct the condition.

Questions and Answers.

Question: Mrs. G. K. writes: "I have been troubled with neuralgia for a number of years. For the last few months there has been a stiffness in the leaders in the back of my neck, especially at night. What causes this condition, and is there any remedy?"

Answer: The stiffness in the back of your neck may be caused by some form of rheumatism, by lesions in the cervical spine, or by some faulty posture assumed while you are going your work in the daytime. Abscessed teeth might also cause the facial neuralgia. The remedy would depend upon the cause which must be ascertained through a diagnosis. If you will send me your doctor's report accompanied by a large, self-addressed, stamped envelope (care of this newspaper), I will be very glad to advise you.

Question: B. J. writes: "Please tell me which foods are alkaline forming."

Answer: The fruits and vegetables are all alkaline forming, with the exception of rhubarb, plums and cranberries, which contain an organic acid that is not oxidized by people suffering from acidosis. Cereals, legumes and meats, while they contain valuable elements for the body, are slightly acid-forming, and since they contain elements which are valuable to the body, their acidity should be counteracted by using large quantities of alkaline forming foods, being careful however, not to combine the acid fruits with any of the starchy foods. An exception to the acid forming legumes are lima beans, which are alkaline forming.

Question: G. V. X. asks: "Will you kindly tell me the meaning of the word "pneu-mo-hy-dro-per-i-car-di-um"?

Answer: The long name you ask about in your letter refers to a condition caused by the collection of air or gas and serum in the pericardium, or heart covering.

But want it clearly understood
I don't intend to reef or haul,
The rest will have to do it all."

I wonder, when men join a thing,
Why that's the tune that some men sing?
They know how better towns are made,
Associations help their trade,
And so they join—but, understand,
They don't intend to lift a hand.
"I'm sure your plan will bring me coin,
And so, since you insist, I'll join;
But, if some labor there should be,
Of course, you mustn't call on me.
I'll share the profits of the trip,
But I won't help to work the ship."

FISH FROM NORTH BROUGHT TO CITIES

Trout and Whitefish From Lake Athabaska Sold in Toronto.

Winnipeg, Man., Oct. 2 (Canadian Press).—That the map of Canada is being rolled back so far as the economic handling of fish from the northern lakes is concerned is emphasized in the progress being made in the shipment of Lake Athabasca trout and whitefish to such markets as Chicago, New York and Toronto, says the Financial News. The fishing being carried on by two companies at Lake Athabasca, in Alberta, constitutes the most northerly commercial operation in Canada, the extent of which is indicated by R. T. Redd, federal inspector of fisheries, who, on his recent return from an inspection trip, stated that 62,000 pounds of trout and 4,000 pounds of whitefish were taken from the lake in the first three days of the summer fishing season.

The excellent quality of the fish from the cold northern lakes of Canada's prairie provinces has met with wide recognition in the large American cities. Speaking of the circumstances under which Lake Athabasca fish are handled, Inspector Redd paid tribute to the systematic and intelligent handling of the large catches of fish.

Eighty per cent of the fish catch is being shipped fresh, packed in ice, the fish barges being towed up the Athabasca river to Waterways, the terminus of the Alberta and Great Waterways railway, where the dressed fish are carefully repacked in ice for the long rail journey to the populous centres of the continent.

200 YEARS OF EXCELLENCE

So delightfully refreshing— they said 200 years ago

"There's naught like a cup of Fry's for refreshment after the shops, my dear," they said in the long ago.

"It does buck one up"—"Just the thing after a hard day or a strenuous game," they say today.

Such have been the comments on Fry's Cocoa for two centuries—from women in many countries—in cottage and castle—in old lands and new.

The wonderful sustaining qualities of this famous beverage come from skilful preparation of the choicest beans. Its taste-tempting flavour is the result of 200 years of "knowing how."

Have you a tin of FRY'S in the house, now? Every dealer sells it. Look for the familiar FRY yellow label—it is a guarantee of the utmost purity and value in Cocoa.

You get more heat for your fuel dollar when you buy

Ford Coke

Product of the Ford Motor Company

FORD Coke burns without either soot or smoke. The reason is that the materials in coal which make soot and smoke have been removed. Of course those materials are heavy. And you buy fuel by weight. Ford Coke prevents your fuel dollars from going up the chimney.

Attention twice a day is all Ford Coke needs—morning and evening. It provides all the heat you want whenever you want it, for it responds to control quickly. And once you have made certain how to get the greatest satisfaction out of Ford Coke, you need never experiment further. For the quality of Ford Coke does not vary.

Ford Coke is made in Ford Coke ovens, from coal mined in Ford-owned mines, and is used in the Ford industries. The need for coke of both high and uniform quality—and a coke that would maintain the traditional standards of Ford economy—made it essential that the Ford Motor Company produce its own coke.

THE WHATNOT

A Place for Little Bits of Everything of Local Interest

By MARION

I HAVE HEARD many women in Peterborough express the wish for a bedside light. "I have always longed to have a bedside light so that I could switch on the light at night without getting up," one housekeeper said.

• • • • • • •

Many times I have overhead women making apologies for their appearance in the evening—saying they had no decent light to dress by. The only bedroom light in the room was not near their dressing table.

• • • • • • •

Housewives ought to know more than they do about the possibilities of electrical work. Much can be done with extension cords and double sockets. Of course this work may not look so nice or finished as nicely as that done by a professional, but nevertheless one may have a light in any place where one is wanted.

• • • • • • •

If there is only one bracket in the bedroom, it is advisable to get a double socket. Get a bulb attachment on a wire long enough to be drawn back to the wall, up the wall and across the place where the wall and ceiling meet, until the middle of the dressing table is reached. Let the bulb end hang down, about 14 or 15 inches out from the wall.

• • • • • • •

At any of our electrical stores little lamp shades may be obtained which make an attractive decoration in the room.

• • • • • • •

In much the same way a wire can be carried to the bedside and arranged so that you might have a bedside light. If you need a long wire, and the one you have on hand is short, take it to the electrician and have it changed for a long one. Cords and new sockets are fairly inexpensive so that with a small sum and some lamp bases you have on hand, you are able to transform your room as far as lighting is concerned.

• • • • • • •

What do you do with the shoulder flowers on your dresses when they look bedraggled? Nothing more detracts from the smartness of a wrap or frock than a soiled, artificial flower. Do you know that they can be revived to look quite fresh again?

• • • • • • •

They may be dipped in gasoline, sozzled up and down, and then left to air until the odor has entirely disappeared.

• • • • • • •

A little red ink will improve immensely, faded flowers with a rose or pink tint. Paint the petals to give the desired effect. These may be painted with a fine watercolor brush. If you have water-color paints, colored flowers may be touched up in this way.

• • • • • • •

Even if you think your flower is too far gone, save it for the good that is in it. If it is a rose, perhaps its yellow stamens and pistils remain in good condition. These hints are useful in making the artificial flowers from ribbon which I ofefred a few weeks ago.

• • • • • • •

Ribbons should be saved. Many pretty ribbons come into the house in a few months. These may be tied around flowers or other gifts—especially around Christmas time when there is sometimes yards of it.

• • • • • • •

A ribbon box where all such ribbons could be saved would be a good plan. Then when you need a piece to make a flower or to trim a doll's dress, you will have your collection to draw from.

• • • • • • •

If you are unable to get iceberg lettuce, buy the Canadian head, separate the leaves and pack them in cracked ice. It will become crisp and just as curly as the genuine iceberg lettuce.

• • • • • • •

Just how frequently windows have to be washed is a matter of weather, exposure and neighborhood conditions. But whether it falls seldom or often, window-cleaning is never a popular job, so says Ann Adam, writing recently in a well known women's magazine.

• • • • • • •

There are various long-handled "Wiperh" that will help, and a fairly manageable ladder will bring the worker within reach of the lower storey windows as a rule; but for the upper ones, nothing short of a steady head will be of any avail.

• • • • • • •

Warm water with a teaspoonful of ammonia to the half-pailful is the usual way of washing the windows, but a few drops of kerosene may be substituted for the ammonia. The best container is a fibre pail, which will be light and easy to handle.

• • • • • • •

Cloths should be lintless; you will require a flannelette duster first, for wiping off the glass, frame and sills; a cloth for the actual washing, or better still a smallish chamois skin; (if you have ever watched the professional window cleaner at work, you will find that this is a part of his secret); a soft old linen towel as the most absorbent of drying cloths and a dry cloth for polishing.

• • • • • • •

In frosty weather, the easiest method is to clean the windows with a cloth wet with alcohol and polish with a dry chamois.

• • • • • • •

This is a season when one will find many placards on houses in Peterborough. There are many who object to being quarantined for three or four weeks. Has it ever occurred to you that a wise and sensible person can see a placard on his house and yet be thankful for three weeks of enforced change

• • • • • • •

Everyone in the house will benefit from this change. No one will be excited over society affairs; those who have lost sleep may catch up and even visiting cousins will remain away.

• • • • • • •

This illustrates that it is a great gift to see the sunny side of an unpleasant situation. We do not see the slimy surface of a stagnant pool when we go out to gather the white lilies; neither should a placard telling of quarantine fail to teach some valuable lesosns or produce some virtues.

APRICOT FLAVOR

If you put a few apricots in with practically any fruit you are preserving now they give a piquant flavor. Halved fresh apricots make delectable salad when filled with cream cheese.

Acid Stomach

Excess acid is the common cause of indigestion. It results in pain and sourness about two hours after eating. The quick corrective is an alkali which neutralizes acid. The best corrective is Phillips' Milk of Magnesia. It has remained standard with physicians in the 50 years since its invention.

One spoonful of Phillips' Milk of Magnesia neutralizes instantly many times its volume in acid. It is harmless and tasteless and its action is quick. You will never rely on crude methods, never continue to suffer, when you learn how quickly, how pleasantly this premier method acts. Please let it show you—now

Be sure to get the genuine Phillips' Milk of Magnesia prescribed by physicians for 50 years in correcting excess acids. Each bottle contains full directions—any druggist.

THE LAST DANCE.

By Clarissa Mackie.

Marion Woods heard the news the week after her misunderstanding with Rolfe Burton—Sadie Smith brought the word, as she always did, of every event in the town, good or bad.

"My dear," said Sadie Smith, "I just came in to talk it over with you—of course you would know all about it."

"If I knew what you were talking about—" began Marion when Sadie burst in with an amazed expression on her chubby face.

"Why——it's about Rolfe—they say he is going to sail for South America the last of the week. Why, Marion, how pale you are!"

"That need not stop your flow of news, Sadie," smiled Marion. "To reassure you, really, I did not know that Rolfe expected to go to South America."

Sadie's large bright eye had flashed to the third finger of Marion's left hand. It was quite bare! Always she had seen Rolfe's engagement ring on the slim finger. Now it was gone!

"I thought you were engaged to Rolfe," she said suddenly.

"Did you?" asked Marion sweetly. "They say that Mrs. Burton will give a party for Rolfe before he sails," went on Sadie. "I suppose you will be there, Marion?"

"I have not been invited," said Marion.

"None of us have, silly. I suppose Mrs. Burton will write notes to us or telephone. Well, I must be on my way—so busy this morning." And she was away. Marion knew, primed with the additional information that as she was no longer wearing Rolfe's engagement ring, the engagement must be broken.

Among those who heard that phase of the affair was Tom Lincoln who was studying law in Judge Carter's office, and he closed his books, attended to one or two important matters and went home early. That evening he called upon Marion Woods.

"It isn't a matter of the law," he said with a grimace on his handsome face, and his deep voice low and rough.

"No?" laughed Marion, for she had always liked Tom Lincoln. Dashing Rolfe Burton had swept in and cut out all the other boys who admired Marion. Tom had buried himself deeper in his law books.

"I came up for air," remarked Tom. "And speaking of frivolty, did you receive an invitation to Mrs. Burton's dance?"

"Yes—this morning."

"I am hoping that you will let me be your escort."

"Thank you, Tom, but father will drive me there. I am very glad that you will be there, though."

"How many dances may I have?"

"Ask me afterwards, Tom. I am usually engaged for the last dance—I think the others are open."

Tom swallowed hard. "Who is she saving that last dance for?" he asked himself savagely, and suddenly before his jealous eyes was a vision of gay Rolfe Burton. Still, Marion was not wearing an engagement ring this evening and Tom took hope.

On Thursday evening Mr. Woods drove his daughter to the Burton house, and, as Marion ran up the front steps, she felt the old thrill that used to come when she went to her first dances—the quiver of uncertainty now that Rolfe no longer protected her.

When she came down stairs and was greeted by a rather cool Mrs. Burton, Marion was charming in a pale green georgette frock with a large pinkish rose pinned on one shoulder. Her fair hair was knotted closely to her dainty head and her great gray-green eyes shone like stars. There was a little rush of young men toward her but Tom Lincoln reached her first, fine, clean cut, handsome and upstanding.

Marion danced every dance, and at times she quite forgot Rolfe who danced a great deal with a pretty, dark-haired girl, Maizie Flather. Once his eyes intercepted Marion's merry gaze and he bowed stiffly, angrily, in response to her gay nod of greeting. Deep in her heart was a little sore spot. Would Rolfe ask her to dance? Would he ask her to dance the last dance just for old time's sake?

She was afraid he would not, but he did come and ask her to dance toward the end of the evening.

As they danced, she could feel the almost savage pressure of his arm.

"I could run away with you!" he said savagely.

"But you won't," she suddenly laughed at him. 'You know that you are angry because I will not marry you at once and rush off to South America with you—I couldn't do that, Rolfe. And I think it must have been the real test of my love. As for you—your vanity is wounded and——"

"May I have the last dance?" he asked roughly.

"I am sorry—" she was beginning when he flung himself away. Marion looked around the room, seeing the whole scene with new vision. There was a sense of freedom that she had not known since her engagement to Rolfe Burton. She had not realized how he had dominated her, and how his proud, overbearing disposition had at last worn her love to brittleness. Now it had snapped, and she was free.

When Tom Lincoln came and asked again for the last dance, she nodded gayly, and under Tom's guidance she found that dancing was a new pleasure. When he put her in her father's car, Tom whispered, "Is this just a dream—or might it happen again?"

And she murmured, "I hope, very often!"

And somehow, the pinky rose from her shoulder found its way into Tom's outstretched hand.

MARION'S MAIL

Address correspondence to Marion, at The Examiner Office.

"Dear Marion:

Will you please tell me through The Examiner the correct way to lay a table not only when company comes but at any time. Also what will take stains from an oak table caused by grease or laying hot dishes on it. Also what causes meat or potatoes to stick when fried in aluminum frying pan.

GREY EYES."

Nothing adds more to the success and cheerfulness of a dinner than an artistically arranged table where harmony of color has been studied, and a pleasing effect is produced to the eye when entering the room.

The best rule to follow in table decoration is to aim at simplicity not to overload a table with ornamentation of any sort and to avoid an appearance of confusion.

Table linen must be white, spotless and of finest damask glass sparkling, silver and cutlery well polished. In laying the table the thick interlining should be spread and the table-cloth laid over it with extreme care, the cloth having been perfectly ironed and folded so the lines will divide the table exactly at right angles. This serves as a guide in placing a centrepiece and arranging covers symmetrically.

It is contrary to etiquette to arrange napkins in fancy shapes. The small silver and cutlery are placed according to the number of courses to be served. The silver and knives must be very evenly arranged, three inches from edge, forks and spoons right side up, the blades of the knives turned toward the plate. Glasses are grouped uniformly at the right, slightly toward the tips of the knives, the covers at the head and foot of the table should be directly opposite each other.

The choice of flowers for the centre of the table is limited only by what may be one's resources. Flowers that are seasonable are always in good taste. Rules to be followed for decorations of the table are simplicity and balance. If a room is simple the table should not have an elaborate arrangement. If the table is long a bowl of flowers in the centre and two bowls of fruit make a good effect. If no flowers can be obtained, an ornamental piece of silver may do the service or fruit may be on a silver dish. Bunches of grapes on color.

There may be two compotiers or a dish with green leaves are rich in dishes holding fruit. Other appointments may be small dishes. Saltcellars with salt spoons and pepper pots stand side by side at the four corners of the table, or within easy reach of every two persons.

The small silver for dessert is never placed on the table when it is being laid for dinner, but is brought with the dessert plates just before serving dessert. A dessert spoon and a dessert fork are brought.

It is not correct to have the table set between meals. It is customary to have everything removed, the table cloth folded and put away. On the table may be a handsome cover, or a linen centerpiece, and a dish of fruit.

When arranging a dining-room it is not correct to have chairs pushed under the table. They are drawn back sufficiently for persons to take their seats easily.

Wood alcohol will remove the stains from your table, but one has to be very careful of its use, because it is so strong that it will take the varnish completely off the table if not used very lightly.

You haven't sufficient grease in your pan when frying meat or potatoes to prevent them sticking.

Whether Lady Cynthia Mosley and her husband, Sir Oswald Mosley, Labor M.P. for Smethwick, England, will accept the baronetcy made vacant by the death of Sir Oswald Mosley is a matter of conjecture. Both scoff at titles. Lady Cynthia is the second daughter of the late Marquis Curzon.

"Amazing—so many women must learn this from others"
—writes a Toronto hostess

The embarrassment of this grave social offense is finally ended. This scientific sanitary pad is now treated by patented process to end all offense.

WHERE smart women gather socially—or in business—even the most attractive are guilty of offending others at certain times. Yet they, themselves, seldom realize it. When told, they become miserably self-conscious. They try in vain to overcome the difficulty by makeshift methods. Now science offers safe and certain relief from this fear.

Kotex now scientifically deodorizes

Millions of women have learned to depend on Kotex within the last ten years. It has brought them better health, greater peace-of-mind under trying conditions. Now comes an added advantage. Kotex chemists have discovered (and patented) a process that absolutely ends all odors. After several years of research, the one remaining problem in connection with sanitary pads is solved.

No more bulky outlines

That awful feeling of being conspicuous because of the bulkiness of old-time methods is gone, too. Kotex pads are rounded and tapered so there is no evidence of sanitary protection when worn. You may add or remove layers of filler as needed—a thing all women appreciate. There is a new softness, because both filler and gauze have been specially treated. Finally, Kotex is so easy to dispose of, eliminating all need of laundering.

Buy a box today, at any drug, dry goods or department store . . . 60c for a box of twelve.

Deodorizes . . . and 4 other important features:
1—Softer gauze ends chafing; pliable filler absorbs as no other substance can;
2—Corners are rounded and tapered; no evidence of sanitary protection under any gown;
3—Deodorizes—safely, thoroughly, by a new and exclusive patented process;
4—Adjust it to your needs; filler may be made thinner, thicker, narrower as required;
and
5—It is easily disposed of; no unpleasant laundry.

YANKEES TUNING UP FOR WORLD SERIES

CARDS READY FOR OPENING

Both Teams Put in Practice in Preparation for Thursday.

COMBS MAY PLAY

(By Bryan Bell, Associated Press Sports Writer.)

NEW YORK, Oct. 2.—(Associated Press).—Pitchers worked out all over the field and batsmen batted line drives against the bleachers and even into the empty seats at the Yankee Stadium yesterday, but the gestures did not mean anything. The Yankees and Cardinals were tuning up for the World Series opening Thursday.

The National Leaguers are set. There is no worry in the St. Louis camp. "Not a bruise in the bunch," was the proud boast of the trainer and the actions of the Red Birds backed him up.

The reverse is true of the Yankees. In spite of optimistic reports as to Combs, the player himself and Manager Miller Huggins while hopeful were by no means certain that he can take his place in centre field for the first test.

Combs was at the stadium for treatment of his injured wrist, instead of practice. Various electrical contrivances were used on it for hours, and he will spend other hours today, baking it, before using it for baseball purposes.

Wednesday he will see the results, and not until then, Manager Huggins indicated, will the Yanks know if their regular centre fielder and lead-off man is to start.

If Combs cannot play, Ben Paschal will take care of centre field and lead-off against left-handed pitchers, with Cedric Durst performing the same functions against orthodox right-handers.

The rest of the Yankee team as a whole is in better shape than during the final drive of the season. Koenig and Ruth have shown distinct improvement and Lazzeri's bad arm is not worse.

The Cardinals will go into the series with the veteran Andy High at third base against all kinds of pitching, and the even more ancient Rabbit Maranville playing short throughout if he escapes injury. Tommy Thevenow is the only infield understudy in Cardinal color, but Roscoe Holm, who was photographed in a group with the outfielders yesterday, can play the infield or even catch if Jimmy Wilson and Earl Smith are cut down.

Manager Bill McKechnie said he planned to make only one shift, depending on the style of pitching offered by the opposition. He will have Harper, Holm and Oratti for right field duty.

At batting practice yesterday Bill Sherdel, Jess Haines and Clarence Mitchell all took a turn on the mound. It was conceded that one of the first two would be called on to pitch the opening game, although the Cardinal manager was reticent.

Henry Johnson, Fred. Heimach and Tom Zachary worked for the Yankees and Waite Hoyt, regarded as the most likely choice of Manager Huggins, bundled up in a thick red undershirt, took a long warming up exercise on the side lines.

HAGEN QUALIFIES FOR HIS SIXTH PRO TITLE

VIEWS ON SPORT

Little World Series play will be resumed at Indianapolis on Wednesday afternoon.

The National league champions consider themselves fit as a fiddle for their coming battles with the Yankees in the World Series. The New York club spent yesterday working all over the field with the batsmen driving liners right into the bleachers. Veterans in the game will take a prominent part on the Cardinal line-up with High and Maranville listed to take up the battle.

Pro hockey has claimed another amateur. Myles Lane, former all-round Dartmouth athlete has signed to play chief defense for the New York Rangers, world's professional champions this seashon. Myles is one of the few college puck chasers considered proficient enough to play pro hockey.

Well wishers throughout central Ontario are offering the Belleville Nationals congratulations as to their victory in winning the senior baseball championship on Saturday. The victory is a fitting climax to the success of the newly organized Central Ontario baseball league.

The Little World Series has been given a lay-off until Wednesday afternoon. Both of the contending teams' managers believed a short rest would do their players a world of good and except for a little practise work to-day they are idle until tomorrow. At the close of the first series Indianapolis lead three to two.

Local fandom will after all experience the thrill of an O.B.A.A. Intermediate final game here next Saturday afternoon, resumed negotiations with the Copper Cliff club yesterday resulting in the decision of the Raybestos Club to bring the Northern Ontario champions here for a sudden death contest.

* * * * * * *

A decision as to which playing field will be used will be made today. Considerable work will be necessary at James Stevenson Park and Exhibition Park to bring about playing conditions suitable for a championship final.

* * * * * * *

The game will be an expensive one for the local club, but as the issue at stake is one that should appeal to baseball fans of the city and district, the Rays are confident that support will be liberal.

The pitching strength of the Copper Cliff club lies in Cloutier a south-paw twirler who gave the Canadian General Club a lot of trouble in their second pennant year of 1923. The Electricians gave him a drubbing at Orillia when he was wild but in the second contest here, Cloutier fanned a dozen batsmen and was downed only after a bitter ten innings battle.

MYLES LANE TO PLAY PRO. HOCKEY

One of Few College Players Considered Proficient for Pro.

NEW YORK, Oct. 2.—(Canadian Press).—Professional hockey yesterday claimed Myles Lane, all-round Dartmouth athlete and one of the few college puck chasers considered proficient enough to play league hockey.

Lane signed a contract to play defense this season for the New York Rangers, world's professional champions.

At Dartmouth where Lane is now an assistant football coach, the Melrose, Mass., star last season captained the hockey team; led the eastern football high scorers with a total of 125 points, and batted an even .400 in baseball team.

Lane is the first American college player to enter the National League hockey ranks, where Canadians provide most of the material. He intends to play professional baseball next spring.

Houston Leading In South Series

HOUSTON, Oct. 2.—(Canadian Press).—Houston's Texas League champions annexed their third victory against Birmingham, Southern Association champions, in the fifth game of the Dixie series yesterday afternoon by a score of 5-4. Showing no effects from the strain of Sunday's contest in which he allowed only 25 men to face him, Bill Hallahan ascended the mound in the ninth inning yesterday in time to cinch the game for the Buffaloes.

Houston needs one more victory to clinch the baseball championship of the South.

DRAWN GAME IN SCHOOL SOCCER

Queen Mary and King Edward Battled For An Hour in a League Game.

TEAMS FAILED TO SCORE.

The local public schools started their schedule under section B last evening at King Edward Park, when the Queen Mary boys played the King Edward team to a scoreless draw after an hour's playing. In the first half the boys played their positions well, then Queen Mary lads got too anxious in their endeavor to get a goal, while their opponents took things easy and finally consolidated their hold to confine the play to the Queen Mary territory. This brought out the defensive tactics of the full backs that lacked confidence in their clearances under pressure. Time and again King Edward forwards broke through to give the Queen Mary custodian all he could do, in fact Joe Watkins at outside right was the star of the game. He controlled the ball with accuray and was always dangerous while in possession of the ball. Half-time arrived with both teams standing at the same score as they started—nil.

Half-time.

On resuming, the King Edward eleven pressed and missed the mark by inches when a little more time would have gained them the two points. The full backs were inclined to stand away back and never come to the assistance of the halves when they were defeated in a close tackle. On one occasion the King Edwards forwards played combination right up the field until they met the stalwart defence, but they got a real fright when Watkins rattled the upright with a lightning drive that bounced back into play which gave the west-end boys a chance to pay a visit at the other end. White, at centre, tried repeatedly to break through, but the heavy weight full backs always gave him the legitimate shoulder to spoil his chance. Both teams worked hard in the closing five mniutes to get the lead, but it never materialized, although King Edward boys had two chances to the Queen Mary boys. Two minutes before full-time White carried the ball where he had only the custodian to beat, but he used the shoulder instead of tapping the sphere past the keeper. Nothing interesting happened thereafter. Full time: no scoring. Both teams get one point each in the league standing.

Section A on Thursday.

The schools in Section A have not started their schedule yet, but they intend opening it on Thursday evening at Nicholls Oval.

This afternoon the Queen Mary and Prince of Wales team played a postponed game that should have been played last week.

Little World Series Played On Wednesday

INDIANAPOLIS, Ind., Oct. 2.—(Canadian Press).—Baseball was taboo here yesterday for Indianapolis and Rochester, contenders for the little world series championship.

Arriving early in the morning from Rochester, New York, where the local team won two out of three completed games, the players were permitted to roam wherever they wanted, so long as it was not out to the ball yard. Both managers Betzel, of Indianapolis, and Southworth, of Rochester, believed the layoff would do their men good.

The series wil be resumed Wednesday afternoon at 2 o'clock, Central Standard time. The Hoosiers will practice to-day while the visitors will get their first feel of the ground at Washington Park in the afternoon.

M'GILL FOOTBALLERS TAKE UP TRAINING

Quality as Well as Quantity Shown in Yesterday's Drill Squad.

MONTREAL, Que., Oct. 2.—(Canadian Press)—Practically all the footballers who have aspirations of making McGill's 1928 football teams are now on location. Yesterday saw lectures begin in all faculties and with the resumption of activities in the classroms, there returned all the tardy candidates who left it until the last day to report in.

There were four full squads out yesterday with a handful left over, two scrimages were going on simultaneously, the seniors versus the seconds at one end of the field and a sort of understudy squad for the seconds and the juniors at the other end of the gridiron.

There was quality as well as quantity in yesterday's drill. Don Young, whose entry to McGill was hailed with high glee Saturday, made his first appearance. Young made his presence felt immediately on the line and the line plungers on the scrub outfit were not long left unaware of his presence. Young's display on the secondary defence in yesterday's drill removed a big burden of worry from the shoulders of the red and white coaches.

Another footballer whose advent was hailed with no little delight and who made his first apearance yesterday was Jack Moar, the former Camp Borden airman who subbed on the McGill senior squad last year.

Moar looks like the answer to the coaches' prayer for a flying wing. Several have been tried at that position and although showing promise have failed to measure up quite to requirements. Moar's appearance just about rounds out the McGill team for 1928, even though the wing positions are still a bit uncertain.

MONTREAL'S HOARY HERO

The 1928 Canadian golf season will soon be making its final fade-out. During the year new champions have come and conquered old ones have dropped out of the running but there is one famous golfer who goes on seemingly forever. He is smiling Charlie Murray, the Royal Montreal Club's genial professional. Charlie might well be called the father, if not the grandfather, of the game in Canada, for he has been clouting the pill these twenty years, since first capturing the Canadian pro title. Since that time he has frequently won the Quebec title, and has tucked away the Canadian title twice. The first of these occasions was when he won it from his brother Albert Murray, who later achieved the same high honor by defeating that dean of Canadian golfers, Geo. Cumming, in 1924.

Of recent years the Canadian championship has, with the advent of outstanding American stars, been much more seriously fought for. Nevertheless the smiling pro. of the Royal Montreals keeps bobbing up always somewhere near if not actually at the top. In 1920 he was tied for the title at Ottawa, while in 1926 he was bracketed for fourth place with the famous Johnny Farrell, present United States open champion. Murray gets in twelve months of golf a year, and in a few weeks when the Canadian season closes, he will be packing his grips and heading for the sunny south, where he will spend the winter on the links of balmy Florida.

HAGEN TAKES 73 IN FIRST ROUND

Equals Par on First Nine, But Drops Behind on Second.

SHOOTS 35 AND 38

FIVE FARMS COURSE, Baltimore, Md., Oct. 2.—Walter Hagen turned in a 73, three strokes over par, for the first 18 holes of yesterday's 36-hole qualifying round of the National Professional Golfers' Association championship tournament, in which he is defending his title.

Hagen made a par 35 on the first nine, but took a seven on the par four tenth. Except for this one bad hole, he played par golf despite the stiffness of the course, coming in in 38.

With nearly all the 18-hole scores in, Hagen's 73 led all the rest with the exception of that of Geo. Christ of Rochester, N.Y., who also had a 73.

SEAT ON PIVOT STEADIES PLANE FOR SAFER FLYING.

By suspending the pilot's seat on a pivot arrangement and connecting it to the ailerons with wires, an Alaskan engineer has developed a stabilizing device for safer flying. The working principle of the installation is that, should the plane go into a dive, the seat would slip forward, pulling the elevators in a position to correct the difficulty. Side slips would be stopped in the same manner, it is claimed, and the stabilizing apparatus is said not to interfere with the ordinary controls.

Babe Ruth Has Grand Total of 470 Circuit Clouts In Big League Career

NEW YORK, Oct. 2.—(Canadian Press).—Babe Ruth's victory in the race for inter-League homerun honors throughout the season just closed marked the ninth time in the last eleven seasons that the big Yankee slugger had finished either in a tie for or in full possession of first place. Back in the war year of 1918, when Ruth was blazing his home run trail, he piled up eleven early in the campaign, and then sat back while Tilly Walker, of Philadelphia tied him. Cy Williams, of the Phillies earned a draw at 41 in 1923.

In 1922 when Babe spent 35 days under suspension, Rogers Hornsby snatched away the crown with 42. Again in 1925 when Ruth was ill Hornsby mounted the crest with 39. Hornsby, Williams and Gehrig stand with Ruth as the only men who ever battered 40 in a major league season, while the Bambino is all by himself in the 50 class and the 60. His grand total for his big league career is 470.

Ruth's 1928 total of 54 marked his fourth season of 50 or more home runs, and while it fell some yards short of his 1927 record of sixty, it enabled him to tie his own 1920 mark—his first Yankee season.

FORTNIGHT TO TO FINISH PLANS

asked to go," charged Ald. Stocker.

"You went the only time we went," answered the Mayor; several other aldermen expressing agreement.

"As soon as Hamilton was appointed chairman, you named him on the committee. I was chairman when you went before. I got the matter settled in the first place," returned Ald. Stocker.

"The School Trustees agreed to pay $100. Why then does the Council object?" asked Ald. Macdonald.

"That agreement was only for one year," the Mayor explained.

"I don't think it fair to charge the Mount $160 when the school pays only $20," stated Ald. Phelan. The Mayor replied that the Mount is occupied twenty-four hours a day for 365 days a year, while the school would be in use five or six hours a day for 200 days. The sewer to the school was built anyway, whereas the connection to the Mount was hard to build and was built specially at high cost.

"They were glad to get it for $100 last year," retorted Ald. Phelan.

The vote was put and Ald. Stocker immediately called for the yeas and nays. Before the vote could be put, Ald. Hamilton asked what was Ald. Stocker's idea in calling for it, admitting it to be his right to do so. Ald. Stocker stated that it was to have a record of the vote, which was as follows:

Yea	Nay
Cotton	Phelan
McIntyre	Stocker
Hamilton	Huffman
Ackerman	Macdonald
Greene
Lowe
The Mayor.

Ald. Ackerman Resigns.

Ald. Ackerman's resignation, which was not accepted, was tendered because his work, for some months now will require him to be out of the city most of the time. While hesitating to resign, when he has fifteen months still to serve, he feels that it would not be fair to the ratepayers to remain in office when unable to give proper attention to the duties.

"I have two regrets in doing so," he continued. "It has been an interesting and educational experience to sit on this board, and I regret leaving my colleagues. I also regret taking this step because I was unsuccessful in the effort to have the city's health department re-organized. I hope the Council will reconsider the health situation."

Ald. Cotton suggested that Ald. Ackerman retain his office for the remainder of the year. While his business might keep him out of the city most of the time, he might find it possible to attend the regular Council meetings, and could be relieved of his chairmanship. He was very sorry Ald. Ackerman could not be present as much as he would like.

Ald. Hamilton supported Ald. Cotton's suggestion. Ald. Ackerman is he said, the type of man needed in the Council, a young man who might be expected to serve the city for many years. Mayor Denne concurred in this, pointing out that there are only two meetings left, and suggesting that Ald. Ackerman resign only his chairmanship until the end of the year.

Ald. Ackerman explained that he was not losing all his interest in municipal matters, but that his business interests will keep him from doing justice to the position for a number of months. At some future date, when things are more settled, he might offer himself again for municipal office. He agreed to retain his seat in the Council but resigned as chairman of the Property Committee and as the Council's representative on the Board of Health, of which he is also chairman. This was accepted on motion of Aldermen Macdonald and Greene.

Ald. McIntyre Appointed.

Ald. Greene immediately moved that Ald. McIntyre, who has filled both positions before, be appointed to succeed Ald. Ackerman, pointing out that his experience would be valuable and that his duties as chairman of the Manufacturers' Committee are not onerous. Ald. McIntyre demurred, wishing to see some other aldermen given a chairmanship, but was declared elected. A few minutes later his name was filled in in the blank in the by-law appointing a successor to Ald. Ackerman on the Board of Health.

Old Home Week.

Ald. Lowe forestalled a motion to adjourn by introducing the matter of an Old Home Week next summer for the third successive meeting. This time he was successful in having a committee appointed, on motion of Ald. Greene, to consider the matter from every angle and report to the Council at a special meeting to be held shortly to be devoted solely to that subject. All the aldermen who expressed an opinion in the matter believed that the people wish to have such a celebration here. The committee consists of the Mayor, with Aldermen Lowe, Huffman and Phelan.

Ald. Hamilton and the City Engineer were instructed to find out how much it will cost to have the assessments made in completion of the survey of the Park Street drain begun by F. T. Webster, O.L.S. This survey has cost the city more than $1,000, a sum which Ald. Macdonald pointed out is more than double the cost of cleaning and deepening the drain. Ald. Phelan responded that if the assessments are made according to Mr. Webster's plan the city will get back most of the money, but the Mayor was doubtful whether the drainage referees would make such a judgment and feared completion of the work would be throwing good money after bad.

By-laws Passed.

By-laws were passed as follows:

2,800—Amending by-law 2,784 to provide for the installation of sewer connections to vacant lots and unconnected houses before the laying of the pavement authorized by this by-law.

2,801—Authorizing the construction of sidewalks on the south side of Murray street east from Monaghan road.

2,802—Appointing Ald. McIntyre a member of the local Board of Health.

On motion of Aldermen Hamilton and Greene, City Engineer Parsons was instructed to build the second diagonal walk across Confederation square and a walk from the drinking fountain to the intersection.

The City Engineer wanted to know what account was to be charged with the necessary $1,200. "Board of Works" was the Mayor's reply, after he had consulted the City Treasurer.

Ald. Hamilton suggested that the expenditure be kept in a separate account, possibly to be paid for out of a special expropriation with the city's grant towards the cost of the monument.

The Utilities Commission will be asked to take down a number of street railway poles which are of no value as they stand.

The use of James Stevenson park free of charge was granted the Raybestos team for the series with Copper Cliff.

Ald. Cotton was authorized to attend the International Fire Chiefs' Convention in Philadelphia if he can get away.

H. C. Huffman and Sons were given authority to erect an illuminated sign on top of the Barrie Building.

The Canadan General Electric Company was granted permission to replace a seven inch water main on Albert street with a twelve inch main. The main is owned by the company but is on the street line.

Eating house licenses were granted to Mrs. Charles Cheu and J. Conway.

There were present His Worship Mayor Denne and Aldermen N. E. Phelan, R. S. Cotton Walter Stocker, H. C. Huffman, Malcolm McIntyre, James Hamilton, G. A. Macdonald, C. H. Ackerman, J. M. Greene and S. A. Lowe.

THE CANADIAN HOMEMAKER

A series of weekly articles covering

PLANING . BUILDING . FINANCING
DECORATING . FURNISHING . GARDENING

(Wright & Noxon, Architects.)

As far as exterior appearance is concerned, this entrancing little home might have been moved bodily from some quiet English byway, where, nestling behind some trimly kept hedge, it had extended its cozy hospitality to more than one generation of some fortunate family.

The designer has realized, however, that, much as we admired such exterior charm, a changed mode of living demands that authenticity yield to convenience and comfort, in the interior. Consequently we have a plan that is absolutely modern in every respect.

Notwithstanding the adaptation of the plan, however, the truly English feature of providing an outlook to the garden from the principal rooms has been retained. Those who appreciate a garden, and most of those who choose this little home would be of such a nature, will not pass quickly by the porch, which may be entered through French doors from either dining- or living-room. What a restful balm it would be after a hectic day "downtown" to while away the evening here, feeling at peace with the world.

The kitchen is planned and equipped to reduce the work therein to a minimum. A grade entrance is provided at the top of which, just outside the kitchen door, is the refrigerator recess.

Passing to the upper floor we find three large, cross-ventilated bedrooms, with ample closet space. A tiled bathroom on this floor, and a two-piece lavatory below, provides the ample accommodation demanded in the modern home.

Erected in Oshawa, Ontario, this home cost $8,000, with hot water heating. It contains about 25,760 cubic feet.

BALANCED ARRANGEMENT OF FURNISHINGS.

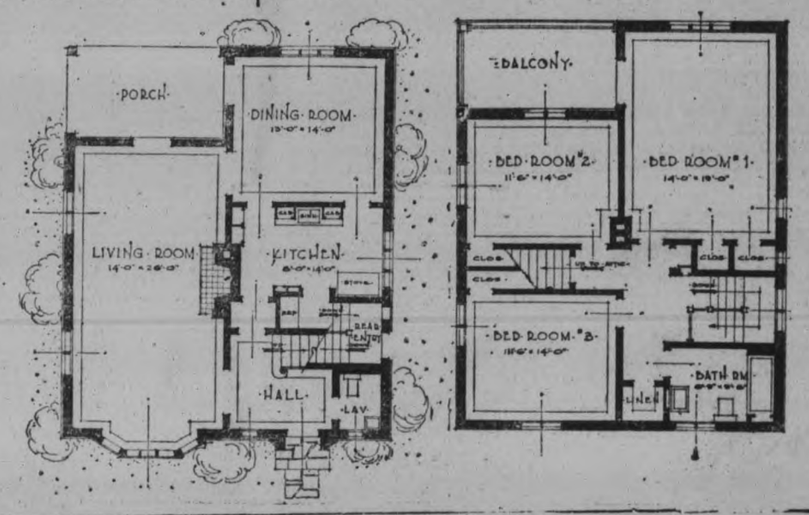
It would be very interesting to gather statistics on the number of pairs of things which have been sold to home owners in the past two or three years. The total of the tabulations would probably be appalling. No home has been thought complete without a pair of candlesticks for the console table, a pair for the mantle place, and a pair for the bookcase.

A friend had been given a fine, pewter candlestick for his apartment. Not long ago he was telling of his long and ardent search for another candlestick which would match the one he already possessed. He was very much disappointed in not finding another, for he wished to use the pair in combination with an old pewter bowl. Asked why he did not use the one candlestick and the bowl, he said that the top of the bookcase would not appear "balanced." Instinctively he sensed the need of a feeling of equilibrium in the arrangement of objects.

Think of your room as a huge teeter-totter. You know that when children of unequal weight wish to balance on a teeter-totter, the heaviest one must be seated near the centre and the smaller child near the end of the board. So, in the arrangement of furniture, the larger pieces must be placed near the center of wall spaces. If it is necessary to place a large piece near the end of the room, a piece of similar size must be placed at the other end of the room to balance it. Or you may group several small pieces in such a way that they appear to be equal in importance to the one large piece.

Weight and size are not the only factors which determine the placement of things in a room to achieve balance. It is the eye or mental faculties which we satisfy with this law or principle, and therefore interesting objects may balance much larger pieces if the larger pieces are less interesting. A small bright spot of color in a small area of pattern may balance a larger area which is more neutral. The feeling of balance lies not in the equal distribution of weights and areas but in the distribution of interest. This is called occult balance.

The balance achieved by the use of pairs of things is very obvious and therefore less charming than the more subtle arrangement of occult balance.—Copyright 1927. The Architects' Small House Service Bureau.



BARRIE'S GIVES FASHION REVUE

Snug Fitting Waistlines Featured in All Dresses Shown.

UNEVEN HEM-LINES.

The most distinct feature of the dresses shown at the fashion revue put on by Barrie's Limited last night at the Capitol Theatre, was the snug-fitting waistline which characterized every dress worn. The sport dresses this fall remain about the same length and are made of jersey in two-piece effect. A very charming one worn last night was of beige jersey embroidered with wool flowers in contrasting colors. Another was a modernistic Golflex in novelty grey, red and blue in pointed effect, the points running to the waistline. A pretty Golflex jersey dress of navy blue and with Roman stripe trim was also shown.

Afternoon dresses as shown by Barrie's were soft and full, just the style for this Fall. Afternoon frocks, particularly as they approach formality, are becoming more and more uneven in the hemline.

Transparent velvet is a very popular fabric for afternoon dresses. One shown last night was a brown transparent velvet with a lace collar extending to the hem and a large bow on the hip. An exceptionally lovely model in black velvet had a two-tiered skirt and a lover's knot of lace button-holed in the front. A hand-painted American beauty and black batik afternoon frock was shown. The dress was of two-piece effect, but one-piece style. The skirt was of black batik running in points to the waist of American beauty. Another model was of henna novelty velvet with satin skirt. A pretty light navy dress was developed in batik, hand-painted in polka dot effect.

For evening frocks, fine filmy tulles, georgettes and satins are popular. There is a decided continuance of the uneven hemline for evening wear. The uneven hemline in many cases formed trailing panels in the back. This silhouette is becoming to a large number of different types and was generally adopted as long ago as last September. Black velvet is very popular for evening gowns. A beautiful model was shown in black velvet with a metallic embroidered skirt and rhinestone buckle. Point De Sprit for evening frocks is considered to be in very good taste. A blue taffeta evening frock was trimmed with red roses and had a large bouffant skirt, uneven hemline and a large bow at the back completed the trimming. A very new idea this fall is the princess, or fish tail back which is developed in both evening and afternoon gowns.

The new stand-up collar and long fur cuffs were featured on the coats shown last night. Fur coats for this season have retained their straight lines, their only difference being in the trimming. Caracul is used a great deal, both for trimming and making the coat in general. Persian lamb, and the many cloth coats are being worn a great deal also. These are trimmed with beaver, fox, kit fox and lynx. Many of the coats shown had novelty linings and were embroidered in pretty designs.

The furniture for the fashion revue last night was kindly loaned for the occasion by Comstock's. Those acting as models for the show were Mrs. H. Borland and the Misses K. Whitehouse, J. Fraser, Maida Connor and Teddy Conner.

At the close of the pageant, bouquets of flowers were presented to those taking part by little Durell Heffernan.

"THE HARVESTER" BY GENE STRATTON-PORTER.

"The Harvester," an FBO picture adapted for the screen from the late Gene Stratton-Porter's novel of the same name, now at the Regent Theatre, with a cast of players who truly bring to life the characters of the book, so long familiar to a wide circle of readers.

Further adding to the realism of the picture is the fact that it was produced under the direction of Leo Meehan, who is the son-in-law of the author, and through familiarity with her ideas was enabled to select players who exactly typified the characters she had visualized.

Heading the cast, in the title role of "The Harvester," is Orville Caldwell, who has alternated between screen and stage for the past seven years, and who is perhaps best known through his appearance for 2½ years as The Knight, the leading male role in Morris Gest's great stage spectacle, "The Miracle."

Appearing opposite Caldwell in "The Harvester" is Natalie Kingston, formerly principal dancer at the Winter Garden in New York, lately featured opposite Harry Langdon in many pictures, and more recently seen as leading lady for Milton Sills.

Jay Hunt, veteran actor and director on both stage and screen, and well remembered for his playing of the title role in the screen version of "Lightnin'," appears as Dr. Carey, and the role of the brutal Jamison is in the hands of Will Walling, another veteran with a record of 37 years as an actor.

Other well known players who are members of "The Harvester" cast are Lola Todd, Edward Hearn and Fanny Midgley.

SHAREHOLDERS APPROVE UNION

Canadian Woollens Meeting Votes Unanimously For Merger.

TO COMPLY WITH LAW.

MONTREAL, October 1. — A further step to meeting the legal requirements towards sanctioning the formation of the various constituent companies into the Dominion Woollens and Worsteds, Limited, was taken on Thursday by the shareholders of Canadian Woollens, Limited, at a special meeting in Montreal held in accordance with the order of the Supreme Court of Ontario. The actual question of approval of the step was settled as long ago as the month of June when the shareholders of the Canadian Woollens, Limited, met for that purpose in Montreal, but yesterday's meeting was necessary to fulfil the requirement of the law of Ontario.

Yesterday's meeting resembled that of June in that the decision was unanimous. Of the 15,000 shares preferred stock and 17,500 shares of common stock outstanding, there were voted 11,937 shades of preferred and 11,919 shares of common, these being present in person or by proxy.

One more step has still to be taken before the deal is finally closed as far as the law of Ontario is concerned. The report will be placed before a judge of the Supreme Court of the Province who will give his signature ratifying the arrangement as being in accordance with the law's demands.

In exchange for their holdings in Canadian Woollens, shareholders of that company are to receive shares in the Dominion Woollens and Worsteds as follows: For each share of Canadian Woollens preferred, holders will receive one share of preferred and one of common in the new concern and the common shareholders will receive share for share.

According to A. O. Dawson, president of the company, Canadian Woollens have had a satisfactory year, the financial position being greatly improved with bank loans practically wiped out. He expressed himself in optimistic terms as to the future outlook of the company.

Amalgamation with the R. Forbes which was also acquired by the Dominion Woollens and Worsteds Limited is now almost complete, formal legal confirmation being now all that is needed to effect the final stage.

The textile industry both in England and in Canada is now on the upgrade, says George R. Bulmer, cotton expert from Bradford, England, who is now in Montreal.

The collapse of the high prices which had prevailed until 1920 worked havoc with the cotton trade, he declared, some of the mills in Lancashire, England, for generations a home of the industry, never having recovered from the economic blow. France, he says, has developed into a factor to be reckoned with by the manufacturers of woollens on both sides of the Atlantic.

KIND ACTS REPORTED.

Junior Humane Society Holds Regular Meeting in Parish Hall.

The Junior Humane Society met in St. John's Parish Hall on Thursday, with Vice-President D. Howson in the chair. The opening song was "The Marching Song." The pledge followed.

Mrs. E. S. Martin then spoke about proper conduct at meetings, and expressed regret that at one or two of the last meetings certain members did not act as they should have done. The members resolved that in the future they would do all in their power to make the meetings popular and interesting.

The song, 'Ring the Bells of Mercy,' was then sung by the members, Mrs. Martin at the piano.

The roll call showed a slight improvement in attendance, there being nineteen present.

Miss Lily Bull favored the meeting with the song, "Dare to do Right." Mrs. James Chandler accompanied her on the piano.

The chairman then called for reports of kind and cruel acts. Miss Vera Kilcher reported having stopped a boy from torturing a toad.

Master Bill Wheeler stopped a boy from beating a dog, and Don. Howson interfered with a boy racing a dog against a boy on a bicycle.

Many members asked Mrs. Chandler about the proper care and treatment of pets, etc.

Miss Lily Bull then asked permission to read a letter from the president, Freida Kilcher. Miss Kilcher expressed a desire to retire from office, giving various reasons for her desire. It was moved by Warren Turner and seconded by Lily Bull, that Miss Kilcher be asked to reconsider her resignation. The motion was unanimously adopted, although one member expressed the belief that Miss Kilcher was quite determined to resign.

Mrs. Chandler was asked to confer with the president.

The meeting closed with the National Anthem.

INDIGESTION, GAS AND SEVERE PAIN

Of the thousands of people whom Tanlac has saved from the misery of Indigestion and Stomach Trouble, none are more grateful than Mr. Fred Hill, 349 Thames St., London, Ont. "I had about given out altogether," he says, "and was going down hill so fast that I thought nothing could stop me. I ate only two light meals a day and even then suffered untold agonies from indigestion, gas and pains that just doubled me up. My nerves were wrecked; every bone in my body ached; I could not sleep; and just felt sick all over.

"Tanlac fixed me up so I could eat anything from soup to dessert without having indigestion. All my other troubles vanished like smoke. I picked up twelve pounds and never felt better. I never thought anything could do for me what Tanlac did."

Tanlac corrects Stomach Trouble and builds up the whole system because it is nature's own remedy for the sick—roots, barks and herbs. Remember, your money back if it doesn't help you; so get a bottle at your druggist's to-day.
